NOISELESS PLANES FOUND IMPOSSIBLE AT WRIGHT FIELD

ROAR, 99 PER CENT CUT, YET LIKE SUBWAY TRAIN

Sound-Proofing of Airplane for Comfort of Passengers Most to Be Hoped For.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Science may do much to bring about an age of silent machines, but at present it appears "the only completely silent airplanes ever to be achieved will be those on the ground with the engines shut off."

This is the conclusion of Maj. F. H. Coleman, chief of the equipment branch, material division, Army Air Corps, who describes experiments at Wright Field in which some progress has been made toward the silent airplane—but not much.

He says the difficulty is that "the number of decibels in a given noise is equal to 10 times the logarithm of the ratio of the energy producing the noise to the energy required to produce a noise barely audible."

Cost in Energy Heavy.

In simple words, he means that to reduce the noise 10 per cent the energy producing it must be decreased 90 per cent.

Thus two airplane engines might produce 100 decibels of noise. With one of them cut off, the noise still would remain near 97 decibles, instead of 50 as might be expected.

A decibel, by way of further explanation, is a unit of noise, an ordinary conversation amounting to about 35 or 40 decibles, and an ordinary military airplane about 110.

Thus far efforts at Wright Field, according to Maj. Coleman, have resulted in elimination of 99 per cent of the total sound energy. But that means only a reduction in 20 decibels at cruising speed, which still leaves the airplane louder than a subway train.

Sources of Noise Production.

Principal sources of noise production about an airplane are the engine exhaust and the propellor, with the tip speed of the propeller the biggest factor.

Exhaust silencing for gasoline engines has been an object of experiment for 30 years. The difficulties may be illustrated by the fact that a muffler of the type effective on automobiles would have to be the size of a 25-gallon barrel to hush a 500-horsepower airplane motor.

A muffler combining back-pressure and tortuous passage principles was built at Wright Field, however, in cooperation with commercial concerns, and found to be moderately successful.

Regarding the propeller, Maj. Coleman says, "When a propeller with the widest, thinnest blade, turning at the minimum practical tip speed, is employed, the ultimate has been achieved in noise reduction."

Propeller Most Promising Field.

In this connection, the controllable pitch propeller is regarded as the most promising field for further noise elimination.

Maj. Coleman points out that one type of plane can be flown with the same throttle setting and at about the same air speed at from 1,100 to 2,000 revolutions per minute with a controllable pitch propeller.

When he adds that reduction of propeller noise may be conservatively estimated at 2 decibels per 100 revolutions per minute, the possibilities of this type propeller may be guessed.

Thus far Wright Field experiments have been confined to reducing noise energy, the source of noise. They have not taken into account what may be done by engineers in soundproofing airplane cabins for the comfort of the passenger.

Favorable Trade Balance in Reich

Is About Half That of 1931 Imports Reduction Is Pointed Out.

Berlin, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Germany's favorable trade balance for the year just ended is indicated at 1,200,000,000 marks (roughly $300,000,000), about half that of 1931, Germany's banner export year.

By reducing her imports to 66 per cent of the preceding year, the country was able in a measure, to modify the effect of an export shrinkage to 55 per cent for the 1931 totals.

Officials figure for the first 11 months of 1932 show Germany imported 4,235,700,000 marks worth of foodstufs, raw and processed wares against an export trade of 5,248,300,000 marks. Unofficial estimates including December estimate the favorable balance at the 1,200,000,000 mark figure compared with 2,478,900,000 for the preceding year. In 1927 an unfavorable balance of 3,425,600,000 marks was recorded.

Continued Moratorium On Irrigation Approved

(Associated Press.)

The bill to continue for a year and a half the moratorium on debts owed the Government by Federal irrigation districts was approved yesterday by a joint House and Senate Irrigation Committee.

The measure sponsored in the Senate by Senators Carey (Republican), Wyoming, and Thomas (Republican), Idaho, and in the House by Representative Chavez (Democrat), New Mexico, was amended on motion of Senator Bratton (Democrat), New Mexico, to fix the interest rate on deferred payments at 3 per cent.

Air Prayer

Japan's Envoy to League Sends Radio Plea to His Mother, 90.

Mitajiri, Yamaguchi Prefecture, Japan, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Each day in good weather a 90-year-old mother goes to the little shrine in the village of Bofu, near here, to pray for her son, Japan's spokesman in the controversy between China and Japan over Manchuria.

She is Mrs. Yuko Matsuoka and the son is Yosuke Matsuoka, who was born in Bofu 52 years ago. While the son traveled widely and gained world renown, the mother has spent her entire life in the little village.

Recently an Occidental development, the radio, brought to the aged mother the voice of her son, speaking from Geneva to the Japanese nation.

At the end of his speech he digressed into personal matters, saying: "Letters from home say that my old mother, in spite of the cold, goes to the shrine every morning to pray for my success.

"This worries me," he added, "for I fear the cold may affect her health."

The aged mother, now, instead of going to the shrine in all kinds of weather, has consented to go only when the weather is good.

The Japanese people, deeply sentimental concerning the relations between mother and child, were greatly impressed by Matsuoka's concern for his mother.

ARGENTINA GROWS IN WORLD AFFAIRS

Yrigoyen Isolationist Policy Discarded for Cooperation by President Justo.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—An active foreign office is bringing Argentina forward rapidly toward the place in continental and international counsels which the country shunned for so long under the isolationist influence of Hipolito Yrigoyen.

Most of the time since the World War Argentina has avoided contact with the affairs of South America, Pan-America or the world. The revolutionary government which displaced President Yrigoyen in 1930 abolished that policy, and the administration of President Augustin P. Justo, which will be a year old on February 20, is striving to attain the international position which it believes the nation should occupy.

Here are the steps Argentina has taken or is taking under Foreign Minister Saavedra Lamas:

Promulgated a South American antiwar pact supplementing the Briand-Kellogg treaties and making more forceful a continental agreement for amicable settlement of such quarrels as the Chaco struggle between Paraguay and Bolivia and the Leticia controversy between Colombia and Peru.

Paved the way for Argentine membership in the League of Nations, which now needs only the approval of the Senate. Argentina may receive at once a nonpermanent seat on the league council.

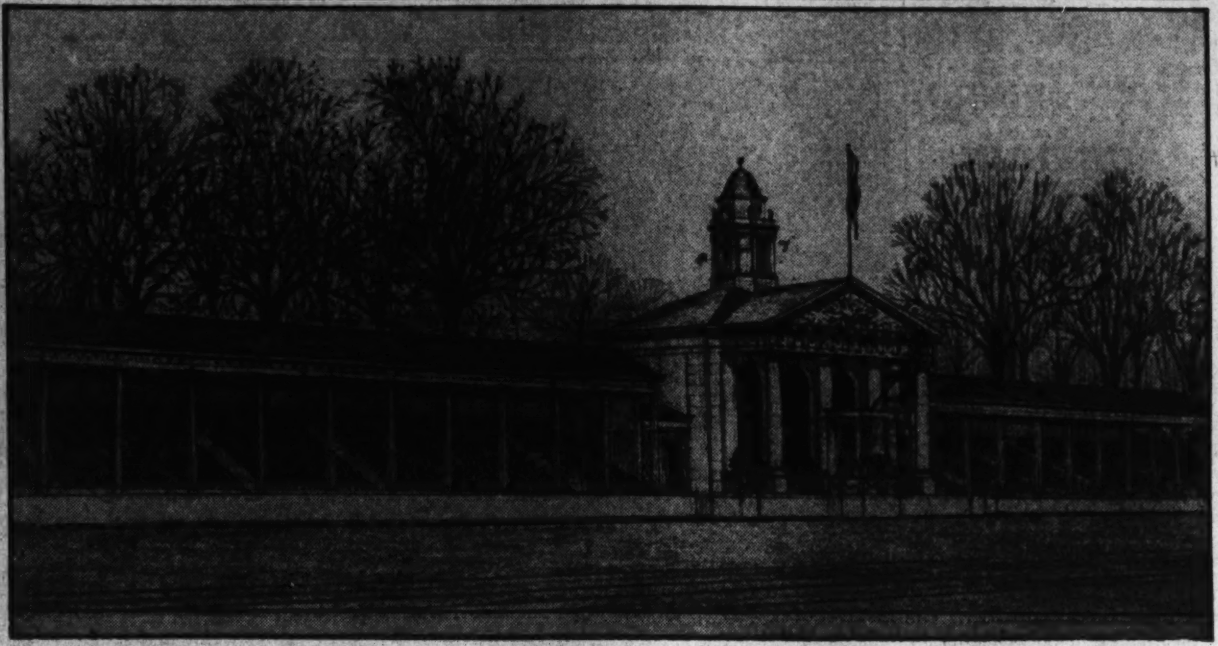
Has taken active interest in the work of the neutrals' commission seeking to settle the Chaco controversy and now that the neutrals seem to have reached an impasse, is sounding out the belligerents on a new conciliation conference in Buenos Aires, under Argentine sponsorship.

Has arranged a conference between President Justo and Provisional President Getulia Vargas, of Brazil, to be held early in 1933, to talk of cooperation in continental affairs, and to project a trade treaty. A trade agreement might prevent recurrence of such blows to Argentine grain growers as the recent coffee-wheat barter between Brazil and the United States.

Has designated a commercial mission to Great Britain to negotiate for friendly treatment of Argentine wheat and meat exports, planned a similar mission to Italy to widen the outlet for Argentine meats, and taken steps toward reciprocal trade treaties with Greece, Germany and Uruguay.

Arranged a modus vivendi with Chile which ended a tariff war and permitted reopening of the Trans-Andine Railway, closed early in 1932 because Argentine cattle exports to Chile had ceased. A permanent trade treaty will soon be signed assuring Argentina a permanent outlet in Chile for wheat and meat.

HOW INAUGURAL PARADE REVIEWING STAND WILL LOOK



An architect's drawing of the Presidential reviewing stand from which Franklin D. Roosevelt will review the inaugural parade. The stand is a reproduction of Federal Hall in New York, where George Washington took oath of office as the First President. The drawing was made by Waddy B. Wood, Washington architect.

MARCH 4 REVIEWING STAND PLANS MADE

Court of Honor to Be Built Along Lines Similar to Federal Hall.

The court of honor from which Franklin D. Roosevelt and his distinguished guests will review this year's inaugural parade is to be constructed as a reproduction of Federal Hall, from the portico of which George Washington took the oath of office when he was inaugurated for the first time in New York. Announcement of the form and character which this year's reviewing stand is to take was made yesterday by Waddy B. Wood, chairman of the committee on decorations and stands for the Roosevelt inauguration.

Mr. Wood, who designed the court of honor for the Wilson inauguration and on that occasion chose Monticello as his model, has selected this year the building equally famous in the early history of the United States. Federal Hall at the time of Washington's first inaugural stood near Broad and Wall streets in New York City. The only building of that period which is still standing is Trinity Church. The central portion of Federal Hall and the cupola which surmounted it are to be faithfully reproduced in the customary position immediately in front of the White House. The structure will have a glass-inclosed and heated section in front of it which will be used in the event of bad weather. If the day is clear and warm this portion of the stand can be removed.

There will be room for 300 persons in the President's stand. The two sections immediately adjoining the reproduction of Federal Hall on either side, and which will be reserved for distinguished guests, will hold 750 persons each, so that a total of 1,800 persons may be seated in the central portion of the court of honor. The additional stands in this group, which will run from East to West Executive avenue on both sides of Pennsylvania avenue, will accommodate approximately 10,000 additional spectators.

Mr. Wood's committee hopes this year to do away with the tall stands which have heretofore been constructed in the neighborhood of the State and Treasury Departments and substitute low-covered stands. The idea behind this proposal is to permit the free movement of spectators behind the stands. Special decorative features, including cedar trees about the Presidential stand and around the White House driveway, also are contemplated.

Conventions Pay New York Millions.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—During 1932, some 750,000 persons came to New York town to attend conventions, spending approximately $50,000,000, the Convention Bureau of the Merchants Association reported.

Around the Town

WITH THE STROLLER.

I Cover the Waterfront.

EVERY city in the world that is touched by a body of water larger than a mosquito pond, must have a Water street. Sometimes they call it Front street, but it's Water street under the tar. Water streets are made in mile lengths and then chipped off and sold to American cities. They have the same robust odor from here to Teneriffe, declining in both vigor and vice the farther they get away from the ocean.

Washington's water street starts at the foot of Fourteenth It extends about a mile, changing its course now and then to conform with the vagaries of the river. It is more than mildly picturesque. It is the city's kitchen door, through which flows a constant procession of perishable goods ranging from celery to swordfish, from mollusks to oleomargarine.

Pavements are perpetually damp. Traffic is crushing in the very early morning and at night; when the rest of the city is lighted and alive, the area is populated only by patient and weary cats. But we are concerned with early morning, when the slate gray Potomac lies dormant nearby and the air is filled with honking, gear-grinding and the unintelligible parlance of produce market employes.

Men shout orders into telephones. Husky stevedores trundle hefty boxes and barrels out of trucks and into warehouses, out of warehouses and into trucks. There are unending streams of men with squeaky trundling carts. The early stretches of the street, from Fourteenth to Eleventh, is narrow and hazardous. The ample posteriors of huge trucks are backed up to the curbs and the market front completes the hemming-in process. The pavements are littered with quantities of foodstuffs. One huge refrigerated bus unloads luscious red strawberries, grown in Florida.

Men are ruddy-faced, beer-bellied and bargaineers from 'way back. Women take shrill orders over the telephone. Cats stalk majestically back and forth.

At Eleventh one passes into a complete block dedicated to the great American fish and the equally notorious American oyster. Glassy-eyed denizens of the deep stare philosophically at passers-by. There is a gusty odor. Herzog's old oyster bar. A dock given over to ratty oyster barges, whose owners dig them up, sail them up to Washington, husk and hawk them from the dock and haggle with patient policemen about the mooring site.

The most hackneyed word in the water-front verbiage, outside of the standard American profanity, is "fancy." Evidently it is against the articles of the produce dealers' union tc erect a sign over a member store without pronouncing in large gilt letters his vegetables or fruit or chickens, hams, ducks, rabbits, fish or oysters—fancy.

I wonder why the flimsiest structures in Washington are at the water's edge and exposed to the gnaw of that element? . . . that broad-backed old scow, the Fire Fighter, with its perpetual steam up . . . the Morgue is as funereal an edifice as the world can probably boast of . . . If ever I am completely shot or something and am being carted with due honors to this building I shall call upon my reincarnated life-to-be and refuse to enter until they paint it another color . . . What are the duties of the harbor police? . . . What's the speed limit, bub?

The Charles Macalester, grand old veteran of the excursion trade, sits in its stall and puffs like an old man on a pipe. It breathes memories of preprohibition days when church excursions used to snort down to Marshall Hall for a ride on the then-terrifying coaster dip, and the crew would stand by to roll beer barrels to the opposite side when everybody would rush to the rail to watch Mount Vernon come and go.

The stretch between Fifth and Third hasn't changed in nearly a century. The Occoquan wharf fence has the wave of age in it. The Forsberg iron works looks as though it supplied pig iron for the war with Mexico. And so, into the War College with its stately Georgian homes and its vast stretches of fairway, in the middle of which is an ancient old administration building where Mrs. Surratt was hung for the never-satisfactory reason that she ran the boarding house down near Sixth and H streets, in which John Wilkes Booth, her son, and several others plotted the death of President Lincoln.

Maj. L'Enfant is generally credited with the feat of laying out the most mathematically beautiful city the world knows, but it would be difficult to convince a visitor of that—if he comes into the city by way of H street northeast. He proceeds along H street until Fourth street northwest when he suddenly finds himself on Massachusetts avenue, and then at Seventh street finds that he's on K street. Without much hesitation his path becomes known as New York avenue, at Ninth and remains that all the way up to Fifteenth, where is becomes Pennsylvania avenue, and later on, up at Twenty-eighth street, M street.

There is no more intriguing building in Washington than the barricaded old Russian Embassy, on Sixteenth street next to the Racquet Club. Bare wooden planks nailed over its great Renaissance windows give the place the appearance of a grand old duchess whose blindness has failed to dim her eminence. It is in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian.

It is said that priceless hangings, tapestries and so on rot and fall inside the palace; that inlaid floors buckle and that the cellar is a dusty paradise of an imaginative epicure.

Russia's representative in Washington now, whose duties are fundamentally commercial rather than diplomatic, lives in more Soviet-like simplicity at 1637 Massachusetts avenue.

NEUTRAL CITY-STATE PLANNED IN BELGIUM

Economic Advantages Would Enable Country to Pay U. S. Debt, Is Claim.

Brussels, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A neutral city-state, to be called "world-city," is projected for the site on the left bank of the Schelde, opposite Antwerp, with which it is now joined by the new vehicular tunnel under the river.

Among many economic advantages for the European world which this plan envisages, the author proposes that through it Belgium could pay her war debt to the United States.

The plan is the work of Paul Otlet, chairman of the Union International Associations. It has not yet been presented to Belgian authorities.

World-city, which harks back in conception to the free cities of the Hanseatic League, would concentrate international agencies of commerce, industry and communication within its confines. Quarters to accommodate business representatives and bureaus of many countries would be provided.

World-city in close touch with busy Antwerp, would also be within direct reach of the sea by way of the Schelde.

Its purposes would come within the scope of the Delaisi plan (for economic equipment of eastern Europe by means of international funds) and thus would become part of an international scheme to fight unemployment, Otlet argues.

United States participation in the plan could make world-city the headquarters of American economic and sociopolitical activity in Europe, it is suggested.

The method by which Belgium could pay her war debt through world-city without transfer of gold or goods to America is explained this way:

Belgium would contribute the money in question to world-city and world-city would pass on the equivalent to the United States in the form of special bonds.

Redemption and interest on the bonds, in turn, would be managed through sale of real estate within world-city and by taxation on property here.

Rainfall at Aberdeen Held Exceeding Noah's

Aberdeen, Wash., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The deluge that made Noah a sailor does not impress a young Sunday school student here. When his teacher told the story of how the world was flooded after 40 days and nights of rain, the skeptic said, "Why, it's been raining here all the time for more than three months and it's not flooded yet."

Aberdeen's official rainfall for 1932 was more than 111 inches, a record.

Old Race

Light on Origin of Mankind Likely From Find in North Africa.

Tripoli, Tripolitania, North Africa, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—An Italian scientific expedition has returned from the Arid Fezzan region with a story of finding traces of an ancient people whose civilization existed "in the night of prehistoric centuries."

Lidio Cipriani, biologist and head of the party, is planning a second trip to continue the research that led to the discovery. He said he hopes to uncover facts that will throw light on the origin of mankind.

Inhabitants of the Fezzan, he said show unmistakably that the district was invaded at one time or another by all the people of Northern Africa. Among them, however, are two tribes with physiological characteristics that distinguish them from all other races.

These tribes are the Berberi and Tauregh groups, which inhabit some of the most remote oases. Like the other tribes of the Fezzan, Signor Cipriani said, they show a mixture of various existing branches of mankind, but the mixture has not been sufficient to obliterate the original features.

Italy recently strengthened her hold on the Fezzan, which forms part of the Sahara Desert, by administering a sound defeat to rebel tribesmen who infested the region.

CHILEAN HERO ENDS UNREST IN NORTH

Naming of Gen. Vignola as Head of Army Greatly Eases Tension.

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Appointment of Gen. Pedro Vignola as commander-in-chief of the army has greatly eased the tension in the restless northern provinces, where unemployment and hunger have stalked across the burning pampas ever since the crash of the nitrate and copper markets.

Gen. Vignola is the north's hero. It was he who led the victorious revolt of Antofagasta Province against the de facto government of Blanche, and helped reestablish a civil regime in Santiago for the first time since Juan E. Montero was forced out of La Moneda Palace by Carlos Davila and Col. Marmaduke Grove.

The first division of the army has always been one of the best drilled and loyal of the Nation. Its officers havt taken an interest in public affairs in the northern cities, and have helped establish a full cooperative feeling among the civilian elements, something which has been almost impossible in many other regions of the republic.

After the northern revolt, the temporary government promised not only more provincial participation in the central administration, but a closer contact on a personal basis through the appointment of more northerners to major posts.

Gen. Vignola's appointment is in line with this policy, which has been adopted by the Alessandri government. He will try to weld the army together into a loyal nonpolitical unit having nothing to do with "personalism and extremists of all sorts. His appointment has brought great rejoicing in the north, and the situation there, which was grave for a time, is now stabilized.

"I have always stood staunchly for the constitution, and when we took the stand we did in Antofagasta against the illegal regimes we were only trying to give the constitution back to the people and end the sad, heartless experimentation, the personalistic grabbing of power," said the general in discussing his appointment.

"I can assure the Chilean nation that we are now back on the road to peace and contentment, and strife will be a thing of the past."

Flu Forces Lily Pons, To Cancel 3 Concerts

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Owing to a weakened condition after an attack of influenza, Lily Pons, opera and concert singer, will not be able to fill three engagements scheduled for next week, the singer's manager announced today.

LEGISLATURES PLAN HEAVY BUDGET CUTS IN WESTERN STATES

Nebraska Is Setting Pace, but Iowa Is Arranging for $25,000,000 Slash.

CORNBELT FARMERS' IRE HAS PROFOUND EFFECT

Lopping State Officers' Salaries 20 Per Cent in $8,000,000 Minnesota Program.

Chicago, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Ire of Midwest farmers against adverse economic conditions has set legislators of corn-belt States to diligent paring of budgetary demands.

Throughout the territory, which lately saw the so-called "farm strike" swing at reduced farmer incomes and foreclosure resistances and tax-sale postponements and assail heavy farm-debt burdens, measures are being shaped to slice millions of dollars from expenditures. They aim at shrinking outlay to fit within reduced State incomes.

Nebraska, dominated by Democrats in both houses of its assembly, has set the legislative pace for its neighbors. But Iowa, if its lawmakers, assembled last week, follow recommendations of an interim tax committee, will attain a Midwestern economy mark. The committee has profferred recommendations it estimates will save Hawkeye taxpayers $25,000,000 a year.

Governor Starts Economizing.

Gov. Clyde Herring, Iowa new Democratic chief executive, made a start in economizing by cutting off $252,400 in annual expenditures in his first week in office. The interim committee has urged on the Legislature a schedule of mandatory tax cuts, elimination of levies, reorganization of departments and salary reductions throughout the State-employed personnel to bring about the huge saving.

The Nebraska Legislature has speeded its session's work until it is already three weeks ahead of its 1931 predecessor, as its first contribution to economy. Gov. Charles W. Bryan has submitted a biennial budget calling for $11,096,000, which is $3,462,000 under the 1931 figure. Of the 60 bills offered by lawmakers, proposals to reduce interest rates and taxes and effect economies predominate.

Minnesota legislators already have before them a bill to cut the budget $8,000,000. A measure is to be introduced lopping State officers' salaries 20 per cent.

$75,000,000 in Sales Tax.

Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois proposed last week sales and income taxes to reinforce levies which have been strained to meet heavy unemployed relief outlays. Proponents of the sales tax assert a 2 per cent levy would send into the treasury as much as $75,000,000 annually to ease property taxpayers' load.

While the North Dakota Assembly has not taken definite reduction steps as yet, it has before it Gov. Langer's recommendation for a cut of $3,000,000 in the State appropriations as of two years ago and drastic parings are promised as they are in South Dakoto. Bills in South Dakota's legislative hopper would eliminate the State's sheriff office, cut the number of State employes, reduce all salaries controlled by the Legislature 25 per cent. Means are being considered in sales and income levies to lighten the general property tribute.

Proposed expenditures for Wisconsin exceed expected receipts by $12,000,000, and the State is faced with a possibility of having to raise $8,000,000 for unemployment relief. Gov. A. G. Schmedeman, another Democratic executive, has held lengthy budget hearings, but has not yet disclosed his plans for striking a balance.

Wind Keeps Plane In Spot Half Hour

Craft Over Hudson Appears to Be Motionless in Bucking Air.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—"Hey! There's an airplane standing still out over the Hudson River." Dozens of such telephone calls poured into newspaper offices.

Somewhere around Fourteenth street, out over the river, was a plane headed for Newark, apparently motionless. Sometimes, when the velocity of the heavy wind increased, it appeared as if the plane was pushed backward.

Witnesses said the plane remained in the same spot for half an hour. Airplane line officials said such was possible by adjusting the motors in the face of heavy winds.

New York City at End Of Its Cash Reserves

New York, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—The City of New York has again reached the end of its cash reserves and is unable to meet obligations other than the semimonthly pay roll, due today.

The board of estimate has authorized an issue of $6,334,000 in assessment bonds to retire the same amount in maturities due the last of this month. The city's new financial difficulties, according to Comptroller Charles W. Berry, are due to the large amount of uncollected tax assessments now totaling $139,000,000.

Former Kaiser's Cold Gone.

Doorn, Holland, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm has recovered from a heavy cold and is now in fairly good health. Recent reports that his throat trouble had become worse and was causing anxiety to his family were denied.

Marriages and Divorces Decrease in Hard Times

Increase, However, When Times Are Good, Census Bureau Shows; Marriage Rate in U. S. in 1931 Was Lowest in 44 Years; Divorce Rate Up.

(Associated Press.)

Figures of the last four years seem to support the contention of sociologists that both marriages and divorces tend to decline in hard times and increase in good times.

In the boom year of 1929 there were 10.14 marriages to every 1,000 of the population of the United States, and 1.66 divorces to every 1,000. In 1931 there were 8.55 marriages and 1.48 divorces to 1,000 people.

Analysis of census statistics reveals, however, that the decline in marriages was so much greater than in divorces that the proportion of divorces granted to marriages contracted has increased steadily since 1929.

The Census Bureau in its annual report on marriage statistics says it is a well-known fact that the marriage rate responds quickly to changes in economic conditions, increasing in periods of prosperity and decreasing after a commercial crisis or during hard times.

It cites the striking decline in 1894 as reflecting the influence of the financial panic of 1893, and similar decreases in 1908, 1921 and 1922. But it points out that falling off of the marriage rate in recent years has been to some extent a natural regression from abnormal conditions growing out of the World War, tempered somewhat by the change in the economic status of women.

While the marriage rate for 1931 was the lowest in the 44 years of computation by the Census Bureau, it was only .12 per 1,000 people lower than the rate for 1887. In fact, the rate in the 1920-1930 decade was higher than in any other 10-year period except 1910-1920.

The divorce rate, however, has increased tremendously in the last 40 years. In 1887 there were 5.5 divorces granted to every 100 marriages contracted. In 1931 the ratio was 17.3 divorces to 100 marriages. At the beginning of this century the proportion was 7.9 to 100.

Census bureau specialists say that while the annual ratio of divorces to marriages gives an approximate measure of the increasing likelihood of divorce, the number of divorces granted in any one year per 100 marriages in the same year does not indicate exactly the percentage of the marriages of that year will probably terminate in divorces.

Raising Salamis Fleet Is Doubted

907 Persian Ships, Sunk 2,413 Years Ago, in Too Deep Water.

Athens, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Greeks scoff at the idea that an Italian company can succeed in raising the 907 Persian ships sunk in the battle of Salamis 2,413 years ago.

Italian salvagers, they admit, raised the galleys of Caligula in the Lake of Nemi, but they did it by draining the lake. An Italian company also fished up a Venetian galley sunk in the harbor of Rhodes 400 years ago.

But there is a big difference, archeologists here assert, between this work and the job of bringing the fleet of Xerxes to the surface. The Bay of Salamis is of great depth, while, they say, Lake Nemi is comparatively shallow.

What with the salt water, the tides, the seaweed, and the time that has elapsed since B. C. 480 it is probable, experts here say, that all traces of the mighty Persian armada which the Athenians sank are gone. It would be much better in the opinion of Athens archeologists, to fish up the money sunk with the Turkish and Egyptian warships at the battle of Navarino 105 years ago.

French Ocean Flier Delayed.

St. Louis, Senegal, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Jean Mermoz, flying from France to Buenos Aires, said today that bad weather and rain here would delay the resumption of his trip for at least 24 hours and perhaps longer.

Bells Will Usher In Roman Jubilee

600 Churches to Welcome Nineteenth Centenary of Christ's Death.

Vatican City, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—The bells of 600 churches in Rome will ring tomorrow, ushering in the proclamation of a jubilee year by the Pope at 11 a. m., in honor of the nineteenth centenary of the death of Christ.

Prelates of the papal court, headed by Mgr. Enrico Dante, will visit the Pope's apartments and receive his permission to read the papal bull proclaiming the holy year. After receiving the apostolic benediction, the procession will pass through the Vatican halls and descend into St. Peter's to the central portal, where a pulpit has been erected.

Mgr. Dante will ascend the pulpit and announce to the world the bull, containing a list of ceremonies for the holy year and the rules for the granting of indulgences, which will be applicable to pilgrims visiting Lourdes (France), Rome and Palestine. It was understood the bull would reiterate the reasons for proclaiming this a jubilee year, during a time of crisis, and exhort the faithful to pray for Divine help to overcome the grave difficulties troubling the world.

Cuban Envoy Returns Tomorrow.

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Oscar Cintas, Cuban Ambassador in Washington, who has been here since mid-December, will leave for the United States Monday, he said today.

Berlin to Open Gas Cellar Built for Use in 'Next War'

Populace, Police and Firemen Will Be Drilled This Week in What to Do If Poison Attack Should Be Made; Preparations Elaborate.

Berlin, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Berlin, in common with other German cities, is preparing for defense against a possible gas attack from the air in the "next war," and in the coming week will open its first official gas cellar with general gas protection drill.

The Stahlheim, war veterans' organization, already has equipped the cellars of a Berlin brewery for protection against gas attacks, but the official cellar will be the first to be equipped by the city. It is supposedly the first of many such asylums which patriotic organizations would like to see designated and established throughout the city. The location and some details are still secret, but it is supposed that the cellar and each of the others to come, will shelter several hundred persons.

The room is equipped so it can be hermetically sealed against outside air by sandbags, sand and boarding prepared in advance to fit the windows and to be sealed with felt. Water and oxygen supplies for 48 hours are stored, as well as food for one day. There is an auxiliary storage battery system for lightning, although light and water are ordinarily to be taken from the building above. The ceiling is strengthened by heavy timber props to prevent a cave-in if the building collapses under bombing.

Telephone and radio connections are installed in a small ante-room, which is hermetically shut off both from the cellar and the outside.

The gas protection maneuvers are planned to take place in a busy section of the city. First to be tested will be the warning system, through telephone and radio. All doctors are to consider themselves immediately mobilized. The fire department will make runs in the endangered section, putting out fires supposedly started by bombs.

The police, wearing gas masks, will take charge of the section most severely affected by the imaginary attack and scatter a special chemical preparation in the streets that will destroy gas lying close to the ground. That will be followed by liquid fire which will develop an intense heat quickly, so that the rising warm air will carry the gas upwards.

Then the maneuvers will be carefully checked to decide whether the section has been "saved" and to discuss improvements.

Tunney Pays $30,000 to End Suit

Promoter Claimed 25 Per Cent of Earnings of Gene.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Tim Mara's suit against Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight boxing champion, for $500,000 has been settled, the New York promoter announced today. Mara has agreed to drop the suit on a cash payment of $30,000 to be made next week.

Retrial of the suit, brought by Mara on claim for 25 per cent of the former champion's ring earnings, was scheduled for next week. The case was tried originally here two years ago and resulted in a verdict for Tunney after much sensational testimony delving deeply into the inner workings of the big league fight business.

Appellate Court Ordered New Trial.

This original verdict later was reversed by the appelate court and a new trial ordered on the grounds that letters from Tunney to Mara, allegedly confirming the promoter's claim that Tunney had agreed to give him 25 per cent of future earnings for gaining Gene a title match with Jack Dempsey, were not admitted as evidence.

"The lawyers have been dickering for weeks," said Mara, owner of the New York Giants professional foot ball team, and a boxing promoter, "and I have signed a release of all claims. Tunney is ill and payment of the $30,000 to me has been deferred until next Thursday or Friday."

Mara's case was based on his claim that he had agreed to use his political and other influence to persuade Tex Rickard to name Tunney as Jack Dempsey's opponent for a match in 1926 in return for a percentage of the fighter's future earnings.

Tunney claimed that no contract had been made and that Mara's aid had been invoked only for a match to take place in New York.

Prominent Figures Testified.

During the testimony prominent political figures, including a former New York State Governor, unnamed, and James A. Farley, former head of the New York State Athletic Commission and now chairman of the Democratic national committee, figured in the evidence.

The maneuvering of Tex Ricard, promoter of both Tunney-Dempsey bouts, provided highlights in the evidence, as it was shown through telegrams and letters exchanged with both warriors that he tried to convince each man the other couldn't fight.

Mara, who once offered his lawyers, for themselves, any judgment that could be obtained, just so that his suit was vindicated, explained today the payment of $30,000 on Tunney's part justified his claim.

"In these times," he said, "that's a lot of money for Tunney or anyone else to pay. All I wanted was vindication. Now I've got it."

50,000 See Cricket; Australia Trailing

Adelaide, Australia, Jan. 14 (A.P.). Australia will resume her first innings against England in the third test match Monday, faced with an uphill fight against fine British bowling.

While a crowd of 50,000 cheered them on, the Australian batsman today halted England with 341 runs for their first inning, but then made a poor showing against the bowling of G. O. Allen and Harold Larwood in the start of their first, losing four wickets for 109 runs.

With the two English bowlers in fine trim the four leading Aussie batsman—W. M. Woodfull, J. Fingleton, Don Bradman and Stan McCabe—fell for the slim total of 38 runs, with Fingleton bowled for a duck and Bradman being caught after knocking up only 8 runs. The next two bastmen in, W. H. Ponsford and V. Y. Richardson, made a brave stand and were 45 and 21, respectively, not out, when stumps were pulled for the day.

SPORT PROBE DEMANDED IN SOUTH

Conference to Adopt More Rigid Code; Asks "Clean-Up."

By FRANK H. FULLER.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Charging that flagrant recruiting and subsidization of athletes, together with low scholastic standards, existed in Southern colleges, the Southern Conference today asked an investigation and drastic steps to prohibit such practices.

The Southern association of colleges and secondary schools was asked to institute an investigation in every school in its jurisdiction and to adopt a regulation to withdraw standard college rating from schools found guilty.

C. P. Miles, athletic director of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and president of the conference, hailed the action as "the most far-reaching and progressive legislation ever promulgated by an athletic conference" and asserted athletics in the South would be "cleaned up" if the conference recommendation was accepted.

Issue Squarely Before College Officials.

"Its effect will be to put it squarely up to the administrative authorities of the universities and colleges of the South as to how they want athletics in their institutions conducted," Mr. Miles said in his prepared statement given out after the executive session in a small hotel parlor. "To make the administrative heads and educational authorities responsible for athletics is our aim."

The action was practically the only business of the final day of the meeting, and it followed upon changes in the conferences by-laws which will require a student to pass four-fifths of his college's work, where the minimum load is taken, in order to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics. Heretofore the rule has been that the athlete must live up to the scholastic requirement of his particular school, and the revision means that many of the conference members must raise their requirements.

It was asserted today by William L. Mapel, director of the Lee School of Journalism at Washington and Lee, that the conference requirement was more rigid than that of any of the member institutions with the exception of Clemson College, South Carolina and Virginia Military Institute.

The resolution asking the investigation asserted that the fundamental purposes of education are not being served "under conditions known to be prevalent in certain institutions," and that on the contrary wrong principles were being inculcated in students by examples of subterfuge and deception.

It set forth that athletics are valuable only in so far as they serve fundamental educational purpose, namely, to develop leaders of the highest type.

College Champ Enters Milrose Mile Feature

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Glenn Cunningham, national collegiate A. A. mile champion and Olympic team member from the University of Kansas, has sent in his entry for the classic Wanamaker mile in the Millrose A. A. indoor track and field games in New York February 4.

Handicapped by weak legs, the result of a school fire when he was a youngster, Cunningham sprang into prominence overnight last summer when he won the N. C. A. A. mile title in the meet record time of 4:11.1, the second fastest time, ever made outdoors and the fastest by a college runner. He ran fourth, the first American to finish in the Olympic 1,500 meters.

Cunningham is expected to meet Gene Venzke, Wanamaker mile winner last year and holder of the indoor record of 4.10, and other outstanding Eastern competitors at the distance.

Wrangle Due Over Tennis Rankings

List Suggests Names of First Ten Were Pulled From Hat.

Delegates to Annual Meeting May Not Approve Ratings.

By HENRY McLEMORE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Those of you who enjoy an old-fashioned scrap might do worse than be on hand February 11, when the delegates to the fifty-second annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association are asked to accept the 1932 rankings as issued today by the ranking committee.

The line-up of the men's and women's singles is, to borrow a phrase from the French, slightly haywire. The more one studies the two "big tens" the more one is convinced that the committee, once they had named such obvious players as Ellsworth Vines and Helen Jacobs, resorted to the old business of pulling names out of the hat.

There's little fault to be found with the ranking of the first three on the men's list, Vines, Allison and Sutter. But the other seven—Wood, Shields, Stoefen, Mangin, Gledhill, Van Ryn and Jones—well, there are going to be some kicks.

Frank Shields Still Most Handsome.

Wood was off form all year. Only in the East-West matches, where he was within one point of whipping Vines, did the New Yorker flash the form' that made him the scourge of the courts the year before. And Shields, while he still is far and away the most handsome of the players, failed to play championship tennis here or abroad

The giant Stoefen was probably surprised to find himself rated above Mangin and Gledhill. We were. For Lester, while he had his moments, was hardly the sixth best player in the country last year. The committee undoubtedly was swayed by the Californian's defeat of the talented Jiro Satoh in the nationals.

How the committee got around to placing Jones above George Lott is another mystery. With a tremendous service as practically his only weapon, Jones was decidedly an in and outer. When his first ball was landing, Jones was okay When it wasn't, Freddie the fireman could beat him.

Forgot Lott's Victory Over Parker.

Lott was given the No. 11 slot, marking the first time the Chicago internationalist has been out of the big ten since 1926. The committee probably felt that a man who was defeated four times by Frankie Parker couldn't be so hot. They apparently forgot that Lott whipped Parker at Forest Hills, when the stakes were high.

The women's rankings are all right—if you don't read past Helen Jacobs in the No. 1 peg. There can be no doubt that the committee was correct in refusing to rank Mrs. Helen Wills Moody because of "insufficient data" and awarding Miss Jacobs the post of honor. But how on earth did they arrive at placing Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper second, ahead of Caroline Babcock? Miss Babcock not only was runner-up to Miss Jacobs in the nationals, but eliminated Mrs. Harper in straight sets in the fourth round. Mrs. Harper actually should have been fourth, with Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter, who was given that place, third.

Miss Cruickshank Flattered.

Josephine Cruickshank was fifth, with Virginia Hilleary, Alice Marble, Mrs. Johnny Van Ryn, Virginia Rice and Marjorie Sachs following in the order named. Miss Cruickshank, who failed to get past the third round in the nationals, should rate behind the first four to follow her. Incidentally, Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, who trounced Miss Cruickshank at Forest Hills, drew eleventh place. You figure that one out.

Old Stateville's Eleven Is Winner

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The honor of old Stateville—Illinois State Prison to outsiders—was redeemed today without any dangerous long end runs; that is, end runs outside the gray walls.

Stateville's football eleven, led by one "Tuffy" Lynch, who piled up notoriety as somewhat of a burglar, drubbed the Caberry (Ill.) "All Stars," 12 to 6. A lot of the credit went to "Tuffy," who managed to hide the ball in the old manner he once cached valuables from inquisitive police. Lynch, a new recruit, stole the game with a right end run in the third period.

Three weeks ago Stateville and the Caberry village team had played to a scoreless tie.

Word of the Stateville victory was flashed to police in Chicago. It might have been more or less of a warning so they would keep open eyes in the event some Stateville grads might celebrate too much tonight.

Bobby Jones Tours New Augusta Course in 69 With Five Birdes

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Robert T. Jones, jr., president of the Augusta National Golf Course, went out today and put the finishing touches on the three-day celebration of the opening of the club by blasting out a 69 on the par 72 layout.

Mr. Jones, as president, had spent two busy days shaking hands and running hither and yon making sure that all the folks were having a good time. Today he became Bobby again, the world's greatest golfer, and lugging out his old war clubs, brought gasps from the gallery as it added up his score. He had made it all look so easy.

Bobby was playing with Don Mackay, Frank Willard and Hunter Marston, all of New York. He shot birdies on all four of the par 5 holes, added another birdie on a par 3 and went 1 over perfect figures on two holes where the card calls for fours.

Bobby's card:

SCHOLASTICS MAY DOUBLE GRID LIST

Athletic Head Urges 2 Meetings Each; No Other Games.

A RADICAL plan whereby public high school football teams would meet one another twice in their annual championship series and forego games with other school elevens, was advanced last night by John Paul Collins, chairman of high school faculty advisory committee. Apprised of the idea, coaches of the teams offered a variety of comment.

"I think it would sustain the interest in the series and make for a closer race if the teams played one another twice," Collins said. "Every team has a sufficient number of players to withstand the rigors of such a program. It would enable tie games to be played off and eliminate the possibility of teams winning the title on breaks. Our boys are in good physical condition and they have the benefit of good coaching, and I do not see why the plan would not work."

Charles A. Hart, principal of Eastern, favored the plan provided the season would not be extended beyond the first week in December.

Hardell Opposes Idea.

Hap Hardell, Tech coach, opposed the idea on the grounds that football is too strenuous, and secondly, because the school has had some pleasant relations with out-of-town schools which he believes should not be discontinued.

Dan Ahern, of Western, did not approve of the idea. He summed up football as essentially a game of plays and stated that a second game would result in a battle of brawn rather than brain. Ahern suggested the schedule of the series be arranged to bring the two strongest teams together at the end of the season to sustain the interest.

Roosevelt's Lynn Woodworth favored the move and suggested that more boys be taught the game through the medium of leagues governed by players' weights.

Bert Coggins, of Central, was noncommittal, other than to admit the scheme might work. He pointed out that it could not be placed in effect next season because of schedules already arranged.

Charley Guyon, of Eastern, could not be reached on the telephone.

PARRACK ACE IN G. W.'S VICTORY

Scores 29 Points in Defeat of Loyola Five, 55 to 41.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 14.—Loyola's attack scored sufficient points to defeat an ordinary basket ball team tonight at Evergreen, but George Washington, the opposing quintet, is beyond such a classification. The Colonials, a tall band of swift passing players, experienced in the intricacies of the game and confident in their height and ability, rolled along to a 55-to-41 victory.

In Wick Parrack, George Washington presented a scorer who accounted for as many goals as one team will make in a similar game. He sank 13 from the floor and made a perfect mark in his three chances from the foul line.

Loyola made the first three points of the game, but was immediately overhauled, and George Washington then set in motion its scoring machine. The baskets were monotonous to the Loyola rooters as the Capital marksmen pumped shot after shot into the hoop.

G. W. Uses Height to Good Effect.

Keeping only two men in back court, confident that their height would get the ball on rebounds, George Washington was able to have three in position for fast breaking, and, though Chief Bender, defensive mainstay of the home team, performed in herculean fashion, no single player was equal to such a task.

Unable to work plays against the high order of guarding, Loyola was reduced to outside shooting in the main, and the total scored by the home team is indicative of the success enjoyed in this difficult undertaking.

Early in the contest, Oscar (Ox) Wickham, 240-pound center, who started for George Washington, suffered a ruptured thigh muscle when he plunged into the bleacher seats behind the end line in a scoring attempt.

The defeat was the first experienced by Loyola this season.

Max Baer Is Sought By Process Servers

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Max Baer, heavyweight fighter who aspires to the world championship, remained in seclusion tonight as process servers sought to notify him officially of a $250,000 breach of promise suit filed by Olive Beck, waitress.

Miss Beck claimed Baer jilted her when he married Dorothy Dunbar Wells, former actress, during the summer of 1931. In support of her claim, Attorney Crozier Culp exhibited one of several love letters she said Baer had written her.

Endearing terms appeared in the letter and Miss Beck was advised to "do some reading so she could meet people and hold conversation."

"You want to forget the present and start thinking of the future and the wonderful sights you haven't seen and people you'd never dream of meeting," the latter said.

IRISH CAPTAIN ENGAGED.

MARYLAND U. BEATEN BY GENERALS

Washington-Lee Wins Thriller, 43 to 40; Fields Is Star.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 14.—In a game that featured two evenly matched basket ball teams, scrapping every minute for every point, Washington and Lee gave Maryland its second defeat of a two-night invasion of Lexington tonight, score 43 to 40. Both teams kept within striking distance of each other, and neither team had a lead larger than seven points at any time.

Maryland drew first blood and tallied four points before the Generals succeeded in breaking into the scoring column by dropping in a foul. Cy Young's team then drew up apace with the Old Liners, and after tying the score at 6-all took a two-point lead, which it maintained throughout the game, with the exception of several minutes at the conclusion of the first half, when the score was 19-all.

Generals Gain Six-Point Lead.

Fields opened the second half with a field goal and a foul goal for the Generals, and Sawyers followed close on his heels with a goal and two foul goals to give Blue and White a 6-point lead which it maintained until the game was almost over. Five minutes before the final whistle the visitors started a last minute rally that brought the score to 40-41 in favor of the Generals, with 8 seconds to play. Henthorne then dropped in a long shot for his only score of the game as the whistle blew to make the final score 43 to 40.

Sensational playing on the part of both teams had the 1,000 spectators on their feet yelling during the entire game. Using quick breaks and man for man defense, both teams fought hard for each score and the ball see-sawed up and down the floor as result of good passing. Scrapping over possession of the ball at all times brought 17 personal fouls on the heads of the Generals and 16 on the Old Liners Fields, who dropped the ball in from all angles, counted 7 field goals and 3 out of 6 foul tries to lead the scoring with 17 points. Sawyers dropped in 4 field goals and made 6 out of 9 fouls to total 14 points, while Vincent led Maryland dropping in 3 field goals and making 7 out of 11 foul tries to score 13 points.

Colgate to Curtail Athletic Program

Hamilton, N. Y., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A policy of retrenchment in athletics for the remainder of the college year was announced today by the Colgate University Athletic Council, which described it as a "sensible and sane program without abandoning any sports."

The baseball schedule will be played and perhaps will include informal series with Syracuse and Cornell, both of which have dropped the sport for this spring. Track will be continued although the number of men sent to the Penn relays and the intercollegiates will be limited.

Golf and tennis teams will compete only in informal matches. Two lacrosse games will be canceled and the sport continued on an intramural basis.

BROOKS MEETS TARS.

Brooks Club will play host to the Naval Reserves in a game this afternoon in the Gonzaga High School gym at 2:30 o'clock. A preliminary game will be played at 1:30 o'clock.

Babe Didrikson Is Given Cue Lesson, Trailing by 200 to 27

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Babe Didrikson, all-around athletic star from Texas, today made her second appearance as a professional, this time at pocket billiards, and was defeated by Ruth McGinnis, of Honesdale, Pa., 100 to 14 in 26 innings.

"I don't want any more of this," Babe said as she walked away from the table after completing the first block of series of four she and Miss McGinnis will play through tomorrow.

The Pennsylvania girl, who has been playing billiards since she was 7, was the complete master of the Babe, having runs of 16, 15 and 14 as compared to the cluster of 5 Babe put together for her best effort.

In the second block tonight Miss McGinnis, of Honesdale, Pa., defeated Babe, 100 to 13, and gained a lead of 200 to 27.

Miss McGinnis turned in a high run of 14 and again dominated play

Miss Didrikson made her first professional appearance last night in a basket ball game where she scored nine points to lead the scoring as her team won, 19 to 16.

N. Y. Pro Refuses to Crack, Wins With 287 Total.

Mangrum's Great Finish Ties Wood for Third Money.

By WILLIAM WARNE.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A young but experienced golfer, Paul Runyan, won the $7,500 fourth annual Agua Caliente Open, scoring a victory over par and a select list of professionals here today with a 72-hole total of 287.

A thrilling rally on the last nine accounted for the 2-stroke margin by which the 24-year-old pro from Arkansas and White Plains, N. Y., trounced his pal, Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., who played in the same threesome and was the runner-up.

Runyan was tied for first at the end of the third day with Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., who had won open tournaments at San Francisco, Pasadena and Los Angeles before the Western winter trail led him here. They had totals of 217, and Horton Smith was two strokes behind them.

Smith's 34 Gains Lead.

At the end of 63 holes at noon today Horton had moved into the lead, with Runyan, by virtue of playing the first nine in 34, and Wood had fallen back a pace in the race for the $1,500 first prize money, turning the corner in one over par, 37 strokes.

Runyan led off and Horton followed him on the tenth tee. They played the hole in 4, par. Runyan made a par 3 on 11, but Horton missed a putt and was one behind. On 12 they both took birdie 4s, and on 13 had par 4s, but on 14 Runyan sank a 20-footer for a birdie 3 and moved two ahead of Smith. Smith lacked a foot of tying it up on the fifteenth with a near hole-in-one, when his drive stopped just 12 inches short of the cup. He took a birdie 2, and Paul got a par.

Both gladiators were nervous on the last three, but Runyan managed to play them in perfect figures, while Horton took bogie fives on the sixteenth and the eighteenth, when his putter went on a strike, and one trap got in the way.

Meanwhile Craig Wood was trying futilely to match the subpar pace set by the pair. He toured the first nine in 37 and the last to even par for a 73—290 and a tie for third place.

Mangrum Makes Comeback.

Young Ray Mangrum, the Texan from Los Angeles, made a marvelous comeback today to tie with Wood, whose uncanny putting yesterday broke the 22-year-old's heart.

Mangrum led at the halfway mark, but while playing with Wood yesterday he dropped nine strokes to the blond giant and fell well back. Today Mangrum turned the corner with a par 36 and came home in 33 for a 69, the best score of the day, which gave him also a 72-hole total of 290.

Leo Diegel, the home professional, blew his chances after being in the third bracket last night. He took a 78 when all his clubs by turns refused to work and finished with 296, as did Olin Dutra, P. G. A. champion; Tony Manero and Willie Goggin.

It took a total of 298, just 10 over par, to join the select 20 who divided the $7,500 prize money. Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur, finished with a 71-292, to tie with Charles Guest, of Deal, and Harry Cooper, of Chicago, a pair of top-flight professionals, for fifth place. It was the best an amateur had done in the four tournaments here.

Runyan's Play Brilliant.

Runyan's play throughout the tournament was among the best ever seen in competition here. In the wind on the first day he took a 74, and on the second day he made 69, three under par. He moved into a tie for first

PARKE AGAIN RIDES FOUR WINNERS AT JEFFERSON PARK

Boy Matches Feat of Two Days Ago

Brings Total Winners to 41 at Meeting; Second Twice.

Rides Whippercracker Second to Sandwrack in Feature Race.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Duplicating his feat of two days ago, Monte Parke, leading rider at Jefferson Park, today booted four of his mounts home in front of their fields to bring his total number of winners for the meeting to 41.

The little apprentice started his winning streak in the third race with Zekiel, a 5-to-2 shot. He scored in the fourth with Drastic Celt at the same price, in the sixth with Slapstick, which paid $6.80 for $2 and in the final number with Peace Lady, even-money favorite.

Two of his three other mounts—Full Up and Whippercracker—finished second. He was out of the money with Daddy Nelson in the first event.

Whippercracker Loses by Head.

Monte just missed winning with Whippercracker, which carried Benny Creech's silks in the Louisiana Purse, mile and one-sixteenth feature. Only a head separated the Creech entry from Mrs. M. Eslick's Sandwrack at the end of the journey while four lengths away in third place trailed Finnic. Sandwrack ran the distance in 1:45 3-5 over a fast track and paid 3 to 1.

Regal Flag delayed the start and broke slowly from the outside, but Jockey Bagur rushed the colt up very fast and had him on top entering the back stretch, with Finnie being rated off the pace. Whippercracker moved up to a threatening position midway of the back side, while Sandwrack was slow to find his stride. Regal Flag tired at the head of the stretch and Whippercracker, although losing ground, got his head in front, but Moran shot through on the inside with Sandwrack and the Eslick banner bearer wore down Whippercracker under superior handling. Finnic was driving to beat the fast closing Homework.

Zekiel's Speed Beats Burgoo.

Zekiel possessed too much speed for the field in the third event, and led all the way, to score by a length and a half over Burgoo, with Irfaneh a fash-finishing but well-beaten third. The first two horses were heavily played, the winner returning $7.20. Burgoo never could threaten the winner, although holding the place safe the entire 6 furlongs. Silent Vote fell in the stretch, breaking a leg, and had to be destroyed. Apprentice Al Beck escaped with a shaking up.

The Post's Weekly Round-Up of Bowling

"OUNCIE" HARRISON lost the decision to Jack Mooney in their special match last night at Arcadia, but defeated the veteran smoke-eater later in the evening in the Arcadia Sweepstakes.

Ouncie rolled 115, 92, 97, 129, 100, for a 533 set. Jack's games were 104, 116, 129, 102, 121, a 572 set. In the tournament Harrison rolled a 379 three-game set, nosing out Mooney by 3 pins.

Red Rhodes won the tournament with games of 104, 138, 153, a 395 set. Jackie Simmons, one of the younger stars, finished fourth with scores of 119, 121, 102 for a 342 total. Rhodes will receive a paid-up entry in the Dixie Swepestakes as his reward.

The second tournament for women, rolled yesterday at Arcadia, resulted in a victory for Catherine Quigley, who rocked the maples for games of 126, 125, 104—395. Evelyn Ream's 332 captured second place. Mary Cox was third with 308, and Bess Hoffman fourth with 307. The winner's entrance fee in the Women's Dixie Sweepstakes will be paid.

Joe Harris shot a 143 for high game honors and a 373 for high set as his team, Boulevard, won two out of three from Georgetown in the D. C. Interurban League last night. Boulevard reeled off 572 and 1,612 for high team game and set.

The following winners in the blind pig tournament, rolled in conjunction with the regular Ladies Federal League games at the Arcadia alleys, were announced yesterday as follows: Mable Harris and Elsie Fischer, 628; Peggy Babcock and Irene Scott, 619; Pauline Bradburn and Wilda Tucker, 616; Mary Orpin and Elsi Romero, 616.

Henry Hiser defeated "Dutch" Neuman in the roll-off, after the pair had tied at 1,268, to win the sweepstakes at Silver Spring last night. Hiser scored 110 and Neuman 98 in the extra game. Hokie Smith finished second with 1,268; Maxie Rosenberg was fourth with 1,266, and Howard Parsons was fifth with 1,264.

C. U. TOSSERS BEAT SAINT JOSEPH'S

Zuber High Scorer as Cards Win by 29 to 21 Score.

Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 14.—Catholic University's basket ball team brought to a close its week-end invasion of the Philadelphia district by vanquishing St. Joseph's College, 29 to 21, tonight at the Palais Royale.

The locals got off to their customary fast start, duplicating the feat accomplished in the last home game—a pair of two pointers garnered in the first 50 seconds. Diminutive Phil Zuber caged the ball before 40 seconds had elapsed, and Johnny Kane, speedy guard, added quickly.

Zuber Game's High Scorer.

Zuber, high scorer with 8 tallies, registered another field goal and then a foul for a 7-to-1 margin. Following this, the Hawk second stringers inserted into the contest and Catholic U. jumped ahead, never to lose the lead. Three goals by Abe Rosenfeld helped Catholic tie the score at 10-all and at halftime the Cardinals led, 13 to 10.

Bus Sheary aided Rosenfeld and produced 18 of the visitors' points. Rosenfeld garnered four goals and a pair of free throws.

V. M. I. ROUTS GALLAUDET ON COURT

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 14.—The Flying Cadets of V. M. I. swamped Gallaudet College here tonight by amassing 41 points while holding their opponents to 19. It was the fourth straight win for the Cadets. They started slowly, but Downey, Millar and Edmunds found the range and the Cadets led at half time, 20 to 11.

The second half was a duplication of the first, with Hancock and Ferrara, a substitute forward, leading the scoring. Antila and Rayhill scored for Gallaudet, matching the baskets made by Hancock and Downey. The Cadets then went on a scoring spree, with Ferrar setting the pace, and scored seventeen points, while their opponents scored four.

NAVY ROUTS DUKE FIVE, 44 TO 22

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 14.—With Capt. Porter Bedell, guard, showing his best form of the season, and "Buzz" Borries, at center, cutting even greater capers, the basket ball team of Annapolis Midshipmen doubled the count on a rugged Duke University quintet today, and thereby rung up their fifth straight triumph of their schedule. Oddly enough, the teams amassed the same number of points in the first half as in the second, 22 and 11, to make the final count, Navy, 44; Duke, 22.

Fair Grounds Offers 8-Race Daily Program

New Orleans, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Fair Grounds race track, recently taken over by a Chicago syndicate, will offer eight races daily instead of the usual seven when the course opens its 48-day spring meeting January 23, General Manager Joseph A. Murphy said today.

Murphy also announced discontinuance of three-eighths of a mile baby races. The 2-year-olds will be run only at one-quarter mile at the start of the meeting with the possibility of a later increase in the distance to a half mile.

Potomac State Routs Marine Five, 45-18

Quantico, Va., Jan. 14.—Potomac State College had too many expert marksmen for the Quantico Marines, and the Devil Dogs dropped a 45-18 decision to the Mountaineers in a dull game here today.

Steve Offutt and Ed Haggerty, Potomac forwards, ran up 27 points on their hosts, with their mates coming in with stray shots from time to time that completely submerged the home team's hopes.

McGrath's three field goals represented the greatest damage to the invaders' defense. Potomac held its rival well in check, leading at the half by an 18-7 score.

2 NEW FACES, 2 OLD IDOLS WRESTLE

2 Old Baddies and 2 Feature Matches Dot Mat Card.

TWO new faces, two old heroes, two bad old nassy mans and two feature bouts make up next Thursday night's rasslefest at the Washington "Oughta tore 'em" to pieces. Five wrestling matches in all have been arranged, as usual, by Promoter Joe Turner.

The two new muggs belong to Hans Kampfer, rated in the first three or four rasslers of the Londos circuit and a hardy perennial around the Middle West, and one Jacques Humberto, about whom nobody seems to know anything.

The two old heroes are Doc Wilson, who returns to the scene of former triumphs in the semifinal bout, and Gino Garibaldi, whose genuinely rough tactics earned him a big following last summer. The two professional villains are Dick Daviscourt, who meets a model of ethical grace in Doc Wilson, and Pat McKay, a genial Irishman whose ears or something seem to infuriate the Believers.

Garibaldi-Coleman In Feature.

The top feature matches up Garibaldi and little Abe Coleman, one of the most interesting growlers Joe Turner has ever lured here. Coleman is only about this high: (!), but he throws the 220-pounders around as if they were made of baloney jackets. His chief holds are a spirited kick in the opponent's jaw and a flying butt. His meeting with Garibaldi promises the best rassling seen here before Frank Judson was inflicted on the populace.

Kampfer, who hangs it on Rudy Dusek regularly, will be introduced to the populace by Paul Jones in a 30-minute bout that doubtless will go all 30 minutes. Humberto meets Babe Caddock, and Pat McKay trades eye-gouges with Joe Cox.

The women fans will again be admitted free of charge, with paying escorts.

Washington-Lee Five Downs Hopewell, 30-16

Washington and Lee High School walloped Hopewell High in an important State interscholastic game last night, 30 to 16, as Frank Good, home team captain, ran wild with 9 field goals.

Washington and Lee led 21-6 at the half.

FLASHES TRIUMPH.

The Northwestern Flashes, 130-pound team, defeated Epiphany, 60 to 30, yesterday.

MANN LISTS 34 ROUNDS TUESDAY

Baltimore-Washington Boys Slug It Out at Portner's.

LOCAL color will be injected into the weekly fight program at Portner's Arena in Alexandria Tuesday night for the benefit of the Day Nursery.

An all-star card of 34 rounds, with no emphasis on any particular bout, will be presented by Matchmaker Frankie Mann in an effort to determine whether club fighters (meaning the boys who murder one another with punches and love the sight of blood) or classy, clever boxers are the most desirable.

It seems as though the preliminary beak-busters have been receiving most of the cheers and applause and the semiwindup and headline fighters most of the jeers and apple sauce for several weeks at Portner's. All of which has disturbed Prof. Abe Martin, Bill Moses, Jack Hulloch and Promoter Mann.

The matchmaker attempted to move up the Genaro-Fino feature. He was unsuccessful. His efforts to pit a suitable heavyweight against Marty Gallagher in the absence of Les Kennedy failed.

Mann Gets His Men.

So Mann surveyed the local horizon, plucked out eight boys who either are permanent residents here or are stranded, made a hurried trip to Baltimore and picked up four more robust youngsters. Thus Tuesday night's program was completed in record time.

One four-rounder and five six rounders will make up the card—a most unusual line-up in Portner's fistic history.

"We are not featuring any one fight," the affable promoter said. "The program may be just what the fans want, and, if favorably received, we'll shoot more like that at them."

The program will be opened by Joe Doty, a smart little crowd-pleaser, with "slug" as his theme song, and Tommy Horn, of Baltimore. They will step four.

The rest of the fights are six-rounders. Henry Irving, soccer player de luxe, Washington's own "Popeye," will sock it out with Walter Kirkwood.

Ray Bowen, who met his Waterloo in the battle with Jimmy Reed, will attempt a comeback. Lloyd Phelps, strong-footed Arizonan who stopped Joey Chaney in two rounds last week, is his opponent.

Essinger to Meet Tramberia.

Willie Essinger mixed with Jimmy Tramberia, the crouching Baltimore lightweight.

Leroy Dougan, late of Arkansas, whose last three fights have resulted in one draw and two well-earned decisions, will take on Izzy Caplan, southpaw from Baltimore, who whipped Doug Swetnam last week.

Call it the main match, if you want to, but Roddy Davis, who has not boxed since Joe Britten flattened him in one round recently, sails into a newcomer, Angelo Meola, of Baltimore, conqueror of Jimmy Tramberia.

To prove that it will be an all-star card, Matchmaker Mann announced that the names of the two fighters on each bout will be placed in a hat, and they will go on in the order they are picked out by Jimmy Lake, master of ceremonies.

St. John's Freshmen Defeat Gilman Five

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14.—The freshmen Courtiers of St. John's College eked out victory over Gilman School of Baltimore, in a nip and tuck battle in the St. John's gymnasium today, 28 to 26.

The young Johnnies took a 3-point lead in the first period, at 9 to 6, but Gilman showed a burst of speed and good shooting in the second quarter to put them in the van at half time, 19 to 14. The Johnnies came back in the third session to knot the count, at 22 all, and held a shade on the visitors in the final frame.

Tunney Pays $30,000 to End Suit

Promoter Claimed 25 Per Cent of Earnings of Gene.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Tim Mara's suit against Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight boxing champion, for $500,000 has been settled, the New York promoter announced today. Mara has agreed to drop the suit on a cash payment of $30,000 to be made next week.

Retrial of the suit, brought by Mara on claim for 25 per cent of the former champion's ring earnings, was scheduled for next week. The case was tried originally here two years ago and resulted in a verdict for Tunney after much sensational testimony delving deeply into the inner workings of the big league fight business.

Appellate Court Ordered New Trial.

This original verdict later was reversed by the appelate court and a new trial ordered on the grounds that letters from Tunney to Mara, allegedly confirming the promoter's claim that Tunney had agreed to give him 25 per cent of future earnings for gaining Gene a title match with Jack Dempsey, were not admitted as evidence.

"The lawyers have been dickering for weeks," said Mara, owner of the New York Giants professional foot ball team, and a boxing promoter, "and I have signed a release of all claims. Tunney is ill and payment of the $30,000 to me has been deferred until next Thursday or Friday."

Mara's case was based on his claim that he had agreed to use his political and other influence to persuade Tex Rickard to name Tunney as Jack Dempsey's opponent for a match in 1926 in return for a percentage of the fighter's future earnings.

Tunney claimed that no contract had been made and that Mara's aid had been invoked only for a match to take place in New York.

Prominent Figures Testified.

During the testimony prominent political figures, including a former New York State Governor, unnamed, and James A. Farley, former head of the New York State Athletic Commission and now chairman of the Democratic national committee, figured in the evidence.

The maneuvering of Tex Ricard, promoter of both Tunney-Dempsey bouts, provided highlights in the evidence, as it was shown through telegrams and letters exchanged with both warriors that he tried to convince each man the other couldn't fight.

Mara, who once offered his lawyers, for themselves, any judgment that could be obtained, just so that his suit was vindicated, explained today the payment of $30,000 on Tunney's part justified his claim.

"In these times," he said, "that's a lot of money for Tunney or anyone else to pay. All I wanted was vindication. Now I've got it."

50,000 See Cricket; Australia Trailing

Adelaide, Australia, Jan. 14 (A.P.). Australia will resume her first innings against England in the third test match Monday, faced with an uphill fight against fine British bowling.

While a crowd of 50,000 cheered them on, the Australian batsman today halted England with 341 runs for their first inning, but then made a poor showing against the bowling of G. O. Allen and Harold Larwood in the start of their first, losing four wickets for 109 runs.

With the two English bowlers in fine trim the four leading Aussie batsman—W. M. Woodfull, J. Fingleton, Don Bradman and Stan McCabe—fell for the slim total of 38 runs, with Fingleton bowled for a duck and Bradman being caught after knocking up only 8 runs. The next two bastmen in, W. H. Ponsford and V. Y. Richardson, made a brave stand and were 45 and 21, respectively, not out, when stumps were pulled for the day.

SPORT PROBE DEMANDED IN SOUTH

Conference to Adopt More Rigid Code; Asks "Clean-Up."

By FRANK H. FULLER.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Charging that flagrant recruiting and subsidization of athletes, together with low scholastic standards, existed in Southern colleges, the Southern Conference today asked an investigation and drastic steps to prohibit such practices.

The Southern association of colleges and secondary schools was asked to institute an investigation in every school in its jurisdiction and to adopt a regulation to withdraw standard college rating from schools found guilty.

C. P. Miles, athletic director of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and president of the conference, hailed the action as "the most far-reaching and progressive legislation ever promulgated by an athletic conference" and asserted athletics in the South would be "cleaned up" if the conference recommendation was accepted.

Issue Squarely Before College Officials.

"Its effect will be to put it squarely up to the administrative authorities of the universities and colleges of the South as to how they want athletics in their institutions conducted," Mr. Miles said in his prepared statement given out after the executive session in a small hotel parlor. "To make the administrative heads and educational authorities responsible for athletics is our aim."

The action was practically the only business of the final day of the meeting, and it followed upon changes in the conferences by-laws which will require a student to pass four-fifths of his college's work, where the minimum load is taken, in order to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics. Heretofore the rule has been that the athlete must live up to the scholastic requirement of his particular school, and the revision means that many of the conference members must raise their requirements.

It was asserted today by William L. Mapel, director of the Lee School of Journalism at Washington and Lee, that the conference requirement was more rigid than that of any of the member institutions with the exception of Clemson College, South Carolina and Virginia Military Institute.

The resolution asking the investigation asserted that the fundamental purposes of education are not being served "under conditions known to be prevalent in certain institutions," and that on the contrary wrong principles were being inculcated in students by examples of subterfuge and deception.

It set forth that athletics are valuable only in so far as they serve fundamental educational purpose, namely, to develop leaders of the highest type.

College Champ Enters Milrose Mile Feature

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Glenn Cunningham, national collegiate A. A. mile champion and Olympic team member from the University of Kansas, has sent in his entry for the classic Wanamaker mile in the Millrose A. A. indoor track and field games in New York February 4.

Handicapped by weak legs, the result of a school fire when he was a youngster, Cunningham sprang into prominence overnight last summer when he won the N. C. A. A. mile title in the meet record time of 4:11.1, the second fastest time ever made outdoors and the fastest by a college runner. He ran fourth, the first American to finish in the Olympic 1,500 meters.

Cunningham is expected to meet Gene Venzke, Wanamaker mile winner last year and holder of the indoor record of 4.10, and other outstanding Eastern competitors at the distance.

Wrangle Due Over Tennis Rankings

List Suggests Names of First Ten Were Pulled From Hat.

Delegates to Annual Meeting May Not Approve Ratings.

By HENRY McLEMORE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Those of you who enjoy an old-fashioned scrap might do worse than be on hand February 11, when the delegates to the fifty-second annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association are asked to accept the 1932 rankings as issued today by the ranking committee.

The line-up of the men's and women's singles is, to borrow a phrase from the French, slightly haywire. The more one studies the two "big tens" the more one is convinced that the committee, once they had named such obvious players as Ellsworth Vines and Helen Jacobs, resorted to the old business of pulling names out of the hat.

There's little fault to be found with the ranking of the first three on the men's list, Vines, Allison and Sutter. But the other seven—Wood, Shields, Stoefen, Mangin, Gledhill, Van Ryn and Jones—well, there are going to be some kicks.

Frank Shields Still Most Handsome.

Wood was off form all year. Only in the East-West matches, where he was within one point of whipping Vines, did the New Yorker flash the form that made him the scourge of the courts the year before. And Shields, while he still is far and away the most handsome of the players, failed to play championship tennis here or abroad

The giant Stoefen was probably surprised to find himself rated above Mangin and Gledhill. We were. For Lester, while he had his moments, was hardly the sixth best player in the country last year. The committee undoubtedly was swayed by the Californian's defeat of the talented Jiro Satoh in the nationals.

How the committee got around to placing Jones above George Lott is another mystery. With a tremendous service as practically his only weapon, Jones was decidedly an in and outer. When his first ball was landing, Jones was okay When it wasn't, Freddie the fireman could beat him.

Forgot Lott's Victory Over Parker.

Lott was given the No. 11 slot, marking the first time the Chicago internationalist has been out of the big ten since 1926. The committee probably felt that a man who was defeated four times by Frankie Parker couldn't be so hot. They apparently forgot that Lott whipped Parker at Forest Hills, when the stakes were high.

The women's rankings are all right—if you don't read past Helen Jacobs in the No. 1 peg. There can be no doubt that the committee was correct in refusing to rank Mrs. Helen Wills Moody because of "insufficient data" and awarding Miss Jacobs the post of honor. But how on earth did they arrive at placing Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper second, ahead of Caroline Babcock? Miss Babcock not only was runner-up to Miss Jacobs in the nationals, but eliminated Mrs. Harper in straight sets in the fourth round. Mrs. Harper actually should have been fourth, with Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter, who was given that place, third.

Miss Cruickshank Flattered.

Josephine Cruickshank was fifth, with Virginia Hilleary, Alice Marble, Mrs. Johnny Van Ryn, Virginia Rice and Marjorie Sachs following in the order named. Miss Cruickshank, who failed to get past the third round in the nationals, should rate behind the first four to follow her. Incidentally, Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, who trounced Miss Cruickshank at Forest Hills, drew eleventh place. You figure that one out.

Old Stateville's Eleven Is Winner

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The honor of old Stateville—Illinois State Prison to outsiders—was redeemed today without any dangerous long end runs; that is, end runs outside the gray walls.

Stateville's football eleven, led by one "Tuffy" Lynch, who piled up notoriety as somewhat of a burglar, drubbed the Caberry (Ill.) "All Stars," 12 to 6. A lot of the credit went to "Tuffy," who managed to hide the ball in the old manner he once cached valuables from inquisitive police. Lynch, a new recruit, stole the game with a right end run in the third period.

Three weeks ago Stateville and the Caberry village team had played to a scoreless tie.

Word of the Stateville victory was flashed to police in Chicago. It might have been more or less of a warning so they would keep open eyes in the event some Stateville grads might celebrate too much tonight.

Bobby Jones Tours New Augusta Course in 69 With Five Birdes

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Robert T. Jones, jr., president of the Augusta National Golf Course, went out today and put the finishing touches on the three-day celebration of the opening of the club by blasting out a 69 on the par 72 layout.

Mr. Jones, as president, had spent two busy days shaking hands and running hither and yon making sure that all the folks were having a good time. Today he became Bobby again, the world's greatest golfer, and lugging out his old war clubs, brought gasps from the gallery as it added up his score. He had made it all look so easy.

Bobby was playing with Don Mackay, Frank Willard and Hunter Marston, all of New York. He shot birdies on all four of the par 5 holes, added another birdie on a par 3 and went 1 over perfect figures on two holes where the card calls for fours.

Bobby's card:

SCHOLASTICS MAY DOUBLE GRID LIST

Athletic Head Urges 2 Meetings Each; No Other Games.

A RADICAL plan whereby public high school football teams would meet one another twice in their annual championship series and forego games with other school elevens, was advanced last night by John Paul Collins, chairman of high school faculty advisory committee. Apprised of the idea, coaches of the teams offered a variety of comment.

"I think it would sustain the interest in the series and make for a closer race if the teams played one another twice," Collins said. "Every team has a sufficient number of players to withstand the rigors of such a program. It would enable tie games to be played off and eliminate the possibility of teams winning the title on breaks. Our boys are in good physical condition and they have the benefit of good coaching, and I do not see why the plan would not work."

Charles A. Hart, principal of Eastern, favored the plan provided the season would not be extended beyond the first week in December.

Hardell Opposes Idea.

Hap Hardell, Tech coach, opposed the idea on the grounds that football is too strenuous, and secondly, because the school has had some pleasant relations with out-of-town schools which he believes should not be discontinued.

Dan Ahern, of Western, did not approve of the idea. He summed up football as essentially a game of plays and stated that a second game would result in a battle of brawn rather than brain. Ahern suggested the schedule of the series be arranged to bring the two strongest teams together at the end of the season to sustain the interest.

Roosevelt's Lynn Woodworth favored the move and suggested that more boys be taught the game through the medium of leagues governed by players' weights.

Bert Coggins, of Central, was noncommittal, other than to admit the scheme might work. He pointed out that it could not be placed in effect next season because of schedules already arranged.

Charley Guyon, of Eastern, could not be reached on the telephone.

PARRACK ACE IN G. W.'S VICTORY

Scores 29 Points in Defeat of Loyola Five, 55 to 41.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 14.—Loyola's attack scored sufficient points to defeat an ordinary basket ball team tonight at Evergreen, but George Washington, the opposing quintet, is beyond such a classification. The Colonials, a tall band of swift passing players, experienced in the intricacies of the game and confident in their height and ability, rolled along to a 55-to-41 victory.

In Wick Parrack, George Washington presented a scorer who accounted for as many goals as one team will make in a similar game. He sank 13 from the floor and made a perfect mark in his three chances from the foul line.

Loyola made the first three points of the game, but was immediately overhauled, and George Washington then set in motion its scoring machine. The baskets were monotonous to the Loyola rooters as the Capital marksmen pumped shot after shot into the hoop.

G. W. Uses Height to Good Effect.

Keeping only two men in back court, confident that their height would get the ball on rebounds, George Washington was able to have three in position for fast breaking, and, though Chief Bender, defensive mainstay of the home team, performed in herculean fashion, no single player was equal to such a task.

Unable to work plays against the high order of guarding, Loyola was reduced to outside shooting in the main, and the total scored by the home team is indicative of the success enjoyed in this difficult undertaking.

Early in the contest, Oscar (Ox) Wickham, 240-pound center, who started for George Washington, suffered a ruptured thigh muscle when he plunged into the bleacher seats behind the end line in a scoring attempt.

The defeat was the first experienced by Loyola this season.

Max Baer Is Sought By Process Servers

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Max Baer, heavyweight fighter who aspires to the world championship, remained in seclusion tonight as process servers sought to notify him officially of a $250,000 breach of promise suit filed by Olive Beck, waitress.

Miss Beck claimed Baer jilted her when he married Dorothy Dunbar Wells, former actress, during the summer of 1931. In support of her claim, Attorney Crozier Culp exhibited one of several love letters she said Baer had written her.

Endearing terms appeared in the letter and Miss Beck was advised to "do some reading so she could meet people and hold conversation."

"You want to forget the present and start thinking of the future and the wonderful sights you haven't seen and people you'd never dream of meeting," the latter said.

IRISH CAPTAIN ENGAGED.

MARYLAND U. BEATEN BY GENERALS

Washington-Lee Wins Thriller, 43 to 40; Fields Is Star.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 14.—In a game that featured two evenly matched basket ball teams, scrapping every minute for every point, Washington and Lee gave Maryland its second defeat of a two-night invasion of Lexington tonight, score 43 to 40. Both teams kept within striking distance of each other, and neither team had a lead larger than seven points at any time.

Maryland drew first blood and tallied four points before the Generals succeeded in breaking into the scoring column by dropping in a foul. Cy Young's team then drew up apace with the Old Liners, and after tying the score at 6-all took a two-point lead, which it maintained throughout the game, with the exception of several minutes at the conclusion of the first half, when the score was 19-all.

Generals Gain Six-Point Lead.

Fields opened the second half with a field goal and a foul goal for the Generals, and Sawyers followed close on his heels with a goal and two foul goals to give Blue and White a 6-point lead which it maintained until the game was almost over. Five minutes before the final whistle the visitors started a last minute rally that brought the score to 40-41 in favor of the Generals, with 8 seconds to play. Henthorne then dropped in a long shot for his only score of the game as the whistle blew to make the final score 43 to 40.

Sensational playing on the part of both teams had the 1,000 spectators on their feet yelling during the entire game. Using quick breaks and man for man defense, both teams fought hard for each score and the ball see-sawed up and down the floor as result of good passing. Scrapping over possession of the ball at all times brought 17 personal fouls on the heads of the Generals and 16 on the Old Liners Fields, who dropped the ball in from all angles, counted 7 field goals and 3 out of 6 foul tries to lead the scoring with 17 points. Sawyers dropped in 4 field goals and made 6 out of 9 fouls to total 14 points, while Vincent led Maryland dropping in 3 field goals and making 7 out of 11 foul tries to score 13 points.

Hamilton, N. Y., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A policy of retrenchment in athletics for the remainder of the college year was announced today by the Colgate University Athletic Council, which described it as a "sensible and sane program without abandoning any sports."

The baseball schedule will be played and perhaps will include informal series with Syracuse and Cornell, both of which have dropped the sport for this spring. Track will be continued although the number of men sent to the Penn relays and the intercollegiates will be limited.

Golf and tennis teams will compete only in informal matches. Two lacrosse games will be canceled and the sport continued on an intramural basis.

BROOKS MEETS TARS.

Brooks Club will play host to the Naval Reserves in a game this afternoon in the Gonzaga High School gym at 2:30 o'clock. A preliminary game will be played at 1:30 o'clock.

Horton Smith Second by 2 Strokes

N. Y. Pro Refuses to Crack, Wins With 287 Total.

Mangrum's Great Finish Ties Wood for Third Money.

By WILLIAM WARNE.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A young but experienced golfer, Paul Runyan, won the $7,500 fourth annual Agua Caliente Open, scoring a victory over par and a select list of professionals here today with a 72-hole total of 287.

A thrilling rally on the last nine accounted for the 2-stroke margin by which the 24-year-old pro from Arkansas and White Plains, N. Y., trounced his pal, Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., who played in the same threesome and was the runner-up.

Runyan was tied for first at the end of the third day with Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., who had won open tournaments at San Francisco, Pasadena and Los Angeles before the Western winter trail led him here. They had totals of 217, and Horton Smith was two strokes behind them.

Smith's 34 Gains Lead.

At the end of 63 holes at noon today Horton had moved into the lead, with Runyan, by virtue of playing the first nine in 34, and Wood had fallen back a pace in the race for the $1,500 first prize money, turning the corner in one over par, 37 strokes.

Runyan led off and Horton followed him on the tenth tee. They played the hole in 4, par. Runyan made a par 3 on 11, but Horton missed a putt and was one behind. On 12 they both took birdie 4s, and on 13 had par 4s, but on 14 Runyan sank a 20-footer for a birdie 3 and moved two ahead of Smith. Smith lacked a foot of tying it up on the fifteenth with a near hole-in-one, when his drive stopped just 12 inches short of the cup. He took a birdie 2, and Paul got a par.

Both gladiators were nervous on the last three, but Runyan managed to play them in perfect figures, while Horton took bogie fives on the sixteenth and the eighteenth, when his putter went on a strike, and one trap got in the way.

Meanwhile Craig Wood was trying futilely to match the subpar pace set by the pair. He toured the first nine in 37 and the last to even par for a 73—290 and a tie for third place.

Mangrum Makes Comeback.

Young Ray Mangrum, the Texan from Los Angeles, made a marvelous comeback today to tie with Wood, whose uncanny putting yesterday broke the 22-year-old's heart.

Mangrum led at the halfway mark, but while playing with Wood yesterday he dropped nine strokes to the blond giant and fell well back. Today Mangrum turned the corner with a par 36 and came home in 33 for a 69, the best score of the day, which gave him also a 72-hole total of 290.

Leo Diegel, the home professional, blew his chances after being in the third bracket last night. He took a 78 when all his clubs by turns refused to work and finished with 296, as did Olin Dutra, P. G. A. champion; Tony Manero and Willie Goggin.

It took a total of 298, just 10 over par, to join the select 20 who divided the $7,500 prize money. Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur, finished with a 71-292, to tie with Charles Guest, of Deal, and Harry Cooper, of Chicago, a pair of top-flight professionals, for fifth place. It was the best an amateur had done in the four tournaments here.

Fred Morrison, of Pasadena, Calif., the big professional who won the tournament last year, took a 78 today for a 308 total, far behind the last money winner.

Runyan's Play Brilliant.

Runyan's play throughout the tournament was among the best ever seen in competition here. In the wind on the first day he took a 74, and on the second day he made 69, three under par. He moved into a tie for first

Babe Didrikson Is Given Cue Lesson, Trailing by 200 to 27

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Babe Didrikson, all-around athletic star from Texas, today made her second appearance as a professional, this time at pocket billiards, and was defeated by Ruth McGinnis, of Honesdale, Pa., 100 to 14 in 26 innings.

"I don't want any more of this," Babe said as she walked away from the table after completing the first block of series of four she and Miss McGinnis will play through tomorrow.

The Pennsylvania girl, who has been playing billiards since she was 7, was the complete master of the Babe, having runs of 18, 15 and 14 as compared to the cluster of 5 Babe put together for her best effort.

In the second block tonight Miss McGinnis, of Honesdale, Pa., defeated Babe, 100 to 13, and gained a lead of 200 to 27.

Miss McGinnis turned in a high run of 14 and again dominated play

Miss Didrikson made her first professional appearance last night in a basket ball game where she scored nine points to lead the scoring as her team won, 19 to 16.

PARKE AGAIN RIDES FOUR WINNERS AT JEFFERSON PARK

Boy Matches Feat of Two Days Ago

Rides Whippercracker Second to Sandwrack in Feature Race.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Duplicating his feat of two days ago, Monte Parke, leading rider at Jefferson Park, today booted four of his mounts home in front of their fields to bring his total number of winners for the meeting to 41.

The little apprentice started his winning streak in the third race with Zekiel, a 5-to-2 shot. He scored in the fourth with Drastic Celt at the same price, in the sixth with Slapstick, which paid $6.80 for $2 and in the final number with Peace Lady, even-money favorite.

Two of his three other mounts—Full Up and Whippercracker—finished second. He was out of the money with Daddy Nelson in the first event.

Whippercracker Loses by Head.

Monte just missed winning with Whippercracker, which carried Benny Creech's silks in the Louisiana Purse, mile and one-sixteenth feature. Only a head separated the Creech entry from Mrs. M. Eslick's Sandwrack at the end of the journey while four lengths away in third place trailed Finnic. Sandwrack ran the distance in 1:45 3-5 over a fast track and paid 3 to 1.

Regal Flag delayed the start and broke slowly from the outside, but Jockey Bagur rushed the colt up very fast and had him on top entering the back stretch, with Finnie being rated off the pace. Whippercracker moved up to a threatening position midway of the back side, while Sandwrack was slow to find his stride. Regal Flag tired at the head of the stretch and Whippercracker, although losing ground, got his head in front, but Moran shot through on the inside with Sandwrack and the Eslick banner bearer wore down Whippercracker under superior handling. Finnic was driving to beat the fast closing Homework.

Zekiel's Speed Beats Burgoo.

Zekiel possessed too much speed for the field in the third event, and led all the way, to score by a length and a half over Burgoo, with Irfaneh a fash-finishing but well-beaten third. The first two horses were heavily played, the winner returning $7.20. Burgoo never could threaten the winner, although holding the place safe the entire 6 furlongs. Silent Vote fell in the stretch, breaking a leg, and had to be destroyed. Apprentice Al Beck escaped with a shaking up.

The Post's Weekly Round-Up of Bowling

"OUNCIE" HARRISON lost the decision to Jack Mooney in their special match last night at Arcadia, but defeated the veteran smoke-eater later in the evening in the Arcadia Sweepstakes.

Ouncie rolled 115, 92, 97, 129, 100, for a 533 set. Jack's games were 104, 116, 129, 102, 121, a 572 set. In the tournament Harrison rolled a 379 three-game set, nosing out Mooney by 3 pins.

Red Rhodes won the tournament with games of 104, 138, 153, a 395 set. Jackie Simmons, one of the younger stars, finished fourth with scores of 119, 121, 102 for a 342 total. Rhodes will receive a paid-up entry in the Dixie Swepestakes as his reward.

The second tournament for women, rolled yesterday at Arcadia, resulted in a victory for Catherine Quigley, who rocked the maples for games of 126, 125, 104—395. Evelyn Ream's 332 captured second place. Mary Cox was third with 308, and Bess Hoffman fourth with 307. The winner's entrance fee in the Women's Dixie Sweepstakes will be paid.

Joe Harris shot a 143 for high game honors and a 373 for high set as his team, Boulevard, won two out of three from Georgetown in the D. C. Interurban League last night. Boulevard reeled off 572 and 1,612 for high team game and set.

The following winners in the blind pig tournament, rolled in conjunction with the regular Ladies Federal League games at the Arcadia alleys, were announced yesterday as follows: Mable Harris and Elsie Fischer, 628; Peggy Babcock and Irene Scott, 619; Pauline Bradburn and Wilda Tucker, 616; Mary Orpin and Elsi Romero, 616.

Henry Hiser defeated "Dutch" Neuman in the roll-off, after the pair had tied at 1,268, to win the sweepstakes at Silver Spring last night. Hiser scored 110 and Neuman 98 in the extra game. Hokie Smith finished second with 1,268; Maxie Rosenberg was fourth with 1,266, and Howard Parsons was fifth with 1,264.

C. U. TOSSERS BEAT SAINT JOSEPH'S

Zuber High Scorer as Cards Win by 29 to 21 Score.

Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 14.—Catholic University's basket ball team brought to a close its week-end invasion of the Philadelphia district by vanquishing St. Joseph's College, 29 to 21, tonight at the Palais Royale.

The locals got off to their customary fast start, duplicating the feat accomplished in the last home game—a pair of two pointers garnered in the first 50 seconds. Diminutive Phil Zuber caged the ball before 40 seconds had elapsed, and Johnny Kane, speedy guard, added quickly.

Zuber Game's High Scorer.

Zuber, high scorer with 8 tallies, registered another field goal and then a foul for a 7-to-1 margin. Following this, the Hawk second stringers inserted into the contest and Catholic U. jumped ahead, never to lose the lead. Three goals by Abe Rosenfeld helped Catholic tie the score at 10-all and at halftime the Cardinals led, 13 to 10.

Bus Sheary aided Rosenfeld and produced 18 of the visitors' points. Rosenfeld garnered four goals and a pair of free throws.

V. M. I. ROUTS GALLAUDET ON COURT

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 14.—The Flying Cadets of V. M. I. swamped Gallaudet College here tonight by amassing 41 points while holding their opponents to 19. It was the fourth straight win for the Cadets. They started slowly, but Downey, Millar and Edmunds found the range and the Cadets led at half time, 20 to 11.

The second half was a duplication of the first, with Hancock and Ferrara, a substitute forward, leading the scoring. Antila and Rayhill scored for Gallaudet, matching the baskets made by Hancock and Downey. The Cadets then went on a scoring spree, with Ferrar setting the pace, and scored seventeen points, while their opponents scored four.

NAVY ROUTS DUKE FIVE, 44 TO 22

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 14.—With Capt. Porter Bedell, guard, showing his best form of the season, and "Buzz" Borries, at center, cutting even greater capers, the basket ball team of Annapolis Midshipmen doubled the count on a rugged Duke University quintet today, and thereby rung up their fifth straight triumph of their schedule. Oddly enough, the teams amassed the same number of points in the first half as in the second, 22 and 11, to make the final count, Navy, 44; Duke, 22.

Fair Grounds Offers 8-Race Daily Program

New Orleans, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Fair Grounds race track, recently taken over by a Chicago syndicate, will offer eight races daily instead of the usual seven when the course opens its 48-day spring meeting January 23, General Manager Joseph A. Murphy said today.

Murphy also announced discontinuance of three-eighths of a mile baby races. The 2-year-olds will be run only at one-quarter mile at the start of the meeting with the possibility of a later increase in the distance to a half mile.

Potomac State Routs Marine Five, 45-18

Quantico, Va., Jan. 14.—Potomac State College had too many expert marksmen for the Quantico Marines, and the Devil Dogs dropped a 45-18 decision to the Mountaineers in a dull game here today.

Steve Offutt and Ed Haggerty, Potomac forwards, ran up 27 points on their hosts, with their mates coming in with stray shots from time to time that completely submerged the home team's hopes.

McGrath's three field goals represented the greatest damage to the invaders' defense. Potomac held its rival well in check, leading at the half by an 18-7 score.

2 NEW FACES, 2 OLD IDOLS WRESTLE

2 Old Baddies and 2 Feature Matches Dot Mat Card.

TWO new faces, two old heroes, two bad old nassy mans and two feature bouts make up next Thursday night's rasslefest at the Washington "Oughta tore 'em" to pieces. Five wrestling matches in all have been arranged, as usual, by Promoter Joe Turner.

The two new muggs belong to Hans Kampfer, rated in the first three or four rasslers of the Londos circuit and a hardy perennial around the Middle West, and one Jacques Humberto, about whom nobody seems to know anything.

The two old heroes are Doc Wilson, who returns to the scene of former triumphs in the semifinal bout, and Gino Garibaldi, whose genuinely rough tactics earned him a big following last summer. The two professional villains are Dick Daviscourt, who meets a model of ethical grace in Doc Wilson, and Pat McKay, a genial Irishman whose ears or something seem to infuriate the Believers.

Garibaldi-Coleman In Feature.

The top feature matches up Garibaldi and little Abe Coleman, one of the most interesting growlers Joe Turner has ever lured here. Coleman is only about this high: (!), but he throws the 220-pounders around as if they were made of baloney jackets. His chief holds are a spirited kick in the opponent's jaw and a flying butt. His meeting with Garibaldi promises the best rassling seen here before Frank Judson was inflicted on the populace.

No less interesting should be the match between Wilson and Dick Daviscourt.

Kampfer, who hangs it on Rudy Dusek regularly, will be introduced to the populace by Paul Jones in a 30-minute bout that doubtless will go all 30 minutes. Humberto meets Babe Caddock, and Pat McKay trades eye-gouges with Joe Cox.

The women fans will again be admitted free of charge, with paying escorts.

Washington-Lee Five Downs Hopewell, 30-16

Washington and Lee High School walloped Hopewell High in an important State interscholastic game last night, 30 to 16, as Frank Good, home team captain, ran wild with 9 field goals.

Washington and Lee led 21-6 at the half.

FLASHES TRIUMPH.

The Northwestern Flashes, 130-pound team, defeated Epiphany, 60 to 30, yesterday.

MANN LISTS 34 ROUNDS TUESDAY

Baltimore-Washington Boys Slug It Out at Portner's.

LOCAL color will be injected into the weekly fight program at Portner's Arena in Alexandria Tuesday night for the benefit of the Day Nursery.

An all-star card of 34 rounds, with no emphasis on any particular bout, will be presented by Matchmaker Frankie Mann in an effort to determine whether club fighters (meaning the boys who murder one another with punches and love the sight of blood) or classy, clever boxers are the most desirable.

It seems as though the preliminary beak-busters have been receiving most of the cheers and applause and the semiwindup and headline fighters most of the jeers and apple sauce for several weeks at Portner's. All of which has disturbed Prof. Abe Martin, Bill Moses, Jack Hulloch and Promoter Mann.

The matchmaker attempted to move up the Genaro-Fino feature. He was unsuccessful. His efforts to pit a suitable heavyweight against Marty Gallagher in the absence of Les Kennedy failed.

Mann Gets His Men.

So Mann surveyed the local horizon, plucked out eight boys who either are permanent residents here or are stranded, made a hurried trip to Baltimore and picked up four more robust youngsters. Thus Tuesday night's program was completed in record time.

One four-rounder and five six-rounders will make up the card—a most unusual line-up in Portner's fistic history.

"We are not featuring any one fight," the affable promoter said. "The program may be just what the fans want, and, if favorably received, we'll shoot more like that at them."

The program will be opened by Joe Doty, a smart little crowd-pleaser, with "slug" as his theme song, and Tommy Horn, of Baltimore. They will step four.

The rest of the fights are six-rounders. Henry Irving, soccer player de luxe, Washington's own "Popaye," will sock it out with Walter Kirkwood.

Ray Bowen, who met his Waterloo in the battle with Jimmy Reed, will attempt a comeback. Lloyd Phelps, strong-footed Arizonan who stopped Joey Chaney in two rounds last week, is his opponent.

Essinger to Meet Tramberia.

Willie Essinger mixed with Jimmy Tramberia, the crouching Baltimore lightweight.

Leroy Dougan, late of Arkansas, whose last three fights have resulted in one draw and two well-earned decisions, will take on Izzy Caplan, southpaw from Baltimore, who whipped Doug Swetnam last week.

Call it the main match, if you want to, but Roddy Davis, who has not boxed since Joe Britten flattened him in one round recently, sails into a newcomer, Angelo Meola, of Baltimore, conqueror of Jimmy Tramberia.

To prove that it will be an all-star card, Matchmaker Mann announced that the names of the two fighters on each bout will be placed in a hat, and they will go on in the order they are picked out by Jimmy Lake, master of ceremonies.

St. John's Freshmen Defeat Gilman Five

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14.—The freshmen Courtiers of St. John's College eked out victory over Gilman School of Baltimore, in a nip and tuck battle in the St. John's gymnasium today, 28 to 26.

The young Johnnies took a 3-point lead in the first period, at 9 to 6, but Gilman showed a burst of speed and good shooting in the second quarter to put them in the van at half time, 19 to 14. The Johnnies came back in the third session to knot the count, at 22 all, and held a shade on the visitors in the final frame.

NATS EXTENDING NATURAL RIVALRY TO ADDITIONAL CLUBS

Team at Best When Feud Is Raging

Incident in 1912 Set Off Spark of Rivalry With Athletics.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

BLAME it on the boll weevil or the fading administration, but ever since 1925—the last time Washington fans sank a fang in some strictly domestic world series fare—the Nats have had the knack of turning in splendid records against the A's and the damned Yankees, the two teams that have been dividing the league championship since that time. And, to make a long paragraph interesting, the Nats have then proceeded to take it on the chin from the paluka clubs of the circuit.

Many have been the reasons brought forth by the righteous fans, and the reasons have ranged from the fact that Our Boys don't thrive very well on St. Louis beer even to the point of accusing them of having about as much athletic vigor and competitive spark as the Latter Day Saints.

A's and Yankees Old Rivals of Nats.

If the figures were not too hard to look up, they would undoubtedly bear out the conviction that Washington, over a period of years, has put forth its best efforts only when it faced a traditional rival. New York and Philadelphia are the traditionalist foes of Washington in baseball, partially because of their geographical proximity, but mostly because of a chain of incidents to be related briefly in the ensuing story, unless the copy desk slices off the tail end of it in favor of a cigarette ad.

Back in 1912 Manager Clark Griffith, who was surprising even himself with a team that lifted Washington bodily out of the cellar of the American League, walked up to Eddie Collins, ace of the great Philadelphia team of that year and said the following six words: "You're a bunch of hamfat champions." Now them was fightin' words back in 1912, for Philadelphia was really the only team in the league worth paying to see. It had Coombs, Bender and Plank pitching, and Baker, McInnis, Barry, Collins, Oldring, Murphy and so forth scattered here and there at strategic points.

3-Cornered Race Back in 1912.

Well, the 1912 season progressed and it soon became evident that the race lay between Boston, Philly and Washington. Philadelphia just couldn't imagine Washington winning ball games. Boston nosed them out and won the pennant, but that didn't seem to bother the Quaker big shots as much as the fact that Washington was pressing them like a vise for second place.

There were three games left of the season and the Nats and Philly were tied for second place. They were to be played off in Philadelphia. On the first day Tommy Hills started for Washington and was holding a 3-0 lead until the seventh when Baker and the boys batted him all over the lot and tied the score. Griff sent Walter Johnson in. Whatever Johnson did after that series was an anti-climax to Griff. Here was where Johnson pitched his greatest ball in the opinion of the man who hired him, and, twenty years later, fired him.

Walter pitched ten innings of virtually hitless and, of course, runless baseball. The game went into the seventeenth inning still tied at 3-3. In the seventeenth Eddie Ainsmith broke a finger stopping one of Johnson's fast balls and Speed Williams, a rank but eager substitute, rushed in. Johnson worked a count of two strikes and no balls on Eddie Collins when Williams called for a fast one with a jump on it. Johnson let it fly. Williams never saw it in the fading light. He made a stab for it a full foot underneath the real course of the ball and the ball hit Billy Evans on the ear. Billy hopped around and around the batter's box trying to hold back the blood with one hand and trying to bean Williams with the other. Finally Evans snorted, "I declare this game a tie!"

About the same thing happened next day, which was the last day of the league schedule. It was supposed to be a double-header. Somebody started pitching for Washington and held a 3-0 lead until the seventh, when the A's scored four runs. Johnson, ever uncomplaining, went out on the mound again. The game went nineteen innings and ended 5-4 in Washington's favor, with Johnson pitching 22 innings of runless ball against perhaps the greatest team of all times. There was, of course, no time to play the third game that day, and the league season was over.

Gandil's Broken Nose Cements Rivalry.

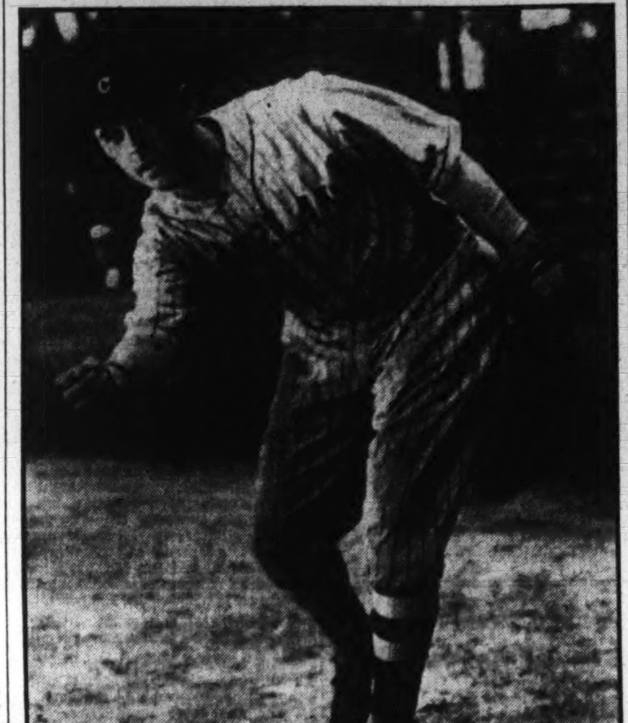
Well, the next year Eddie Collins broke Chick Gandil's nose by kneeing him on one of Gandil's head-first slides, and the rivalry was on for good. It has come right on down through the ages. Even in this civilized day of business man baseball players, who put in so much work per day and do not worry particularly about the game off the field, we see echoes of the old bitterness. For instance, the so-called Simmons-Marberry feud and the picture of Dykes throwing his bat out to second base last fall in an effort to bean Brother Marberry.

The animosity between Washington and New York is not so old. It started in 1924, on June 24, when the Nats took two successive double-headers in New York and never relinquished the league lead after that. Harris was usually in there spikes up from then on against New York. And I suppose the Dickey-Reynolds incident last year and several incidental spiking jobs could be brought up again as part of the general and long-winded exposition.

By means of the furious trading, swapping, selling and firing Clark Griffith and some of the other tycoons have been committing of late, Washington's list of natural foes has been extended to every team in the league for the coming year with the exception of dear old Boston, where there is an unfounded rumor that the city is secreting an American League baseball team.

Chicago has three of Washington's favorite public enemies—Simmons, Haas and Dykes. And Detroit, Cleveland and St. Louis have enough former Washingtonians to make the locals want to fight for dear old Griffith Institute to the last ditch or pitch.

Clint Brown, Tribe's Star, Won First Fame at Picnic



Mastery of his control which he has recently achieved promises to elevate Clint Brown to a ranking position on the Cleveland Indians' pitching staff. He won 15 and lost 12 last season.

Beat "Married Men" to Gain Start in Pro Baseball.

By HENRY P. EDWARDS.

YOU city folks who did not have the good fortune to be born in a little village or town probably are ignorant of the joys that go with the annual town picnic, when the town declares an official holiday and every inhabitant that is able to get there hies himself or herself to Smith's grove for a day of real fun.

Before the big dinner is served, they have three-legged, sack and potato races, a tug-of-war and a baseball game between the married and single men who do business on Main street. Six years ago last summer, there was such an event at Black Ash, a little hamlet among the oil wells of northwestern Pennsylvania. The athletic events had been run off and they were ready for the baseball game when it was discovered the bachelors had no pitcher.

Find Brown Working On Oil Well.

"Where's Clint Brown?" asked some one.

"He's working on his old oil well."

"Let's go and get him."

Half an hour later, Clint Brown, now of the Cleveland Indians, was pitching for the "single men" and, by virtue of a puzzling curve ball and a fast ball that slid past the batters, the bachelors won the game without any trouble. Some one who witnessed his performance wrote to the late George Stallings, then managing Rochester, about the young oil driller-pitcher and Clint threw his overalls and jumper away and joined Rochester. He was sent to Harrisburg without delay and Harrisburg relayed him to clubs in the Eastern Shore circuit.

But, he was back in Harrisburg in 1928. There he developed a "screw ball" under the tutelage of Elmer Knetzer, former big leaguer, while his catcher, Johnson, urged him to add an underhand delivery to his repertory. Now, we will let Clint step into the calcium and deliver a brief monologue in regard to pitching.

"As I have told you, I broke in with a curve and a slider. Then I picked up a screw ball at Harrisburg and started to better my control and acquire a slow ball and develop my underhand delivery and change of pace. You can not get all of these things over night. In fact, I was with Cleveland for close to two seasons before I was ready to use my underhand ball in championship games. As for control, I think that is my long suit right now, but, to get it, I threw at a mark all one winter.

"Then, although I never studied telegraphy, the Cleveland coaches tipped me off, two years ago, I was telegraphing what I was throwing to the opposing batsmen. The latter knew whether I was throwing a curve or fast one, and I acquired the habit of watching from the bench the last few innings of games I started. Naturally, I had to overcome that fault.

Clint surely has mastered his control. In 1929 he walked but 36 batters in 244 innings, passed but 55 men in 233 innings for Cleveland in 1931, while he led the American League pitchers in control in 1932, franking only 50 in 263 innings. Even Herb Pennock, famed as a control marvel, issued 38 passes in only 147 innings in '32.

Midsummer slumps used to be Brown's mental hazards. For instance, he lost five in a row with the Indians in 1930 and seven straight in 1931. His longest losing streak in 1932, however, was two games, while he had one winning streak of four and another of five. In fact, he crowded all of those five victories into the month of July, two of them being over the world champion Yankees. Among his twelve defeats last season were one 3-hit, two 5-hit and two 7-hit games. On the other hand, he won fifteen games and finally established himself as a first-string pitcher upon whom much reliance can be placed in 1933.

Paterson Tossers Play Eagles Today

With Dick Streeks, a member of the original Anacostia Eagles, somewhere in the line-up, the Aero Eagles continue their court warfare today with the Paterson (N. J.) Pros cast in the role of invaders. Streeks, who played with Vic's Sport Shop quintet last season, has been inactive this season and today will mark his 1933 debut.

Sholl's and Fort Myer clash in a preliminary game at 1:30 o'clock. Both games will be played in the George Washington gym.

Two Perfect Scores Made at Skeet Club

Frank B. Russell registered his second perfect score of the week, and D. C. Able his first in yesterday's shoot of the Montgomery Skeet Club.

Both cracked 25 out of 25. Russell made his first perfect score Wednesday. N. L. Simmons and Gordon Stup are the other two members who are in the same class.

RUNYAN IS WINNER IN CALIENTE OPEN

place on the third, after being well up from the start, with another 74. By touring the 6,838-yard course in 70, two under par today, he made himself the only one of the 186 players who started to finish the 72 holes in sub-par figures. He was one under.

Smith, who took the $1,000 second place money, was one over perfect figures.

Runyan is not a stranger to the ranks of the winners. He has won four important tournaments, among them the North-South Open in 1931, and the Metropolitan P. G. A. last year, when he beat the great Gene Sarazen. He finished second in the Miami Open last year. In previous tournaments here, he finished in a tie for twelfth in 1930, when Sarazen won, did not play in 1931 when Johnny Golden and George Von Elm tied for first, and came in sixth last year. Altogether he has won $2,150 in Mexico.

Although only 24 years old, Runyan has been playing golf as a caddy or a pro since 1921. He started carrying bags at the course at Hot Springs, Ark., where he was born.

The money winners:

Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 74, 69, 74, 70—287—$1,500.
Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., 71, 76, 72, 70—289—$1,000.
Ray Mangrum, Waco, Tex., 69, 72, 80, 69—290—$750.
Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., 75, 71, 71, 73—290—$750.
Harry Cooper, Chicago, 74, 75, 73, 70—292—$550.
Charles Guest, Deal, N. J., 75, 74, 72, 71—292—$550.
*John Dawson, Chicago, 76, 75, 70, 71—292 (first amateur prize).

16 CONTESTS FOR HIGH FIVES

Wednesday Busy Day of Week, With Ten Games Listed.

WASHINGTON-LEE HIGH SCHOOL invades Roosevelt tomorrow for a game with the Rough Riders that will start the scholastic ball rolling on a 16-game-journey. The week reaches its peak Wednesday when ten teams clash on widely separated courts.

Not all the wind was taken out of the high school series balloon by Central's victory over Tech last week. The Blue has yet to play Roosevelt and stopping the Rough Riders is not as simple as it sounds. Eastern brushes up against Tech's zone defense Tuesday in an argument for the occupancy of second place.

Central Favorite To Win.

Although Roosevelt is expected to offer stubborn resistance to a Central victory, the odds will be in favor of the latter. After that its only a short step to a triumph over Western for the leaders to finish the first half undefeated.

The Eastern-Tech engagement brings a promise of some more real action, similar to that experienced Friday. The Light Blue in all probability will follow Central's example in solving the zone defense puzzle. Central simply concentrated its offense on one side of the court. Tech's defense drifted in that direction and the ball was whirled to a man in the opposite corner who took a shot at the basket.

Carroll Shore was Central's little Jack Horner. He remained in the corner all afternoon taking shots at the basket, and usually making them. When Shore was covered the ball was fired into Moulton, or Burke, who played for close pot-shots. The uncertainty of where the shot was coming from kept Tech off balance.

Tech Still in Title Running.

Tech's hopefuls showed enough to warrant their further consideration as champions. Had the team abandoned its zone system sooner it might have overtaken its opponent. Reichhardt, Wheeler and the rest of the team after a shaky start played smooth basket ball. They appear to possess the necessary team play and point-getting ability to stop Eastern.

Eastern seems to lack coordination. The talent is there, but the team has not clicked. If all the boys got working together it might be disastrous for their future opponents.

Roosevelt has only its fighting qualities to recommend it in its game with Central. Fighting to the last second of the game, the team came within inches of tying Eastern last week. If Hayman, Sherman, Harris and Cavanaugh do not falter Central at least will not have a walk-away.

In Harris the Bronco Busters have an outstanding series performer. The youngster has been the spearhead in the team's attack. A player of the Bobby Lucas type, Harris has run off with the show in each game.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE.

MONDAY—Washington-Lee vs. Roosevelt, at Roosevelt.

TUESDAY—Eastern vs. Tech; Roosevelt vs. Central, high school championship series at Tech; Alexandria vs. St. John's, at St. John's; G. W. Freshmen vs. Western, at Western.

THURSDAY—Georgetown Prep vs. Tech, at Tech, 4 p. m.

FRIDAY—Leonard Hall vs. St. John's, at St. John's; Tech vs. Roosevelt, Central vs. Western, high school championship series, at Tech; Swavely vs. St. Alban's, at St. Alban's.

SATURDAY—Friends vs. Donaldson, at Baltimore.

SPIES DROVE HORNSBY TO RESIGN

Quit Cubs, He Says; Second Guessing of Officials Factor.

By FREDERICK BAILEY.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Rogers Hornsby, who left the Chicago Cubs under circumstances which an inquiry by Judge K. M. Landis did not fully reveal, tonight told what he said was the "inside story" of his retirement as manager of the National League pennant winner.

"I wasn't fired, I quit," Hornsby declared. "I quit because I couldn't stand second-guessing from the business office."

Hornsby was working out in a gymnasium in preparation for his attempt to come back as a player with the St. Louis Cardinals, with whom he started as a major leaguer nearly 15 years ago.

On one of the late summer swings of the Cubs through the East, Hornsby purposely omitted some of the players from the regular morning meeting at Pittsburgh. That afternoon, Hornsby said, President Veeck, who was with the team, asked him why he had not held the regular meeting.

Hornsby Tells Them in Dressing Room.

"I did," Hornsby said he replied. After the game Hornsby called for the attention of the players in the dressing room.

"I was boiling," he said.

"I told them what I thought of an informer."

Hornsby charged he had been "second-guessed" all season about the management of the club on the field. He was asked to make shifts among the players and then forced to shoulder the blame when the changes failed to "pan out," he said.

While the club was in Pittsburgh, Hornsby said, he went to Veeck and told him he was tired of "informers running to the business office with stories about what went on between the manager and the players."

He wound up with a demand that he be paid off in full immediately.

"But I can't accept your resignation without consulting the board of directors," Veeck protested, according to Hornsby.

"Telegraph them," Hornsby said, he replied. "I've had enough."

MERIDIANS COP.

The Meridians won a hard-fought game from Gallaudet's junior team yesterday, 21 to 19, on the latter's court. At the turn the Meridians led, 11-8.

ALEXANDRIA "B" WINS EASILY.

Alexandria High School "B" squad defeated Jefferson School yesterday, 37-14. Beverly stood out for the winners.

"Only Game Fish Swim Upstream"

(Having to do with clean sportsmanship among the fraternity who practice what they profess.)

AT its meeting Wednesday evening at the Raleigh Hotel, the Izaak Walton League, Washington Chapter, reelected Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, president, selected Francis D Barstow, vice president, and Thomas C. Gale, secretary-treasurer.

Then in chorus (tune of Auld Lang Syne") the meeting adjourned to a late evening repast and sang.

"It may be so, I do not know,
But it sounds like lies to me."

And the fish stories, some of them good, others better, reminded one of other fish stories, and so "far into the night."

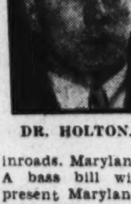
"I tried for nine years at Deepwater, W. Va., to catch the same albino trout," said C. S. McIntyre, who declared he believes fish become educated.

And that's his story. Drop us a line, "Mac."

And if you take the word, and you do, of Arthur Stearns, you'll understand that fish can be tickled into captivity. Try it yourself some time.

"Practice on eel tickling," suggests Fred Orsinger.

Eradication of pollution, both from industrial and sanitary sources and protection of black bass are the big numbers on the Waltonites' program here, says Dr. William B. Holton, chairman department of chemistry, American University, and chairman, pollution committee, I. W. L. A. chapter.



DR. HOLTON.

Already Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia are in line to protect black bass fishing grounds from net inroads. Maryland is the last frontier. A bass bill will come up in the present Maryland Legislature session, with even chance for passage and with opposition coming from commercial fishermen.

"When it is realized that the average net income of commercial fishermen from black bass is only about $100 yearly, it can be seen that even the commercial men themselves are not profiting by the wide-open laws," says Dr. Holton.

"By protecting the black bass in their fine waters of Maryland, giving them a chance to reestablish themselves in goodly numbers, it will be possible for the same net fishermen to derive income four or five times as great as any they could get otherwise. By catering to the needs of the anglers, with boats, live bait and guides, their incomes would be materially boosted."

The Izaak Walton League now is about 25 years old. Its purpose is set forth as "defender of woods, waters and wild life." It has accomplished a great deal in affording protection to wild life by fighting for protection of forest areas and creation of wild life sanctuaries, for passage of adequate and reasonable game and fish laws and in fighting to eradicate pollution in our streams and water areas.

Address your communications to "Outdoors Editor."

According to Donald N. Carpenter, he's sure a trout bit six times and he must have been one of those famous fellers who got away.

Let us give a thought to chain fishing.

IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE, Washington Chapter, added 40 members in 1932, largely because of the efforts of Thomas C. Gale, membership chairman, assisted by Thomas Mackin and Francis D. Barstow.

The league meets alternate Mondays at the Raleigh for luncheon.

President, Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, applauds, on behalf of the league membership, William Harms, who selected interesting speakers and guests during the year.

Bureau of Fisheries, Commerce Building, lends its help officially and unofficially to clean sportsmanship as exemplified by the league.

Glen C. Leach, Fisheries, is Walton League Chapter chairman on stocking streams. A dam was constructed under Mr. Leach's supervision and 20,000 small mouth black bass were planted in more than eleven acres under water.

Dr. William Holton, chairman, in charge of the program to educate the public to importance of relief from pollution of Rock Creek, Eastern Branch and Potomac River, has paved the way for further progress.

Fisheries Commissioner Henry O'Malley, Deputy Commissioner Lewis Radcliffe and Glen C Leach have cooperated with the distributing committee in stocking streams in Maryland and Virginia.

TREES.

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree

A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;

A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain,

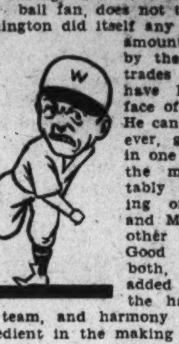
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.
—JOYCE KILMER.

If you seek a true champion of the black bass, consult Ed Kemper, Waltonian. All of which may sound like beginner's stuff to those who know Mr. Kemper, but as we said before he's the bass' champion.

RUNS-HITS and ERRORS

by BOB CONSIDINE

WALTER JOHNSON, looking upon things now as a mere baseball fan, does not think that Washington did itself any particular amount of good by the series of trades which have lifted the face of the Nats. He can see, however, great logic in one or two of the moves, notably the shifting of Spencer and Marberry to other clubs. Good players both, neither added much to the harmony of the team, and harmony is a vital ingredient in the making of a good ball team.



The Marberry and Spencer trades were in the interests of harmony, not ability. Walter also can not see any cause for shouting in the coming here of Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart, except if you look at them in this way: That Clark Griffith has removed two of Washington's outstanding jinxes. Their records against the other clubs in the circuit has not been as imposing as their records against Washington.

Joe Cronin has a better-knit club to work with then he had, Johnson believes. There is more unity of ideas on the squad, the players should get along with each other better, and while he believes that the team has sunken to a new low in the matter of good base running, the improved hitting power should more than offset this drawback. West will be missed—definitely.

So says Walter.

And speaking of Walter, don't be surprised some day to wake up and read the announcement of his buying a minor league club. With the managerial doors of the big league closed to him for the time being—and his appetite for baseball being what it is—the logical path of Johnson is in the direction of ownership of a bush league unit. Mere managership of a minor league club wouldn't pay him enough to feed his whippets.

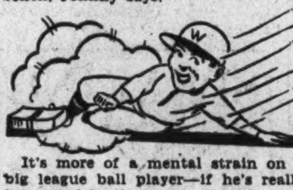
Clark Griffith took some money out of his right hip pocket yesterday and transplanted the kale to his left side pocket, when he sold Johnny Gill, outfielder, to Chattanooga. Johnny slugged .323 with Birmingham last year. Washington has had him on option for a couple of years, since he batted in the .340's for Baltimore and led the league in home runs.

Dave Harris gets the somewhat dubious honor of being the first Nat to sign up for next season. The slugging sheriff sent up his signed contract to the front office yesterday. He signed it on Thursday, a day before Al Thomas sauntered in and came to terms. Both took cuts.

Ossie Bluege has a queer stunt to keep himself in shape. He drives his car out into the unclaimed wastes of Rock Creek Park, parks it and then drives a golf ball as far down the vale as he can hit it. He trudges down after it and runs back.

The poignant miseries of sitting on the bench were outlined in full in a lugubrious interview with Johnny Kerr yesterday. Johnny is in great physical shape as a result of consistent golfing with Tom Flaherty, George Riley and a couple of other incurable fans, has high hopes of getting in the line-up more times next season than last. It's too tough on a fellow, this balancing the bench, Johnny says.



It's more of a mental strain on a big league ball player—if he's really interested in the team—than it is to be out on the field playing. On the field your activities actually ease your mental processes. Johnny says you can get injured on the bench, too, when a rookie, so wrapped up in the game being played out on the field, slide into you spikes first in sympathy with a slide out at second base.

Johnny doesn't quite see how he's going to break in—he has great respect for the caliber of Buddy Myer, Joe Cronin and Ossie Bluege—but he has hopes, and more pep and vitality than the rest of the club put together.

Joe Cronin writes that he has been keeping his arm in shape writing replies to letters from unemployed baseball players.

St. Paul Beaten By Howard, 42-31

Displaying a smart and new "figure eight" passing attack with the elongated Pinn and "Showboat" Ware alternating pivots, the Howard University Bison quint last night downed the St. Paul College five, from Lawrenceville, Va., before a crowd of 1,100 in the university gymnasium, 42-31.

Alston, Jones and Martin played consistently for the visitors, but were not fast enough to get away, being held for 2 baskets each.

American U. Downs St. John's, 26 to 18

American University hopped back on the victorious bandwagon last night at A. U. gymnasium when the smooth-working Eagles soared over St. John's of Annapolis by a score of 26 to 18, using secondaries to complete the game. Big Oscar Sells, as usual, led the attack of the locals, dominating the floor play and shooting end of the fray.

In the preliminary Western High defeated American U. Reserves, 30 to 16.

FAMILY FEUD IN SOCCER TODAY

Heights Grays Meet Blacks for Capital City Lead.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS GRAYS and Columbia Heights Blacks will meet in a struggle that is attracting city-wide attention. The family feud will take place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the Silver Spring field and will be the feature of the Capital City League matches.

The latter circuit will return to the Monument Grounds for the first time in many weeks today when Concord and Rockville will play on Monument Field No. 2 at 2:30 o'clock. Marlboro will be host to Brandywine in the third Capital City League tilt.

Park View and Bloomingdale will play the feature Recreation League game on Monument No. 1 at 2:30 o'clock. Other Recreation games will be Dux vs. Virginia Avenue at 1:30 o'clock, Monument No. 2; Rosedale vs. Raymond at 1 o'clock, Monument No. 1, and Chevy Chase vs. New York Avenue at 1:45 o'clock, Monument No. 2.

The Heights Grays are at the top of the Capital City League and the Blacks are in second place. Although the two teams are members of the same organization, a keener rivalry exists than between any other teams in the circuit. Manager "Spud" Coleman, of the Blacks, is freely predicting victory for his team while Manager Edwards of the Grays, merely smiles and says, "Wait."

Coleman's optimism may be of some help but followers of both teams are inclined to think that Edward's unboastful attitude is better founded as the Grays appear to be two or three goals stronger than the Blacks. A record crowd is expected at the Silver Spring field to view the tilt.

COLLEGE TEAMS IN 11 EVENTS

Court, Boxing Contests to Feature

St. John's, Brooklyn, Plays G. U. and Colonials Here.

V. P. I.'s Five, Ringmen at Maryland Saturday Night.

THE college athletic sphere is dominated this week by two events, similar in scope, namely the invasion of the famous basket ball team of St. John's College, of Brooklyn, to meet Georgetown, at Tech High Friday night, and George Washington at G. W., Saturday night.

Vying for interest, and probably the attraction which will lure the largest crowd of the week, is the twin-bill at Maryland University Saturday night in which the Old Liners will meet V. P. I. in both basket ball and boxing.

In all there are eleven topics of collegiate sports interest this week. Boxing and swimming are represented once, the other nine events being basket ball.

Saints Coming Here Unbeaten.

Several times claimants of the national championship in college basket ball circles, St. John's, as usual, comes to Washington undefeated and eager to add two more niches on its basket ball six-shooter. The two games should represent the peak of competition here for the season. The local squads will play from the dangerous vantage point of having everything to gain and not much to lose, while St. John's will be in there trying to protect an honor already gained, so to speak.

It is difficult to expert the games at long range. In a sense Georgetown seems to have more chance of losing than G. W., for it meets the Brooklynites when they are full of stamina, and tackle them on a big floor, while G. W. will take them the second night in G. W.'s own little lair. However, it may work the other way just as well, with Georgetown meeting the visitors before they had gotten their sea legs, and G. W. taking them on when they were completely warmed up.

One of these rare intracity games will pit Catholic University against Gallaudet Saturday night at C. U.

Last year's meetings between St. John's and the two local giants were high lights of the season. The Saints beat Georgetown by the score of 27-26 and took G. W. into camp by 40-37.

Georgetown, on Saturday, plays its second game in the Intercollegiate Basket Ball Conference, which is composed of Pitt, Carnegie Tech, Temple and West Virginia, besides Georgetown. The Hoyas meet Temple, whose record to date is one win and two losses. Pitt and Carnegie are tied for first place, with two wins and no losses. Georgetown has no wins and one loss and West Virginia no wins and two losses.

Vines Is Defeated As U. S. Netmen Tie

Crawford Beats American Ace as Sydney Earns a 6-to-6 Draw.

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The United States, after winning three previous series, today was held to a draw by Australia in their fourth and final tennis contest, each side winning six matches.

Jack Crawford, Australia's No. 1 player, repeated his earlier conquest of H. Ellsworth Vines, jr., Wimbledon and American champion, winning their singles encounter, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3, and then paired with H. O. Hopman to defeat Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, 11—6, 4—6, 6—2, 6—2, in a doubles encounter. Van Ryn, suffering from a strained shoulder, defaulted to Vivian McGarth in another singles encounter.

The lone American victory of the day was won by Vines and Keith Gledhill, United States doubles champions, who defeated McGrath and A. Quist, 6—2, 8—6, 6—4.

Virginia's Ring Team Defeats Duke, 5 to 3

University, Va., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The University of Virginia boxers opened their defense of the Southern Conference title tonight with a 5-to-3 decision over the Duke ringmen before 3,500 spectators, who braved sleet and snow.

Bobby Goldstein, Virginia captain and national collegiate champion, had an edge over Rip Scott in every round.

In the 145-pound affair Leroy Sides, of Duke, gained a close decision over Tom Fishburn. The Cavalier went down on his knee for a count of nine in the second round, but came back in the third to administer stinging punches that had Sides groggy and barely hanging on at the bell.

8-INCH CUPS IN FLORIDA TOURNEYS

Sarazen Says Tampa, Miami Will Stage Novel Events.

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 14 (A. P.).—Gene Sarazen, rapidly recovering from an attack of influenza, said today his recent suggestion for an experiment in golf competition with 8-inch cups would be followed on two courses in Florida soon.

"I have received telegrams from Tampa and Miami," said Sarazen at a Santa Monica hospital, "and tournaments will be played at both places.

Tampa will put on its annual Gasparilla open with 8-inch cups and the Miami-Biltmore Country Club will have a $5,000 open of 72 holes with the same size cups.

"There ought to be a thrill a minute under such conditions. Listen for the roar of the gallery when the boys begin to sink some of their shots from off the greens.

"Certainly none of the players will be able to get away with the complaints we hear now of missing two and three foot putts.

"I am very anxious to get well and take a shot at some of these big holes from 20 feet away."

The open champion of the United States and Great Britain probably will be able to leave the hospital Monday.

SPEAKING —OF— TENNIS

By BOB CONSIDINE

THE burning of the Fifth Regiment Armory in Baltimore last week definitely removes the only outlet of indoor tennis in this region, while at the same time the rumor goes around that Big Bill Tilden will visit Washington later this week with more than a friendly trip in mind.

Bill has just formed what he calls Tilden Tennis Courts, Inc., the chain store idea in indoor tennis arenas, with each set of courts having a professional and Tilden acting as a sort of pro extraordinaire with a roving assignment, partially managing and partially instructing.

Per capita there are as many tennis players in Washington as in any city in the United States. It is hard to estimate just how many are actively engaged in the game—in the summer months—but it must run nearly 25,000. If it is only half that large a figure, there nevertheless remains a vast number of people who want to play tennis and can not, because of the absence of indoor courts.

D. C. Tennis in Period of Disorganization.

Tennis in Washington is in a period of disorganization. From the time of the war up until about 1926 the sport was a compact mass, with the Dumbarton Club as the hub of all activities. There was a tight little organization of all the best players in town and it so happened that they were established in their various business, with the means of maintaining the club and keeping tennis a cohesive unit.

About 1926 a whole new crop of kids began to control their forehand drives and once they began to make inroads on the theretofore unsullied domains of respectable skill, the older and more influential men—not particularly relishing public defeat in the bigger tournaments at the hands of the younger men—naturally began to lose interest in the game. With them drifted the real meat of tennis and little by little they gave it up almost entirely.

The burden was shifted on the young men, and women for that matter, and they have not the means nor security of position to do anything about it. Consequently the game has broken from its tight little stockade and spread all over the place. Tournaments are held by one group, to which another group is uninvited. Tennis functions in little states, independent of one another.

Washington Tennis Body Has Helped Some.

The coming of the Washington Tennis Association has helped to bring the unwieldly game under some kind of logical heading. But to date this government of local tennis has had little support. The ideal government of tennis is a sort of autocracy, some rich and eccentric dodo who believes it's a great sport and is willing to spend money on it. This is the type of person who built the Dumbarton Club and passed on. This is the type of person who would take a chance on erecting indoor courts today.

Perhaps Tilden, with an eye to nothing except the business of the situation, will fill the bill.

Speaking of Tilden, the gaunt old boy published his world professional rankings Friday. He rated himself second, behind Martin Plaa, the Frenchman, who bumped off both him, Nusslein and Kozeluh during the so-called world professional championship in Europe back a couple of months. Tilden rates Nusslein as the best prospect. The ranking runs:

1. Plaa (France); 2. Tilden; 3. Nusslein (Germany); 4. Karel Kozeluh (Czechoslovakia); 5. 6 and 7 (ranked on a par), Albert Burke (France); Bruce Barnes (United States), and Roman Najuch (Germany); 8. Robert Ramillion (France); 9. Vinny Richards (United States); 10. Emmett Pare (United States).

It will be interesting to see Richards' "First Ten."

Gilbert Hunt, perhaps the most promising tennis player ever developed here, has been honored by the ranking committee of the U. S. L. T. A., by being placed sixth among the juniors in America. Last year he was fourth in the national boys division. That's maintaining one's place in national matters darn well.

The U. S. L. T. A. has placed Gilbert in the thick of some really outstanding tennis players. Frankie Parker, ranked 12 in the men's division, heads the junior ranks. Gene Mako, placed at No. 2, is rated another Vines on the Pacific Coast. Hunt is three full notches ahead of Marco Hecht, the national junior indoor champion.

ARMY POLOISTS WIN.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Two Army polo teams won games today. The Junior-Varsity administered a 12-to-8 licking to the First City Troop, of Philadelphia, while the Varsity defeated Princeton, 10 to 7.

DOWN the FAIRWAY
by DAVE HERMAN

JUST as the winning touchdown in a football game, the deciding goal in basket ball and the ninth-inning wallop in baseball, there are certain shots in golf that carry tingling suspense.

Has your heart ever skipped a beat as you watched sterling performers attempt difficult shots, with the outcome of the championship hinging on that particular stroke?

During the latter part of the 1932 season, it was this writer's pleasure and privilege to be an eyewitness to certain performances on the links that have left an indelible impression on his memory.

Here are a few thrills:

Johnny Fischer, University of Michigan's intercollegiate champion, shot a par-cracking 69 the first day of the national amateur at Five Farms. If the 20-year-old Ohioan could maintain the same pace in the second round the medal would fall his way, as would a new national amateur qualifying record. He led Jack Westland by 2 strokes.

Needed Birdie 3 for New All-Time Mark.

Came the next day. Fischer was out in 33, 1 above par. He started back 4-4-4, and was trapped twice on the two short holes, taking 4s on each. As the rangy collegian reached the thirty-sixth hole he needed a birdie 3 to shatter the all-time medal mark claimed jointly by the peerless Bobby Jones and D. Clarke Corkran.

The home hole is 385 yards, and is none too easy to play, the shot to the green being exceedingly hard. A tremendous clouter off the tee, Fischer pounded his drive 290 yards, the ball taking a long roll. He whipped his second within 8 feet of the cup, and a crowd of more than 2,500 roared its approval. Here was drama, real drama. Fischer already had played two remarkable shots, and he needed only a putt to render victory complete and establish a new record. He putted calmly after much deliberation. The ball headed straight for the cup and curved to the left, missing the hole by inches.

Flushed with the heat of the day Johnny Fischer walked off the green. Cameras clicked. Golf admirers swarmed around him.

He had finished with a 73, and with his 69 of the previous day wound up with a 142 and a tie with Bobby Jones for record honors.

Brawner Shows Value of Perseverance.

Johnny Brawner, a serious-minded week-end golfer, was one of eight entries from the Nation's Capital in the 1932 national amateur classic. His 155 in the sectional test was 12 strokes back of the pace setter, Chandler Harper.

Brawner went out the first day at Five Farms and shot a 79 This meant a strong comeback in the second round to swing him into the match-play circle. Not since Roland MacKenzie had qualified in national amateur competition had Washington been represented in the important matches, but there was no Mackenzie to uphold the prestige this year.

The outlook was dark as Brawner finished the first 9 of the second 18 in 39. Coming back, he saw new hope. He shot five consecutive 4s, which made him even par for the incoming journey. He missed his putt and took a 5 on the thirty-third. Confidence came to him after he parred the next hole in 4.

On the short 35th, he spanked his tee shot 30 feet from the cup and canned his putt for a birdie 2. Brawner's second shot rested on the edge of the 36th green. It looked like a 4. A missed putt meant a 5.

Brawner chipped up beautifully, the ball having enough spin to hug the hole and stay in. It was a birdie 3. He rang up a 34, the best nine outside of Don Moe's 33. He had a 73 for the 18, a 152 for the 36, and tied for 32d qualifying position. It took him one hole the next day to win the play-off from Willie Turnesa and then came a crack at Ross Somerville, the eventual champion.

Ouimet's Fine Recovery Nets Qualifying Place.

Francis Ouimet, the veteran Boston shotmaker, made a brilliant recovery from a trap to get his par 4 and slip in the qualifying circle at Five Farms by a margin of 1 stroke.

Opening the defense of his championship, Ouimet was pitted against a former Washington sensation, George Voigt, in his first round match. Ouimet was unbeatable. It is doubtful if any one could have equaled his playing that particular day. Ouimet birdied the first hole, the third, fourth, sixth and seventh as a result of spectacular drives and second shots, and primarily deadly putting.

At the end of the ninth, he was 4 up on Voigt, and his 30, 5 below par, broke Bobby Jones' national amateur record at Minikahde in 1927 by 1 stroke. Voigt shot a 34.

That wasn't all. Before the match ended on the short thirteenth, Ouimet had scored a deuce as a parting shot. Eight under fours, six under par for the 13 holes!

In the afternoon Ouimet was arrayed against young Sidney Noyes, of Ardsley, N. Y. Two thousand were at the home hole, at which point they were even. Noyes' second struck a tree. He recovered beautifully to get on the green. Ouimet was on in 2, 25 feet from the cup.

Goodman's Game Effort Fails.

Sandy Somerville went to the thirty-fifth hole at Five Farms after sinking a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the previous hole. He now was 2 up on poker-faced Johnny Goodman, with the national amateur title at stake.

Goodman was down but not out. He wanted this victory more than all the riches in the world.

Somerville unlimbered his iron shot on this hole, a par three 155 yards. It cut a bit to the left but stayed on the green 40 feet from the pin. Here was Goodman's chance. He used a mashie, but the ball struck a bank in front of the green, staying in the rough.

Undaunted, Goodman chipped up to within 2 feet of the cup, and several thousand cheers rent the air. Silent Sandy tapped his ball. It died at the lip of the cup.

Somerville became the first Canadian in history to win the championship.

Peacock Realizes Ambition In Title Event.

Roger Peacock dreamed dreams of winning the District championship.

In the important event at Chevy Chase, he led 7 strokes at the end of the first 36 holes. He maintained his triumphant pace for the next [illegible] He was so far in front that he would have to crack wide open to lose the title.

In the morning he was 20 feet from the cup on the fourteenth, not an easy putt. He studied it carefully and sank it for a birdie 3. That afternoon on the short thirteenth, he was faced with a difficult 40-footer, looked over the situation and ran down his putt for a birdie 2. On the eighteenth, his hundreds of friends were pulling for him to finish with a birdie. Roger had a 30-footer facing him. The ball stopped an inch from the cup. The title was his.

Being Three Down Fails to Worry Smith.

Three strokes back of the first-day pace setters in the National Capital Open at Kenwood last November was Horton Smith, the well-known Joplin Ghost. Smith had a 74.

Thirty-six holes were on tap that Sunday. Smith went to work. He finished the morning with a 73. He made the only birdie 3 of the tournament on the first hole with two glistening shots for a flying start in the afternoon. Every shot was needed, with Denny Shute leading at the end of the morning's round.

Smith finished the afternoon nine in 34, even par. On the twelfth, 488 yards, a par five, he played safe with his second. Then came the big shot—a well-timed niblick from over 100 yards to within two inches of the pin. It was a birdie 4. He missed a birdie by inches on the fifteenth. From the back edge of the "punch bowl" sixteenth, he rammed in a 40-footer for a birdie.

His drive on the eighteenth split the fairway, he sent his second shot, an iron, dead to the pin and played safe for his par four—a 69 and first-prize money.

Norman Fischer Woodmont Head.

All officers of the Woodmont Country Club have been elected and new members of the board named. At present the club is in the midst of a membership drive, with indications that whatever goal has been set will be reached.

Here are the Woodmont officers: Norman Fischer, president; Dave Bear, vice president; Morris Simon, chairman of green committee; William Illch, chairman of the golf committee; Leopold Freudberg, assistant chairman; Albert Steinem, treasurer; Daniel B. Gusdorf, secretary, and Stanley Fischer, financial secretary.

Gilbert Hahn, Leopold Freudberg, Harold Levi, Mike Jacobs, Arthur Sundlun and Simon Nye are the new board members.

"I'd like to be able to clout the ball like Al Houghton," Dave Thomson, humorous little professional of the Washington Golf and Country Club, said after watching the Kenwood marvel breeze through eighteen holes on the Cherrydale layout recently.

Houghton, by the way, turned in a 70, which is brilliant golf for this time of the year, but for Houghton just another of his fine performances.

"And his shots stuck, never moved," Thompson said. "Goodness knows what kind of score he would have turned in on a day when the ground would offer more carry to the ball."

"Why, his birdies of the tenth, thirteenth, fifteenth and seventeenth were as fine as any I have even seen. And can that Houghton use his irons and run down his putts? I saw him take six 1-putt greens."

Thomson, loud in his praise of the Kenwood pro's golfing ability, sees no reason why he shouldn't go far in the professional game.

You've heard about the thirteen colonies?

Well, there are almost that many springing up around the District's many golf courses.

Russell B. King, an ardent golfer from the Washington Golf and Country Club, says that golf clubs prove the magnet for homes near the courses.

"Colonies around the clubs are fast growing," King declared. "Men who believe in playing the links daily would prefer living as near as possible to the courses, and as a result there is quite a demand from real estate offices for homes situated just a drive or mashie shot from the clubs."

Over in Cherrydale, where the Washington Golf and Country Club is located, there are dozens of families (members of the organization) living within striking distance of the course, and only snow and rain prevent the golfers of these groups from playing their daily rounds.

The same holds true for Columbia, Manor, Indian Spring and other District courses.

R. P. Hines, greenskeeper at the Manor Club for eight years and Congressional for two, will return home in another week after having gained valuable information about various golf courses in the land of Dixie.

Hines left on a motor tour of fourteen Southern courses, an outstanding feature of his jaunt being a stop on Friday at Augusta, Ga., to attend the opening of Bobby Jones' "ideal" golf course.

Among other layouts Hines will have visited before he returns for his duties at the two clubs are Sedgefield, in Greensboro, N. C.; Pinehurst, Hills, in Augusta; Municipal, in Jacksonville; St. Augustine, Fla.; Forest Hills, in Tampa; Gulf Stream and Boco Raton (the latter is where Tommy Armour reigns as pro), at Del Ray, Fla.; Miami-Biltmore, in Coral Gables, Fla.; Seminole, in Palm Beach; Savannah, Ga.; Sea Island, in Brunswick, Ga., and Yeaman's Hall, in Charleston, S. C.

Hines expects to return with new ideas about the upkeep of golf courses. With Manor looming as the possible site for the sectional trials for the national amateur event in August, efforts will be made to whip the Norbeck, Md., course into one of championship caliber. While the ninth will undergo a change—its green has too much slope for putting—reports are adrift that the fifth and sixth holes will be remodeled so as to add to the length and severeness of the layout.

WEST VIRGINIA COAL OWNERS CUT WAGES

Officials and Office Staffs Get Reduction Along With Miners.

Mount Hope, W. Va., Jan. 14 (A.P.). A wage reduction approximating 15 per cent, and affecting about 9,000 employes, was announced today by the New River Coal Operators Association.

The salaries of officials and office workers were cut 15 per cent, but the rate for workmen did not follow that percentage altogether, officials said. It was intended, they added, to equalize the wage scale in the field.

Coal loaders hereafter will receive 30 cents a ton instead of 35 cents, and motor operators will receive $3.06 a day instead of $3.60. The rate for machine cutting was reduced to 5.5 cents a ton, and the rate for pick coal to 35.5 cents.

Day wages will run from $1.70 for coupler boys to $3.40 for machine runners and blacksmiths. Overtime will be allowed after an eight-hour day.

The cut will be put in effect Monday by all operators in the association.

Pepco Rate Parley Set for Tomorrow

District's Answer to Company's Proposal Is Delayed Until Then.

After announcing that the reply of the Public Utilities Commission to the Potomac Electric Power Co. in the electric rate controversy would be made yesterday, Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman, at the last minute stated that a conference had been scheduled with the power company officials tomorrow morning and that no announcement would be made until after that time.

Although the commission has indicated that it would reject the counterproposal of the power company, which would revive the consent decree and make permanent the basis of rate-fixing suggested for this year only, it has been carrying on negotiations with the utility that may lead to another compromise.

Litigation over the new sliding scale for rate fixing is now pending in the District Court of Appeals, where it was taken after the commission won the initial bout in the District Supreme Court.

Tifereth Israel Ladies Plan Ball on Tuesday

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Tifereth Israel Congregation will hold their ninth annual ball and entertainment at the Almas Temple Tuesday night. The officers of the organization are, Mrs. N. Katzman, president; Mrs. M. Brotman and Mrs. F. Frankel, vice presidents; Mrs. J. Alpert, treasurer, and Mrs. J. Cohen, secretary.

On the committee arranging the entertainment are: Mrs. S. Winters, Mrs. A. L. Schiller, Mrs. S. Harrison, Mrs. S. Levinson, Mrs. H. Cohen, Mrs. S. Beloff, Mrs. M. Reichgut, Mrs. S. Rod, Mrs. J. Hurowitz, Mrs. B. Reuben, Mrs. J. Witt, Mrs. A. C. Sells, Mrs. C. Rubenstein, Mrs. A. Goldman, Mrs. F. Sherr, Mrs. A. Glasser, Mrs. R. Clabin and Mrs. F. Garfel.

Senators Will Be Speakers to Club

"Washington's Challenge" Is Meeting Topic for Annual Session.

Several senators and representatives, in addition to many leading residents of the city, will participate in the annual meeting of the Monday Evening Club at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at Barkers Hall, at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Included among the speakers will be Dr. John O'Grady, director of Catholic charities of Washington; Arthur Moses, president of the Travelers' Aid Society; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson and Allen Burns, national director of Community Chest councils.

The meeting's topic will be "Washington's Human Challenge for 1933."

Advisory Council Approves Designs

Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection, District of Columbia, reports that at the last meeting of the Architects' Advisory Council, the following plans received the rating of "approved:"

Inauguration to Stop Work Upon City Streets

No work on any streets or highways will be permitted from February 20 to March 7, Capt. H. O. Whitehurst, District director of highways, announced yesterday, because of the heavy traffic expected in Washington during the presidential inauguration period.

All public utility companies, municipal underground departments and others were notified that work started prior to this period must be completed by February 25, so that no street will be torn up after that date.

Hebrew Home to Elect Today.

Officers and members of the board of directors of the Hebrew Home for the aged will be elected at 2:30 p. m. today in the Home's auditorium, 1125 Spring road northwest. Reports on annual activities will be presented by committee chairmen. More than 55 guests were provided with a home last year, the funds being supplied by the Community Chest.

Universalist Players Rehearsing.

Rehearsals are in progress by the Universalist Players for their production in February of Juliet Wilbur Tomkins' play, "Once There Was a Princess." The play will be given at Perkins Hall, Sixteenth and S streets northwest, with Alice Mahoney taking the lead part.

Agencies to Join in Efforts To Make Inaugural Success

Personnel of Several Committees Announced by Chairman; Requests to Participate in Parade Pour In; Definite Plans Not Yet Completed.

Every agency in the city will contribute its talents toward the success of the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, it was stated yesterday as chairmen of the various celebration committees formulated plans of action and announced names of their assistants.

A general committee whose membership was drawn from business, artistic, religious, civic and theatrical circles will direct the activities planned for the enjoyment of Washingtonians and visitors over the inaugural period.

The traditional note of simplicity for the ceremonies dictated by Thomas Jefferson, the third President, will be broken this year only with one evening of pomp and color at the official ball for charity benefits.

More than 30 requests to participate in the inaugural parade, which will be reviewed by Mr. Roosevelt a few hours after he becomes President, have been received by the inaugural committee, and 100 additional requests are expected.

Definite plans for the parade have not been completed and a grand marshal has not been selected. Traditional inaugural paraders, units of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marines will have first places reserved for them, and the National Guard units will come second.

A distinctive and colorful souvenir program which will list the activities customary for the day will be compiled by the program subcommittee of the general inaugural committee, according to an announcement by J. Fred Essary, chairman.

The general entertainment in connection with the inaugural has covered a period of two or three days prior to the ceremonies in the past. This year the committee's work may have to be enlarged, as inauguration day itself falls on Saturday and many of the visitors are expected to remain in the city over the week-end.

Mr. Essary, who is Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, announced the personnel of his subcommittee as follows: Merle Thorpe, Ernest G. Walker, F. M. Russell, Marshal Morgan, Howard M. Berry, Representative Sol Bloom, Mrs. C. G. Lee, jr., Miss Eleanor Connelly, James D. Preston, Charles P. Light, Lawrence B. Campbell, Clifford K. Berryman, Charles H. Tompkins, J. R. Hildebrande and John B. Erwin.

Mrs. John Alan Dougherty, chairman of the inaugural ball committee, of which Corcoran Thom is treasurer and Mrs. John R. Williams is the vice chairman, announced its membership as follows:

Executive—John Poole, chairman; Col. R. H. Harper, Col. Arthur O'Brien, Joseph Tumulty.

Advisory—Admiral Mark Bristol, chairman; Mrs. Ray T. Baker, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Malcolm McConihe, Swager Sherley, Mrs. Charles Warren.

Box—Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, chairman; Mrs. Edwards Shouse, vice chairman; Mrs. Mark Bristol.

Tickets—Roland Robbins.

Patrons and patronesses—Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, chairman; Mrs. Robert Lansing, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner K. Wells.

Distinguished visitors—George Garrett, chairman; Moran McConhie, vice chairman; Perry Belmont, Julius Garfinckel, William Phelps Eno, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Col. Campbell Hodges, Frank Jelleff, the Rev. Coleman Nevils, Dr. H. C. Marvin, John Barton Payne.

State, Senate and Congressional Women's Committee—Ruth Bryan Owen, chairman; Mrs. Sol Bloom, Senator Hattie Caraway, Mrs. Marcus A. Coolidge, Mrs. R. S. Copeland, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Representative Mary P. Norton, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Cordell Hull.

Army, Navy and Marine Women's Committee—Mrs. George V. Moseley, chairman; Mrs. W. A. Moffett, Mrs. B. H. Fuller.

Arrangements—Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, chairman; Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, Brig. Gen. Hugh Matthews, Admiral Ridley McLean.

Floor—Maj. Gen. H. V. Moseley, chairman; Admiral W. A. Moffett.

Publicity—Oliver Owen Kuhn, chairman; M. W. Flynn, vice chairman; Ira Bennett, J. J. Fitzpatrick, E. W. Pyle, Miss Janet Richards.

Radio—Frederic William Wile, chairman; William Hard, vice chairman; James Chinn, Don Craig, jr., Robert D. Heinl, D. J. Kauffman, William Moore.

Poster — Frederick A. Whiting, Eben Comins, vice chairman; Clifford K. Berryman, Miss Mary Howry, Mrs. Miguel Paz, Mrs. Hamilton Lamar.

Membership of the general entertainment committee, of which Huston Thompson is chairman, and John W. Childress, Forrest Rutherford and Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, are vice chairmen, comprises:

Clarence A. Aspinwall, George W. Bean, R. Wilmer Bolling, Miss Sibyl Baker, John F. Brawner, Julian Brylawski, C. J. Boothby, Col. Wade H. Cooper, Enoch A. Chase, Mrs. A. D. Dentists to Hold Clinic Wednesday

Completion of Building at Walter Reed Will Be Celebrated.

Celebrating the completion and occupancy of the new Dental School Building at Walter Reed Hospital, Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, surgeon general of the United States Army; Lieut. Col. Robert H. Mills, director of the Army Dental School, and the entire staff of the dental school will be hosts to the District Dental Society at the annual clinic and demonstration of the society at the hospital next Wednesday.

The clinics will start at 3 p. m. and the meeting will be featured by a dinner at 6:30 o'clock with the compliments of the District Dental Society. All clinics and demonstrations will be given by members of the Army Dental School, showing the results of research work conducted during recent years. These clinics and demonstrations will be held simultaneously, men whose clinics show a definite technique repeating them before several groups.

An evening program will be held in the auditorium of the school building at 8 p. m. Wednesday with Col. Mills presiding.

Promise Wins Probation For Speeding Motorist

Convicted of reckless driving, William R. Metz, jr., yesterday was placed on probation by Judge Isaac R. Hitt, in Police Court, when he promised to turn in his driver's permit and refrain from getting behind the wheel of an automobile.

Metz, according to Policeman J. R. Jenkins, drove his machine out Fourteenth street extended at a speed of 55 miles an hour. Metz also faces a traffic charge in Maryland, he having crossed the District line before he was overhauled.

Press Club Toasts Its Past Leaders

Sol Bloom Wields Baton While Kvale Makes Bow as Soloist.

Echoes of the past, reaching back 25 years, were recalled last night by members of the National Press Club, as they honored their past presidents in one of the opening events of the silver anniversary of the club.

An array of distinguished talent was drawn out by the event, which brought Representative Sol Bloom in a new role of orchestra leader, as he took the baton away from Leon Brusiloff to stampede the orchestra into the strains of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady." Representative Kvale appeared as a soloist.

The former presidents of the club were cheered as they were introduced and their administrations briefly recalled. A high light of the program was the presentation of old movies of the Press Club, including one reel which showed the "Press Club Children," many of whom are now in the business themselves, on the White House lawn.

Montgomery Hospital Report.

A meeting of the finance committee of the Women's Board of the Montgomery County General Hospital was held last week at Drayton with Mrs. Mortimer O. Stabler, which was followed by a meeting of the Executive Committee at which the superintendent, Miss Elizabeth Jones reported the great enjoyment by the patients of the large Christmas tree donated by the Young Men's Club of Olney.

Mu-So-Lit Forum Tonight.

Richard Hurst Hill, of Howard University, will speak on "The Influence of the Jewish Synagogue on Christian Traditions," at a public forum to be held at the clubhouse of the Mu-So-Lit Club, 1327 R street northwest tonight at 6 o'clock.

Reciprocal Tariff With Erin Sought

Kevin Barry Council Asks U. S. to Demand House-Cleaning by Britain.

A resolution asking support of all Irish American Associations for the passage of a bill by Congress granting reciprocal tariff concessions with Ireland was adopted yesterday by the Kevin Barry Council of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

The council also voted to demand that Congress delay any consideration of England's war debt until England "first cleaned house by abandoning her unjust, illegal and immoral demands on Ireland."

A cable congratulating Ireland's president, Eamon de Valera, on his economic policy was dispatched.

Antibeer Meeting At Masonic Temple

Capital Residents Plan to Protest Black Bill Next Sunday.

A mass meeting of Washington residents in protest against the Black beer bill, designed to legalize the sale of that beverage here, is being planned for next Sunday afternoon. It will be held at 3 o'clock in the Masonic Temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

The program will consist largely of short speeches from local business and professional men, who object to the prospective competition of the beer trade.

$100,000 Estate Left By Cooke, Will Reveals

An estate valued at $100,000 was left by Levi Cooke, prominent lawyer, who died on December 24, it was revealed yesterday when his will was filed for probate in District Supreme Court. George R. Beneman, Mr. Cooke's law partner and executor of the will, filed the instrument.

Real Estate valued at $25,000 and personal property valued at $75,000 made up the estate. After several bequests are made, Mrs. Mary Warner Cooke, the widow, is to have the remaining estate. Attorney F. W. Weitzel represented the executor.

Carolina "Congress Night" Is Called Off

The North Carolina State Society has called off its "Congress Night" scheduled for tomorrow night at the Shoreham Hotel in accordance with the mourning period eventuated by the death of former President Coolidge. The reception and dance, however, will be held on Saturday next.

The North Carolina State delegation in Congress is expected to attend Saturday night's affair. Dancing and cards will be in order after the reception.

WindowCleaner's Widow Given $7,500 in Death

Mrs. Louella Brown, widow of Raymond E. Brown, an employe of the Atlas Service Co., yesterday was given an award of $7,500 for the death of her husband while he was carrying on duties for the company.

Through Attorney R. B. Harman, Mrs. Brown showed that her husband fell from a window while he was engaged in window cleaning. The case was decided in her favor by Robert J. Hoage, deputy compensation commissioner, but was appealed by the Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co. After a full hearing of all the facts, Justice F. D. Letts upheld the commissioner. The award is payable $6.06 a week.

Miss Clawans Convicted Again on License Charge

Granted a new trial by order of the District Court of Appeals, Miss Ethel Clawans was convicted in Police Court yesterday on a charge of being an unlicensed broker in that she sold return trip railroad tickets without having a license.

Miss Clawans was convicted in February of 1932 of the same charge, but that conviction was set aside when the Court of Appeals held that Assistant Corporation Counsel Raymond Sparks had introduced testimony prejudicial to Miss Clawans. No sentence was imposed, it being agreed that the matter would rest until next Saturday for an investigation.

Byrns, (Democrat), Tennessee, who probally will head the House conference group, will return to the Capitol from a sickbed.

San Quentin Prisoner's Wounds in Fight Fatal

San Quentin Prison, Calif., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Stabbed several times in an affray at San Quentin prison, Raymond Boyd, 24, a convict serving a sentence of five years to life for burglary, died late today.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CAPRICORN."

IF JANUARY 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:40 a. m. to 9:50 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m., and from 5:45 to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11:15 a. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m.

More than the usual amount of irritability will be apparent on this January 15. It will prove a noisy day generally; nerves will seem to be on edge. Quarrels and petty outbursts of temper will be visible and will not be confined to the young.

The child born on this January 15 will ever be looking for excitement of some sort. If it can not be found, look for him to stir some up on his own account. These little ones are great practical jokers, and occasionally frightful teasers. Never still or idle for a moment, these children, if properly guided into right channels, will accomplish much.

If January 15 is the date of your birthday, you fall probably into that group of persons who seldom give way to their emotions. You are an uncomplaining person, even when everything seems to go wrong, you grin and bear it. Possessed of excellent judgment, you are usually able to look well ahead, and in so doing you often head off difficulties and even disasters that others would not be able to forestall. You are inclined to be a bit restless; you like change, change of work, way of living, change of conditions of play, &c. You are not, however, a dissatisfied person, and more than likely you are quite happy going along as you are.

VIGILANCE ORDERED AS ROBBERY WAVE GRIPS WASHINGTON

Gasoline Employe Is Robbed at Gun Point; Thieves Hit Man on Head.

Aroused by the unusually large number of robberies, burglaries and purse-snatching reported during the early part of last night, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards shortly after midnight issued an order to all precinct policemen to be vigilant in their efforts against such depredations.

Marshall Holland, employe of a gasoline filling station at Seventh and G streets southwest, was held up at gun-point by two young men late last night and robbed of $34. While one of them held him at bay with a gun, the other rifled the cash register.

Probably the same men robbed William C. Starkey, employe at the Eleventh and M street station. One of the men was armed with a revolver. Between $20 and $25 was taken from the cash register.

Get Watch in Robbing.

Three rough and shabbily dressed colored men attempted to hold up and rob the grocery store of Allen Oliver at 110 Fourth street northwest, last night, but their attempt gained them little loot.

Entering the store, they shouted, "Stick 'em up!" James A. Bell, a helper, disregarded their command and dashed out a rear door to notify police. Holding Oliver at bay, they opened the cash register, but found it empty. Nonplussed, one of them grabbed Oliver's watch and the three fled.

Had they searched Oliver they would have found about $100 in his pockets. He had removed the money from the cash register preparatory to closing for the night.

While the family of Mrs. Mabel E. Johnson, of 2129 Randolph street northeast, was dining on the first floor last night, a burglar sneaked in the front door, ascended the stairs and ransacked the second-floor bedrooms, stealing $149. Mrs. Johnson told police $9 was taken from one bedroom and $140 from another.

The burglary was discovered by members of the family after their dinner had been finished.

Struck with the butt of a revolver when he attemped to resist them, Marion T. Carnes, 1806 Ontario road northwest, was held up and robbed of $12 by two colored men late last night in the lobby of an apartment house at 1816 T street northwest.

Only slightly injured by the blow, Carnes went to Emergency Hospital, where he was treated for lacerations to his scalp and later reported the holdup to police.

Running Man Chased.

Louis Carliner, 47, of 2717 Bladensburg road northeast, was slugged and beaten with an iron pipe at his home early yesterday when he resisted a would-be robber.

As is his daily custom, Carliner started early to do his marketing. He was attacked as he was opening the door to his garage. Though badly beaten, he forced the robber to flee. His money was not taken.

Their suspicions aroused by the undue haste of a colored man seen racing along Third street northwest, Policemen G. R. Wallrodt and Slattlemyer yesterday afternoon followed him in a First Precinct patrol car. They halted their man near John Marshall place northwest and found a woman's purse in his possession.

The prisoner was later identified by Miss Elizabeth N. Seaton, 102 E street northwest, as the man who seized her purse as she was walking on Third street near E northwest.

Is Robbed of $5.

Carl A. Hubscher, a taxicab driver, was robbed of $5 late last night by a colored man who entered his car at First street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. The man told him to drive to 1521 Eighth street northwest. When they arrived, the robber grabbed the driver around the neck and took the money from his pocket. He then jumped from the cab and fled down an alley.

Henry L. Simmons, 20, a taxicab driver, was slugged and robbed of $5.20 last night by two colored men, who also stole his cab. The robbery occurred in front of 318 V street northwest, when Simmons came out of the house at that address. Simmons was taken to Emergency Hospital, where it was reported he had suffered a possible fracture of the skull.

Jewelry valued at $250 was stolen from the home of George F. Neitzey, 4318 Thirteenth street northeast, last night. Entry was gained through a rear basement door in which the glass had been broken.

While walking along Fifteenth street near Potomac avenue southeast, a colored man last night snatched the purse of Miss Mildred Reed, 1311 L street southeast.

Mother Ill

Won't Be Able to Attend Rites for Son Who Died as She Hurried Here.

Final rites for John Curry, 10, who died a week ago from injuries suffered when he was struck by a hit-and-run driver, will be held this afternoon, but his mother, Mrs. Mary Curry, will be unable to attend.

Suffering from a deep cold when she learned that her son had been seriously injured, and unable to leave immediately, the mother finally made a hurried trip by plane from St. Louis to be at his bedside. But she arrived too late to see him alive, and the trip aggravated her cold until it developed into pneumonia. Hopeful that she would recover sufficiently to attend the funeral, she requested that it be delayed. She is reported to be improving at Gallinger Hospital, but the funeral could not be delayed longer.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today from Taltavull chapel, Seventh and E streets southwest. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

The boy was run over by an unidentified motorist January 2, at First and G streets northwest. He died in Sibley Hospital five days later. He had been staying with his uncle, Arthur Morgan, 510 Second street northwest.

POLICE RAID REVEALS BAR AND ALLEGED BOOZE

A 50-foot bar was discovered by a Federal and police raiding squad when they broke through several doors at 518 Tenth street northwest yesterday. Ten barrels of alleged beer and a quantity of alleged whisky was found on the premises. Patrons were allowed to leave the establishment, but two men were arrested on a charge of illegal possession.

THREE-ALARM FIRE IN DOWNTOWN AREA

Building Swept by Flames as Patrons Watch Movie Next Door, Unmindful.

While several thousand excited bystanders watched firemen battle a stubborn three-alarm blaze at the Century Restaurant at 309 Ninth street northwest, last night, movie patrons at the Little Palace Theater nonchalantly watched the picture, unmindful of the excitement over the fire next door.

The blaze, thought to have been started by a stove which was used for baking in the rear of the second story of the building, spread quickly through the three upper floors. No one was in the building.

Most of the fire equipment in the downtown area answered the fire calls and spectators lined the streets for many blocks around. Police rerouted traffic from the section for almost two hours as the firemen ran more than 20 hose lines to the blaze.

Although the fire was quickly put under control, additional alarms were sent in as it was thought there might be danger of an explosion of movie film in the theater next door.

Managers of the movie said all film was well protected and that although some smoke seeped in through the walls no one in the entertainment house noticed the excitement.

The fire marshal estimated the damage to the building at about $5,000. Victor Kissal is the proprietor of the establishment.

Freeman to Praise Coolidge Character

Bishop Will Pay Tribute to Former President at Cathedral Today.

In his memorial address eulogizing Calvin Coolidge at Washington Cathedral at 4 p. m. today Bishop James E. Freeman will emphasize the thirtieth President's Christian character in relation to his services to the Nation.

Among the special guests who will attend the memorial service in the great choir of the Cathedral will be many personal friends of the late President who were associated with him during his six years in the White House.

Among those who have signified their intention of attending the ceremony are Vice President Curtis, Secretary of Treasury Ogden L. Mills and Mrs. Mills, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde and Mrs. Hyde and Secretary of Commerce Roy D. Chapin and Mrs. Chapin.

TRAFFIC TOLL

TO DATE.

With all due respect to their small returns, Washington taxi drivers should take some kind of a course in careful driving. The average hacker is probably a good driver, but he should remember that there are other vehicles on the street besides his own. The citizenry is not made up entirely of "fares."

Many taxi drivers have a rather dangerous and unpleasant habit of stopping in the middle of the street, or anywhere, for that matter, if a prospective fare is sighted. The fact that the street may be a very busy one doesn't seem to make any difference. To make matters worse, he usually stops suddenly without any warning, and if there is a car following, the driver may not be able to stop in time to avoid a crash.

The accident figures to date are:

Deaths	6	2
Injuries	148	137
Accidents	270	234

"Be Careful!"

Marine Sergeant Is Suicide by Gas

Boy, 15, Taken Away From Him Recently Picked as Only Heir.

Sergt. Robert B. Halvick, 33, U. S. M. C., stationed at the department of operations and training here, ended his life early yesterday and entrusted all his personal effects and disposition of his body to a 15-year-old boy who had some time ago been taken from his custody by a court order.

The body was found by police slumped ina chair in the kitchen of an apartment at 100 Second street northeast, with gas flowing from five jets on the range.

In notes to the coroner and the commandant of Marines, Halvick asked that none of his effects be touched until the boy, a ward of the Board of Public Welfare, be notified. Dr. A. Magruder Macdonald, acting coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Knights of Columbus Will Welcome Leader

Knights of Columbus members in the District of Columbia have been invited by Leo D. Ward, State deputy for Maryland, to join with the Maryland Knights in a reception to be tendered Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight, on Wednesday.

The reception will take place at the Alcazar in Baltimore, and Supreme Knight Carmody will address the gathering. He is on a coast-to-coast speaking tour, but will not appear in Washington again because of a recent visit.

ELECTRICIAN PERMIT PROPOSAL APPROVED

Lawyer Attacks Job Held by Capt. Oram in District as Illegal.

Licensing of electricians in the District, under jurisdiction of a special examining board, was recommended yesterday by the House District fiscal affairs subcommittee in one of three bills favorably reported at a lively meeting of the group.

In the course of the hearings, Representative Allard H. Gasque (Democrat), South Carolina, charged District examining boards, particularly the plumbers' examining board, operate to keep out-of-town firms from fulfilling local contracts unless they get the cooperation of licensed Washington plumbers.

Oram's Job Attacked.

Jesse C. Duke, local attorney, charged that Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection in the office of the Engineer Commissioner, is holding his job illegally and that the post was unlawfully created.

The charges were made after Capt. Oram, appearing in behalf of the electricians' licensing bill, testified that the Commissioners approved the measure. He pointed out that any one at the present time can do electrical work in the District.

Other Bills Favored.

Two other minor bills were favorably reported, one revising the law under which the police property clerk disposes of property, and the other authorizing sale of a small parcel of land. No action was taken on a bill providing an extension of one year on sale of property for nonpayment of taxes, and bills licensing fuel hucksters and chain stores in the District.

Capt. Oram testified that plumbing regulations in the District are the most rigid in the country. At this point Duke charged Capt. Oram's job was officially referred to for the first time in the 1934 budget estimates. He said it was created while one of the Commissioners was out of the city and an Army officer on the District pay roll was filling in for him.

Man Is Hit-and-Run Victim.

Knocked down at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest by a hit-and-run driver, Walter Burns, 43, of 820 Sixth street southwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital yesterday for cuts and bruises.

POLICE SMASH WAY TO DOWNTOWN BAR AND ARREST 2 MEN

Find 10 Barrels of Beer and Customers' List; 15 Patrons Go Free.

A Federal and police raiding squad battered their way through several barred doors yesterday afternoon in the premises of 518 Tenth street northwest and discovered a 50-foot bar, ten barrels of beer and a sack of whisky bottles labeled Golden Wedding.

Concealed behind a sea-food restaurant, formerly known as Havana Joe's, the elaborate establishment was found to be operating in full blast when police entered. More than fifteen patrons were allowed to leave.

Proprietor Escapes.

Two men were arrested and a charge of illegal possession was placed against them. Federal agents stated that the proprietor of the establishment escaped.

Several barrels of beer were found on tap and additional barrels were found in the basement. The building, five stories in height, contained a large dance floor and dining tables on the second story.

The raid was directed by Lieut. George Little, in command of the police vice squad, who was accompanied by William Blandford, in charge of the Federal prohibition unit in this area. Eight men descended on the establishment.

Barred Doors Smashed.

Policeman R. E. Blick made a purchase Friday. Equipped with a warrant yesterday he attempted to gain entrance. He was recognized as a member of the police squad, and the raiding party had to break through several barred doors.

A list containing the names of "small time racketeers and a few prominent business and professional men was found by members of the squad. A sack filled with bottles of alleged whisky was found hidden in a closet.

The two men arrested gave their names as Patrick James O'Malley, 25, of the Tenth street address, and Johnny Jones, 32, colored, of 1416 Corcoran street northwest.

The raided place is next door to the quaint house in which Abraham Lincoln died and across the street from Ford's Theater.

Cullinane Is Held For Jury in Attack

Wise, Fellow Policeman, Is Freed at Hearing in Police Court.

Policeman Jeremiah J. J. Cullinane was ordered held for a grand jury hearing yesterday after he had been given a preliminary hearing in Police Court on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon upon Dr. George W. Beasley, colored druggist.

Luther C. Wise, also a policeman, who was held with Cullinane, was freed when Police Court Judge Gus A Schuldt ruled that the witnesses put forward by Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keogh had not sufficiently connected him with the alleged attack on the druggist.

Cullinane was ordered held in $500 bond. He was represented by Attorney James F. O'Shea, while Wise was represented by Attorney E. Russel Kelly.

William C. Westlake, of 426 Taylor street northwest, who went with a group of Washington Boy Scouts to the 1929 Scout Jamboree in England, this year will conduct a similar group to the World Jamboree at Godollo, near Budapest, Hungary.

Scouts from many lands will gather at Godollo for the two week-period from August 1 to 15.

Friends of College Boxing Increase Straw Vote Lead

991 Ballots Favor Use of High School Gymnasiums, Requested by Dean Fitzpatrick of Columbus University, While 20 Are Opposed.

Ballots from supporters of intercollegiate boxing in public school gymnasiums neared the 1,000 mark last night and increased the overwhelming lead in the straw vote conducted by The Post.

At this time 991 ballots have been received from persons voting "yes," as against 20 sent in by those who do not favor allowing the sport in District school gymnasiums. Yesterday's ballots totaled 338 in favor as against 3 opposed.

The result of the poll will be presented to the Board of Education Wednesday, when it will pass upon the application of Dean John B. Fitzpatrick of Columbus University for permission to use the McKinley High School gymnasium to stage bouts with boxing teams of other institutions.

Ballots will appear daily in The Post until Tuesday. They must be delivered to The Post before 7 o'clock Tuesday night so a complete tabulation can be made in time for presentation Wednesday.

Ballots printed in Friday's paper were without space for names and addresses. Persons using them should write their names on the face of the ballots. Any unsigned ballots received will be counted separately in the final reckoning.

BOXING BALLOT

Believing there is great interest in the controversy before school officials on the use of school buildings for amateur boxing, The Washington Post offers its readers an opportunity to express an opinion on the matter. The results of the poll will be presented to the Board of Education at its next meeting.

The question on which those interested are to cast their votes is:

DO YOU FAVOR THE USE OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS FOR AMATEUR BOXING?

Check the Proper Space.

MRS. BAYARD GIVES $388,000 BY LEGACY

Will of Widow of Diplomat Bequeaths $150,000 to George Clymer.

Specific bequests of $388,000 were provided for in the will of Mrs. Mary W. C. Bayard, widow of Thomas F. Bayard, who was one of the first ambassadors from this country to an European nation. Mrs. Bayard died January 8.

George Clymer and his wife, Susan, are given $150,000, and their children will share $30,000. The children of W. B. S. Clymer are given $50,000 and $10,000 is to be given Pinckney and Elizabeth Trapier. George W. White named with George Clymer as executors, is given $10,000 as is also Dr. Roland Cotton Smith. The grandchildren of George Clymer are to divide $5,000.

Mrs. Bayard provided liberally for charities. She gave $10,000 each to the Home for Incurables and St. John Orphanage; $20,000 to St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church; $5,000 to the Cathedral Foundation; $5,000 to the Seamen's Church Institute of New York City; $10,000 to St. Paul's (colored) School of Lawrenceville, Va.; $5,000 to Tuskegee Institute; $5,000 to the Albany (N. Y.) Humane Society.

The Washington Humane Society is given $5,000; the Washington Animal Rescue League is given $5,000; a like amount is given to endowment fund of Naples (Italy) Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals; $2,000 to the Ellen Prince Speyer Hospital, New York City, to establish watering troughs for horses.

Her butler, Benjamin Matthews, is given $2,000 and a $25,000 trust fund is set up for Edith Trapier, which goes to a nephew, George Clymer, upon the death of the first beneficiary. The remaining estate is split into thirds. One portion goes to Susan Clymer, the second third goes to the three children of George Clymer, and the last third is given to the grandchildren of George Clymer. Attorney C. F. R. Ogilby filed the will.

CAPPER URGES RENT CUTS IN RADIO PLEA

Warns Congress Will Act Unless Companies Make Further Reduction.

In a radio plea for further reduction in Washington rent levels, Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, chairman of the Senate District Committee, last night declared this group "is not going to be content with merely filing a report to the Senate and printing the hearings."

"Those are only preliminaries," he said. "If the real estate men of this city mean to reduce rents, let them do it now. For rents generally are too high. If this action is not forthcoming without delay, I think that Congress will recognize the urgency character of legislation on the subject."

Senator Capper commended the Washington Real Estate Board's directors for calling on owners to reduce rents wherever possible adding there is no doubt in his mind that further reductions can be made.

On the question of reviving the old rent commission, Senator Capper said:

"Among the lawyers there is a difference of opinion as to whether a new rent commission law would be constitutional. I have heard the argument on the part of the real estate interests that a rent commission law would not be valid because of the absence at this time of an emergency comparable to the crisis which we faced here in Washington during the war and in the years immediately following."

He gave it as his conviction, however, that there now is "an emergency in housing in the District."

He pointed out that 45,000 persons are out of work in the District, and that from 9,000 to 10,000 families are being assisted in paying rent by public and private agencies.

"The fact is as plain as it was last spring that rents in Washington are entirely out of line with rent reductions," he said. "They are likewise remaining at too high a level when compared with other commodities."

Chest Again Requests Donations of Clothes

George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of the Riggs National Bank and chairman of the liaison officers committee of the Community Chest, has issued another urgent call to all Chest liaison officers and church key men asking for old clothes for the benefit of the destitute of Washington. Mr. Vass is working in connection with the clothes conservation committee of the District of Columbia committee on employment, of which Col. Edward Goring Bliss is chairman.

"Three means of collection have been provided. Any fire engine house will receive bundles. A telephone call to National 7174 will bring a collector in person. All laundries have made arrangements to issue tags which may be fastened to bundles and these can be given to the regular laundry man or left at the laundry offices," Mr. Vass said.

Mrs. Volland to Preside Over Hall Ceremonies

Mrs. Fred L. Volland will preside at the annual ceremonies at the statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee in Statuary Hall at the Capitol by the United Daughters of the Confederacy at 4 p. m. Thursday.

An address will be given by Maj. Robert S. Huggins, vice commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Western High School Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Home and School Association of Western High School will be held Wednesday night at the school at 7:30 o'clock. The speakers will be Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of high schools, and Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of the junior college of George Washington University.

NORTHEAST TABBY WINS FIRST PLACE IN SPECIALTY SHOW

Kardnal, Aged 3, Captures 3 Points in Championship Race.

Red fur bristling with pride, emerald eyes gleaming, Woodridge Kardnal, 3-year-old tabby, owned by Mrs. A. V. Jennings, of 2014 Newton street northeast, reclined in the corner of his cage at Carpenters' Hall, Tenth and K streets northwest, last night and emitted a satisfied meow.

Head on his paws, Kardnal gazed steadily at a blue ribbon that had just been pinned on his cage. The ribbon classified him as the first winner in the red or orange tabby male open group and best cat entered in the specialty show. The award makes him a competitor for championship rights, with three points up and seven to go. To gain the other seven points, he will have to be entered in cat shows in other parts of the country.

Show Sets High Mark.

In leading the field in the specialty class of the thirteenth championship show of the Washington Cat Club, Kardnal gained preference over one of the finest collections of felines gathered in a single room in this city.

Some of them reclined on satin cushions; others have doll beds and little balls and rattles, dangling on strings from the tops of their cages, to play with. One husky had a toy mouse filled with catnip, which, to him, was more fun than a pantry full of the real variety.

Kardnal, however, was not the only one to win a championship award. Young Lochinvar, of Tempul (who hails from Bethesda, and not from the West), was selected as first winner of the cream or fawn male kittens. Lockinvar is owned by Mrs. A. M. Olmstead, of Bethesda, Md. Bellois Chyason was adjudged first winner in the cream or fawn female open. She is owned by Mrs. J. Fred Bellois, jr., of Pitman, N. Y.

Woodridge Frisky, also owned by Mrs. Jennings, took the first winner ribbon in the red or orange male open. Claudette of Woodridge also owned by Mrs. Jennings, was first winner of the red or orange female novice. Woodridge Coulette of Annroy, owned by Mrs. Roy White, of 1524 Gates street northeast, received the first-winner award in the red or orange tabby female open.

Specialty Show Awards.

Other awards in the specialty show were as follows: Lord Lyttelton, 11, entered by Miss J. L. Trout, of 701 Longfellow street northwest, first in the cream or fawn male novice; Bellois, Conqueror of Chinon, entered by Mrs. J. Fred Bellois, jr., of Pitman, N. Y., first in the cream or fawn male open; Bellois Chicken, also owned by Mrs. Bellois, first in the cream or female kitten; Princess Marsyl of Roseville, owned by Mrs. E. Briscoe, of 20 Franklin avenue, Hyattsville, Md., second.

Mitzi, entered by Mrs. Marie Bailey, of 436 New Jersey avenue southeast, first in the cream or fawn female novice. Princess Daphne, of Roseville, entered by Mrs. Biescoe, second in the cream of fawn female open.

Red Bud of Woodridge, owned by Mrs. Jennings, first in the red or orange male novice; Deece Diamond, entered by Mrs. J. W. Tiffaney, of 528 Madison street northwest, second, and Don Wankelo, entered by Mrs. Roy White, of 1624 Gales street northeast, third.

Gilshah Selaturah, owned by Miss H. J. Koehne, of 8801 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, second in the red or orange male open, and Garden Cliff Davie of Merricourt, owned by Miss M. E. Hantzman, of 312 Maryland avenue northeast, third. Gilshah Tanagra, owned by Miss Koehne, second in the red or orange female novice.

Woodridge Betty Ann, owned by Mrs. Jennings, first in the red or orange female open. Pinehurst Bienton, of Argyle, owned by Mrs. G. P. Kepler, of Fredericksburg, Va., first in the red or orange tabby male kitten. Goldust Diamond, owned by Mr. Tiffany, second, and Rainbow Diamond, entered by Mrs. Tiffany, third.

Woodridge Cat Placed.

Gilshah Xerxes, entered by Miss Koehne, second in the red or orange tabby male open. Princess Doreen of Woodridge, listed by Mrs. Jennings, second in the red or orange tabby female novice. Princess Rozanne of Woodridge, owned by Mrs. Jennings, first in the red or orange tabby female open; Princess Marygold, entered by Demavend Cattery, of 3707 Rhode Island avenue, Mount Rainier, second. Cuffy, listed by Mrs. W. H. Standenmayer, of 1826 Jackson street northeast, first in the short hair entries. Redhead, of Miami, entered by Mrs. J. W. Shorrock, of 604 Walbrook avenue, Alexandria, first in the red or orange tabby male champion group. Pal of Woodridge, owned by H. R. Dyer and Miss S. A. Dyer, of Clifton Terrace West, first in the red or orange neuter.

Claudette of Woodridge was adjudged the best opposite cat and the best novice in the specialty show. Redhead was selected as the best champion and the best short hair; Pinehurst Bienton, the best kitten; Pal of Woodridge, the best neuter.

Earle Matthews, of Florida, was judge of the specialty show. The regular show awards will be made today.

Sousa Honor

Southeast Citizens to Pay March King Tribute Tuesday Night.

The memory of the march king—John Philip Sousa—will be celebrated by citizens of Southeast Washington, where he was born and lived, on Tuesday night in the auditorium of the Buchanan School, Thirteenth and D streets southeast.

The late and most famous of Marine Band leaders will be presented in eulogy not only as to his musical mastery, but as to his taste for literature, sport and his civic interest.

The crashing, stirring marches that Sousa composed will not be neglected, and the Marine Band that he loved and built up will be present to play them.

"A Night With Sousa" Southeast Washington calls it. He was born in that section on G street between Sixth and Seventh street in 1854 in a house that still stands.

CAPITAL SOCIETY ENTERTAINS INFORMALLY DURING MOURNING PERIOD

Miss Marianna Harrison

February Promises to Be Exceedingly Active With Functions of Outgoing Administration

By EVELYN PEYTON GORDON.

IN spite of the period of official mourning for former President Calvin Coolidge, Washington society is actively planning informal parties, not secretly, but rather with the attitude "of what interest can this be to the public." Many of the cancellations of the past week have already been set for new dates, and the atmosphere of society is one of anticipation, far more inspiring than that of consummation.

The President and Mrs. Hoover, who had canceled numerous state functions, have already designated the new dates for the dinner to the Vice President, to be held on February 7, and the one for the diplomats on February 11. So apparently up to the last hours of the administration, the Chief Executive and First Lady will uphold their social obligations, and will not take advantage of the period of mourning as a loophole to serene and unbusied days.

The state receptions that have been canceled will take place if time can possibly be found in which to have them. Likewise many dinners planned for the Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson have only been postponed, and will be given after the ban of mourning is raised early in February.

Last week Washington welcomed two more "bachelor" ambassadors to society, in the persons of the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek, who arrived on Wednesday, and the Royal Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso, who arrived on Thursday.

Ambassador Patek comes to Washington from Moscow, where he has been for several years, busily strengthening the diplomatic relations between Russia and Poland. Mr. Patek has been eager to visit America all his life, and upon hearing of his appointment to Washington said, "Now my life's dream will be accomplished." Washington feels very kindly to the distinguished diplomat who comes here with such great expectations.

Signor Rosso comes not as a stranger but as an old friend to many who remember him from his former service here as counselor of embassy in 1926. Another "bachelor" ambassador is the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, who is still the most surprised man in Washington when questioned as to the date of his departure from Washington. For several weeks rumor persisted that the ambassador had asked for retirement because of length of service, and would soon leave for Istanbul to be succeeded here by the Turkish Ambassador to Paris, Fethi Bey. Mr. Ahmet Muhtar has recently leased one of Washington's most beautiful homes for an embassy, and is calmly planning a house-warming ball to be given shortly after the period of official mourning.

The Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel Freyre y Santander, is a member of the smartest diplomatic coterie, and is seen only at the most intime parties unless they are of a nature which, because of his official position, demand his presence.

Likewise Senor Dr. Felipe A. Espil, Ambassador of Argentina, who has been counted as Washington's most popular bachelor during his ambassadorship, and during his period of service here as first secretary of the embassy. Last week, however, Senor Espil was more busy than ever, for on Friday afternoon he attended the preview of the paintings of the Argentine artist, Senor Don Casareo Quiroz, who has been staying at the embassy. The ambassador gave a luncheon for Senor Quiroz last Tuesday when the art critics of Washington were invited to meet the famous "gaucho" painter, and the preview on Friday was attended by members of the Diplomatic Corps as well as by critics and smart society.

Further important acceptances to the invitation extended by the Arts Club of Washington to representative women to serve as patronesses for the Bal Boheme of February 6, at the Willard Hotel, have been received by Mrs. H. Hobart MacCubbin, chairman of patronesses for this event. Included in the list are Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Countess Antoinette Roncalli di Montorio, Mrs. C. J. W. Torr, Mrs. Coleman J. O'Donovan, Mme. Kitiyakara, Senora Don Dora Z. de Chevalier, Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., Mrs. Frederick H. Payne, Mrs. Ernest Lee Jahncke, Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Herbert Feis, Miss Martha L. Gericke, Mrs. Isaac Gans, Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, Mrs. A. Gordon Jones and Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong.

Dances of fanciful beauty in keeping with the spirit of the affair will be staged by members of leading dance studios in the city. A bright, particular star will be Miss Caroline

Envoy Host at Luncheon for Priest

Ambassador Claudel Assists New York Pastor to Build Church.

THE Ambassador of France and Mme. Claudel entertained at luncheon informally yesterday for the Rev. Father Pelletier, of the Saint Sacrament Order, who is building a church in New York, and is in Washington enlisting the aid of a number of the diplomats to assist him in the decoration of the church. The guests at the luncheon were the Ambassador of Argentina, Senor Dr. Felipe A. Espil; the Minister of Uruguay, Mr. J. Varela; the Minister of Austria, Mr. Edgar Prochnik; Mgr. Edward Buckey, of St. Matthew's Church, and the Second Secretary of the Embassy, Mr. Raymond Bousquet.

The Ambassador of Germany and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron have returned from New York, where they spent several days.

The Ambassador of Spain, Senor Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, has returned to Washington from New York, where he spent several days.

The Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Cintas will return to Washington the middle of the week from Havana, where they have been for several weeks.

The newly appointed Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, arrived in Washington Thursday and will present his credentials to President Hoover this week.

The newly appointed Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek, arrived in the Capital Wednesday, and is now established at the embassy.

The Minister of Canada and Mrs. William Duncan Herridge have returned to the legation on Massachusetts avenue after spending several weeks at their home in Canada.

The Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos are the guests in whose honor Mrs. Alexandra K. Anderson will entertain at tea next Sunday afternoon at the Washington Club. Among the other guests will be Senor Dr. Carlos Salazar, of the Guatemala-Honduras Boundary Commission, and his daughter, Senorita Margarit Salazar, and Dr. and Mrs. Alfonso Carrillo.

The Minister of Bulgaria, Mr. Simeon Radeff, is in New York, where he will remain until Thursday, when he will meet Mme. Radeff, who arrives that day on the Manhattan from Europe. Mme. Radeff has been at her home in Sofia for several months.

The Counselor of the Legation of Finland, Dr. Niilo Idman, will leave today for New York and will sail

Adolf Meyer, Adolph Schultz and Henry Sigerist, of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, in Baltimore; Mr. Jean Piccard, brother of the professor; Mr. Sylvester Dorian and Mr. Pierre de Salis, attache at the Swiss Legation.

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Grosvenor lane, Bethesda, will be hostess to the Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery County at their annual meeting on Monday, January 23, at 2 p. m. There will be election of officers and several speakers after the business meeting.

Lieut. and Mrs. George R. Burgess have arrived in Washington from Fort Amador, Canal Zone, Panama, and are stopping at the Carlton.

Supper Is Planned by Mrs. Harriman

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman will entertain at a small supper party on Wednesday night for Miss Lynn Fontanne, Mr. Noel Coward, Mr. Alfred Lunt and her daughter, Miss Ethel Borden, who are all in Mr. Coward's play, "Design for Living," after the performance of the play tomorrow.

Army and Navy League of Women Plans Drive

More Members Desired for Organization Which Maintains Clubhouse for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines; Mrs. Kellogg in Charge of Relief.

Mrs. Ben H. Fuller, president of the Woman's Army and Navy League and wife of the Commandant of the United States Marine Corps, is starting a drive for increasing membership in the league, which operates the Soldiers' Sailors' and Marines' Club at 1015 L street northwest. The clubhouse is ideally situated and has large, pleasant rooms where men may take their friends and where properly chaperoned dances are given.

The league was organized in 1887 with 6 life and 82 annual members and has grown largely since then. It has gone through several vicissitudes and has had several homes. The present clubhouse was bought in 1923 at a cost of $47,500. A gift of Mrs. J. H. Metcalf later permitted its enlargement by buying and restoring the annex.

Mrs. E. S. Kellogg is in charge of the relief committee and devotes much time, care and consideration to cases which can not be cared for by the Army relief.

Special gifts have been received from time to time and members of the league, by constant work in holding rummage sales, serving lunches at horse shows, giving card parties, &c., have carried on the club and relieved it entirely of indebtedness.

It is the hope of the league that the institution's very evident value as an aid in building up the morale of the enlisted forces of the Nation in time of peace may enlist the sympathetic support of the public and induce many new members to join. It is especially hoped that as many service people as possible, particularly in the Army and Navy, may be attracted.

Mrs. Hoover is honorary president of the league and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams are honorary vice presidents.

Mary Louise Lee Engaged to Marry

Mrs. Robert E. Lee Hall announces the engagement of her daughter, Mary Louise, to Mr. William J. Mileham, of Jersey City and Boston, the wedding to take place at an early date.

Mr. Mileham is now at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Adiministration and is a graduate of the Stevens Institute of Technology. He is a member of the Theta Xi Fraternity, Pi Delta Epsilon and Rhoda.

Mr. Curtis to Be Guest of Kansans

Annual Banquet of Society of State Will Be Held on January 28.

THE Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis, will be the guest of honor at the annual banquet of Kansas State Society on Janury 28, at the Hamilton Hotel. Senator Arthur Capper is president of the society and Miss Lola M. Williams is secretary and treasurer.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams have canceled the dinner that they were to have given on January 20 for the Vice President because of the official mourning.

Senator Frederic C. Walcott, of Connecticut, was a guest at a dinner given by Mrs. Alfred Jenkins Shriver, of Baltimore, at the University Club of Baltimore, in honor of Mr. Frank R. Kent on Friday. After the dinner Mr. Kent spoke on "Some Washington Personalities." Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and Dr. William H. Welch were among the guests.

First Junior Horse Show on Saturday

Ribbons and Cups Offered by Riding and Hunt Club in 11 Classes.

The first junior horse show of the season of the Riding and Hunt Club will be held Saturday at 2 o'clock in the clubhouse at Twenty-second and P streets.

Miss Margret Cotter, Miss Betty Couzens and Roland Dawson are the chairmen, and have announced there will be ribbons and cups for the eleven different classes taking place in the afternoon.

Entries are coming in from the Preece Riding School, the Riding and Hunt Club, the Shoreham Saddle Club, of Fort Myer, and nearby Virginia.

The District Night Horse Show of the Riding and Hunt Club on January 27 will be held in the clubhouse at Twenty-second and P streets, at 8 o'clock, with the District officials and their wives as honor guests.

Mr. Melvin C. Hazen is chairman of the committee composed of Mrs. A. D. Court, Mrs. William Hill, Mr. J. J. Cotter and Mr. W. C. Hanson.

There will be eight classes during the evening, with ribbons and cups for each class. Gen. William P. Mitchell and Dr. Robert Humphrey, of Middleburg, Va., will act as judges.

Many entries are expected, as any horse owned by a resident of the District of Columbia is eligible for one of the classes.

Many of the sportsmen of Warrenton, Middleburg, Fairfax Manassas and Nokesville, as well as Washington, are expected to enter their horses.

24 Students Coming From South Africa

A party of 24 university students from South Africa is visiting the United States under the auspices of the National Students' Federation, and will come to Washington on Monday next to spend three days here. The program of their stay in Washington has been arranged by Miss Louise MacCracken, acting on behalf of the Students' Federation.

The visitors will arrive at midday tomorrow, and after luncheon will call on the South African Minister, Mr. Eric Louw. They will then go on a sightseeing trip. Tomorrow evening they will be entertained in small groups at several Washington homes. On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Eric Louw, the South African Minister, will entertain his compatriots at a tea, to which he has invited members of the younger set in Washington. For that evening a dinner dance has been arranged at the Shoreham by the English-Speaking Union.

On Wednesday the visitors will lunch at American University, and that afternoon they will be entertained at a reception at George Washington University. The intervening hours on Tuesday and Wednesday will be spent on sightseeing trips.

Cup to Be Awarded at Iowa Reception

The Iowa Society next Saturday evening will hold a dance and card party at the Willard Hotel, at which time a silver cup will be awarded to the district in the State having the largest representation at the meeting. This is one of the outstanding events of the Iowa Society during the year, and gives an opportunity to meet friends and neighbors and to become acquainted with those from other sections of the State. The entire congressional delegation is expected to be present.

Arrangements are being conducted by Miss Gertrude Louis, one of the vice presidents, and Miss Maud Phillips, secretary of the society. The president, Col. H. S. Merrick, has extended invitations to other State officers, as well as to prominent Iowans residing or visiting in the city.

New York Society Dance on Tuesday

The annual dinner dance of the New York State Society will take place in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel on Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A feature of the evening will be entertainment presented on the floor of the ballroom which will include a number of unique and spectacular "bits."

The committee in charge reports this affair gives promise of being generously attended by New Yorkers, members of the society and their friends.

McKinley, who will lead the pageant as Aurora. Four men will represent the four winds of heaven and will be followed by a group of girls in a "Cloud Dance" directed by Alice Louise Hunter. The Evelyn Davis group will put on a vivid number, entitled "The Storm," and Marian Chace and Lester Shafer will present some of their pupils in "Rainbow Land," in which the use of colorful balloons and scarves will heighten the beauty of the dance. The dance episodes will close with the crowning of the eagle, represented by Miss Lisa Gardiner, who will also stage "The Bluebird Dance." In addition there will be seen other groups in rich and effective costumes who will contribute much of glamour to the pageantry of the ball's program.

During the evening a cabaret entertainment will be put on under the direction of Miss Marjorie Lowe, assisted by Mr. Donald MacDonald. This was an innovation last year and proved so popular that it is being repeated this season, with a new program of songs, musical numbers, skits and dances.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore G. Case, of Granby, Conn., are week-end guests at the Dodge. Mr. Case will return to his home today, but Mrs. Case will remain for the cause and cure of war conference, which will be held this week.

Mr. Donald Leasure entertained at the supper dance Friday evening at the Wardman Park Hotel. Others who gave small parties in the room were Mr. B. K. Enyart and Mr. James R. Wilson who played host to a small group.

On the occasion of their fifth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Friedlander were at home to their family and friends on Wednesday evening at their apartment in the Legation.

FURNITURE YOU BUY TODAY
LAST 150 YEARS....?

This beautiful Hepplewhite Chair, illustrated, was hand-made in our Baltimore shops 40 years ago . . . and still in use! In another 60 years it will be a genuine antique—a prized heirloom and triple in investment.

It is all hand-made in the same old sincere fashion as the great Masters in England and Colonial America of the Eighteenth Century built furniture—furniture that is always beautiful, never out of style, always admired and give you real satisfaction.

Because, we do not sell to furniture stores nor department stores—only direct to you as the Makers, its superior quality costs no more than the kind made in large quantities, lacking in intrinsic values and genuine lasting beauty.

Before making selections at furniture "sales" it will pay you to come to Potthast's—make critical comparison and see how very reasonable our prices are for superior quality.

Reservations Made For Repeal Party

Early reservations for the repeal party, to be given Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, in Broad Branch road, for the benefit of the Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform, indicate that there will be a large representation of District women taking part in the benefit entertainment.

Among those who have made reservations are Miss Ann Squire, Miss Maria Ewing, Mrs. Arthur McClintock, Mrs. Archibald Davis, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, Mrs. E. A. Mitchell, Mrs. George Marye, Mrs. Walter Denegre, Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. William Beverley Mason, Mrs. William Littauer, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. John Caswell, jr., Mrs. William Galbraith, Mrs. Horace Westcott, Mrs. Robert Hudson, Mrs. Agusta Boss and Mrs. Robert Bennett.

Bridge playing begins at 2:30 p. m. Other forms of entertainment provided include bowling, ping pong and backgammon. A large number of women have made plans to bring guests to tea at 5 p. m.

The party has been arranged to raise additional funds for the District division of the prohibition reform organization, of which Mrs. William Beverley Mason is chairman. These funds will be used for the intensive drive now being made to bring about repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Plans have been completed for a card party to be given by the Immaculate Conception Academy Alumnae at the school, 1554 Eighth street, on Thursday at 8 o'clock.

Miss Antoinette Borger, in charge of the arrangements, is assisted by the Misses Marie Gaegler, Margaret Kane, Katherine Bowers, M. Louise Sweeney, Helen Higgins and Elizabeth Danhakl.

Dance at Fort Humphreys by 13th Engineers

Regiment Entertains in Gym. Mrs. Schulz Resumes Monday At-Homes.

The big event of the week at Fort Humphreys was the regimental dance on Thursday evening in the gymnasium. The hall was decorated with the shields and flags of the various companies of the Thirteenth Engineers. The dance was well attended by the enlisted men, with the officers and their wives as guests. A number of marines from Quantico also were present as guests of the regiment. Dancing ended at midnight and every one voted the party a success.

Good progress is being made on the construction of the new bachelor officers building. The road to the location of the building, on the bluff overlooking the Potomac River, has been completed, and foundation work on the building is well under way. The new quarters will cost approximately $135,000 when completed, and will replace the present Harris Hall as housing for the bachelor officers of the post.

The series of entertainments for the officers of the post and their wives, which was mentioned in last Sunday's Post, has been canceled for one month because of the death of former President Calvin Coolidge.

Mrs. Ezekial, the mother of Lieut. Raphael B. Ezekial, has returned from Texas, where she was visiting relatives.

Prof. Yeager, head of the department of public speaking at George Washington University, gave a lecture on "The Art of Public Speaking" to the Company Officers Class on Tuesday, January 10, from 11 a. m. to 12 o'clock.

Mr. H. F. Payne, the Assistant Secretary of War, lectured to the Company Officers Class from 11:15 a. m. to 12 noon, Thursday, January 12, on the subject, "Procurement." All officers of the post attended the lecture, with the exception of those whose actual duties at the time prevented. Before the lecture the Assistant Secretary of War reviewed the troops stationed on the post, with the colored detachment of the mounted troops acting as escort.

Bay State Society Reception Friday

Final arrangements have been completed for the January entertainment and dance to be given by the Massachusetts Society in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel on Friday evening. As usual, the dancing will be enjoyed from 9 until 1 o'clock. The entertainment will consist of acrobatic dances by the well-known juvenile team, George and Ann Filgate, Lieut. Gov. Caspar G. Bacon, who will be in the city on Friday, has been invited and is expected to attend.

Frank E. Hickey, president of the society, announces that the committee on arrangements recently voted to postpone the congressional reception until the February meeting on account of the 30-day official mourning period in memory of former President Calvin Coolidge, who was also a member of our society.

Mr. Wilson McCray, chairman of the entertainment, promises some new entertainment features. The reception committee under the chairman, Mrs. Halert G. Shepheard, will welcome and make the old and new members feel at home.

You May Be Forty But WHY Be FAT?
For most people, there is really no reason to stay fat. Thousands hate fat yet fail to get rid of it because they do the wrong things. It is simple to control excess weight. Once you prove this for yourself you will regret that you did not get rid of fat months or even years ago.
The right way to reduce is Marmola. Marmola acts on the same principles that specialists follow in treating obesity cases. It supplies the normal element that the body itself uses. The result is that without discomfort excess fat disappears.
No starvation diet is required. No strenuous and possibly ill-advised exercise is necessary. Moderation helps, of course. But all you do is take four tablets each day. Then stop when you reach the weight desired.
You can't afford to stay overweight when natural reduction has become so easy and so practical. Try Marmola today. Start on the road to youthful beauty and slenderness. Just ask for Marmola at any drug store.

Clark Gable Runs Away With a Film He Was Loaned To

Every woman's man, Clark Gable, is starred in "No Man of Her Own," current offering at Loew's Palace Theater.

Borrowed from his own company, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, by Paramount, especially for this picture, Gable proves the wisdom of the choice by tucking the film under his arm and walking off with it, although he is given quite sturdy opposition for the honors by his leading women, Carole Lombard and Dorothy Mackaill.

Gable will add to his legion of admirers in this one. His work in the role of Jerry "Babe" Stewart, big-time gambler and connoisseur of feminine charm, is topnotch throughout, and is marked by a deftness of touch not especially noticeable in his other pictures.

Perhaps it is because of the steadying sureness of that grand little trouper, Dorothy Mackaill, who in this one has a fiery role slightly reminiscent of the part she played in her highly successful "Safe in Hell."

Carole Lombard's beauty and acting are distinct assets, too.

"What is this thing called love?" Gable asks himself when, after cutting a wide swath through the affections of innumerable women he has loved and left (including Miss Mackaill), he falls so heavily for Miss Lombard that he marries the girl. And that isn't half of it! She actually reforms the "Babe," who for years had bidden defiance to the police while he sheared the lambs steered his way by Miss Mackaill. What happens when la Mackaill "tells all," and the authorities demand their pound of flesh, makes for absorbing film fare which you'll probably hear discussed later in the week, if you're a woman, around the city's tea and bridge tables.

Clark Gable has just starred successfully in "Strange Interlude" and "Red Dust," and has played with some of the leading ladies of the screen.

Here Is Another Story Beginning, Do You Know—

That George Arliss started his stage career as a clown and that he later played in musical comedies?

That Joe E. Brown developed such strength in his hands as a circus aerial acrobat when a youth that he can today tear a telephone book in half?

That Ruth Chatterton's nickname as a child was Mike?

That Glenda Farrell, who has appeared in a number of crime and horror picture, can't even read a detective thriller, as it keeps her awake at night?

That James Cagney's first job after leaving school was an office boy for the New York Sun and that later he was a bundle wrapper at Wanamaker's?

That Kay Francis was born on Friday, the 13th?

That Preston Foster was a grand opera singer before entering pictures?

That Eleanor Holm, Olympic swimming champion, is the only member of her family who can swim at all?

That Aline MacMahon will only buy clothes made in America?

That Paul Muni is an accomplished violinist?

That Dick Powell's first job was with the telephone company in Little Rock, Ark., where he also sang in the church choir on Sundays?

That Edward G. Robinson made his first stage hit in a vaudeville skit written by himself?

That Helen Vinson declares that if she were ever forced to give up her screen career she would raise dogs and horses for a living?

That Joe E. Brown likes the sensation of a fast-dropping elevator?

That George Brent once had to flee his native Ireland in peril of his life due to his activities as a dispatch carrier for Michael Collins during the Irish Revolution in 1924? And that when the British authorities were about to discover his whereabouts in Scotland, he immediately hid out in England until he could arrange transportation on a freighter to America and that that is all over now and he has returned several times to England and Ireland?

Cloud Hopper.

Kay Francis is the most ardent flier in Hollywood. She has sworn off on train travel and will not use any but the fastest air lines.

Celebrated Novel Given a Gorgeous Cinema Production

Barbara Stanwyck and Nils Asther are currently portraying two such contrasting roles in "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen" at RKO-Keith's Theater as automatically to create interest in the love story of which they are the principals. Miss Stanwyck is a staid New England girl in China as a missionary, there to marry another of her calling; Mr. Asther, the Chinese war lord, Gen. Yen, who captures the New England girl and, with his Oriental love-making, causes that girl to forget that "East is East and West is West."

As this love story develops, the present changed conditions in China constitute a background that presents thrill upon thrill and, incidentally and importantly, has given Frank Capra, director of the picture, glorious opportunity, fully realized, to create a scenic background that will win for "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen" unstinted praise.

That such a love should end in disaster is natural. Gen. Yen loses the mighty empire he has created and in the one week, the time elapsing in the story, Megan Davis (Miss Stanwyck) lives a lifetime.

The picture is bound to prove a stepping stone for Nils Asther. He first came to American films from Sweden, in 1927. A long series of silent pictures in "the good old days" rapidly won fame for Asther. But then, like a bolt from the blue, came the talkies, and, though Asther excelled in French, Swedish and German, his English, to put it mildly, was not so good.

With thousands of others he went down almost to oblivion and then came the demand for the broken accents, and Asther again started to climb upward and back to his former niche. "Letty Lynton," with Joan Crawford, was the first; next, "The Flesh is Week."

Now comes "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen," and Hollywood, with its fan magazines, is saying much of this actor and what is ahead for him.

Miss Stanwyck reached the films from the stage. Five outstanding pictures are to her credit: "Ladies of Leisure," "Miracle Woman," "Mexicali Rose," "Forbidden" and, now, "The Bitter Tea of Gen Yen."

The picture now showing at RKO-Keith's is an adaptation from the Grace Zaring Stone novel of the same name, and in the supporting cast are such well-known players as Walter Connolly and Gavin Gordon.

Wallace Beery as Wrestler, Plus an Insane Band Act

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer again brings to the screen Wallace Beery, whose sensational roles in "The Champ" and "Grand Hotel" have placed him high on the ladder of fame. His latest vehicle, "Flesh," with Karen Morley, Ricardo Cortez and Jean Hersholt carrying the supporting leads, presents him as a big-hearted German.

Frank and Milt Britton have been acclaimed by the drama defenders as the maddest, wildest and funniest act in the theater today, and are headlining the vaudeville bill this week. The Britton Brothers are far from the class of juveniles in vaudeville circles. They just celebrated their twentieth anniversary as partners in this show of fiddle, cello and bow busting over one another's heads. Bob Hope, the nationally known comedian, is presented as an extra added attraction.

As Herr Polikai, Beery plays a wrestling waiter in a German beer garden, where he meets and marries, Karen Morley, an American girl, who has been abandoned by her dancing partner, Ricardo Cortez. He becomes wrestling champion of Germany, and then comes to the United States to seek the world's title. Here he and the girl become entangled in the scheming of Miss Morley's former lover, who tries to make Polikai accept the dictation of a crooked wrestling ring.

The story is an original by Edmund Goulding. It was adapted to the screen by Leonard Praskins and Edgar Allan Woolf, with dialogue by Moss Hart, coauthor of "Once in a Lifetime."

John Ford, who directed "Arrowsmith," "Airmail" and "The Iron Horse," among other successes, directed Wallace Beery for the first time in "Flesh."

Others on the stage are Betty Jane Cooper and Lathrop Brothers in "Six Feet With a Single Thought." "The Versatile Juvenile Comedian," Jerome Mann, in his "One Mann Revue," and "Jest Acrobatics," Mady and partner, complete the vaudeville program.

Phil Lampkin and the Loew's Fox Orchestra are presenting the weekly overture.

Clark Gable, Carole Lombard in "No Man of Her Own" —Palace.

Purnell Pratt in "Red Headed Alibi" —Columbia.

Columbia Feature Story of Country Girl and the City

"Red Haired Alibi," from the novel of the same title by Wilson Collison, is now playing at Loew's Columbia Theater, with Theodor von Eltz and Merna Kennedy featured.

Christy Cabanne, who directed "Red Haired Alibi," chose his cast with an eye for the peculiar qualifications that each player possessed. As a result, the finished picture is said to be striking in the accuracy of its characterizations.

Theodor von Eltz, suave and handsome, portrays a man of the world who is not so conscientious as to be hindered by moral scruples. Merna Kennedy, in the title role, is a red-haired country girl who learns about the city from one of its leading racketeers.

Others in the cast are Huntley Gordon, Purnell Prall, Fred Kelsey and Arthur Hoyt.

The narrative deals with a girl possessed of beauty, but lacking a speaking acquaintance with the pattern of life in the modern manner. Her innocence, or ignorance, leads her into marriage with a big-time racketeer who uses her to shield himself from a crime that would give him the principal seat in the electrocution chamber of the penitentiary.

The program is completed by a comedy, a pictorial reel and the Paramount News.

A TRIO KEEPS THE FAITH; THE NEW RIVALRY BEGINS

By NELSON B. BELL

ALTHOUGH Mr. Noel Coward, I believe, strikes no heroic pose as one of the world's major emancipators, in the title of his newest play, coming to the National tomorrow night, he has at least hit upon a suggestion of which the world, at the moment, stands in desperate need.

At this juncture in man's scramble for the rosier rewards of his, in a manner of speaking, advanced civilization, a practical and workable "Design for Living" would not do any harm.

While, without as yet having viewed the Coward comedy that is being so eagerly awaited in New York, it may with reasonable surety be assumed that Mr. Coward undertakes no panaceas in his new work, it may also, with no less certainty, be taken for granted that he adds considerable gayety to a period in its progress in which the theater stands in urgent need of enlivening.

The whole trend of Mr. Coward's career to date has been in the general direction of prodding a lethargic and solemn stage out of its comatose gravity with a provocative, pungent and pointed wit.

* * * *

IT is Mr. Howard S. Benedict, whose talents are being currently devoted to what Mr. Wallace Munro, another of the craft, whimsically terms an avant courier, who makes it possible to examine with some minuteness the graph of Mr. Coward's experience in the theater.

At the age of 32, then, Noel Coward may well be called a veteran of the playhouse. Beginning as a child actor—a stigma which time has largely removed—he has played in farce, dramas and in musical productions. Moreover, he is the author of nineteen plays, musical comedies, revues and light operas.

If Mr. Coward's accomplishments are relatively breath-taking, it is not hard to discover that his entire career has been pitched toward some such exciting result.

Born in Teddington, England, he joined Charles Hawtry's provincial repertory players—the same Charles Hawtry who gained such wide renown in this country years ago in "A Message From Mars"—at the age of 12, in the company of such other young hopefuls as Estelle Winwood and Gertrude Lawrence.

After an absence of two years from the stage, the season of 1916 found him touring through the provinces in that old reliable standby of recent generations, "Charley's Aunt." At the end of the war, he came back from service to perform in Cosmo Hamilton's "Scandal" and his career was really beginning to gather some headway.

* * * *

THE Coward versatility was first put on view in a show called "London Calling," in which he served as author of the book, lyrics and music, as well as playing the leading role of song-and-dance man.

Having written several plays, he came to New York in the summer of 1921 to submit them to our leading producers. But our leading producers, either actually or as a species of subterfuge, all were "away for the summer."

His funds running low, Coward sought out Lynn Fontanne, whom he had known in London, to make a small loan until he had received payment for some magazine stories. It was during that summer that Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and Noel Coward, who were then enjoying no greater eminence than the promissory prestige of being known as likely young actors, decided that if they ever should become stars, they would appear some day in a play to be written for them by Coward.

The result of that agreement, made more than eleven years ago, is the present engagement of the three stars in "Design for Living."

* * * *

RETURNING to England, Coward wrote "Hay Fever," revived last season in the Belasco Theater by Constance Collier; "Fallen Angels," "Easy Virtue," "On With the Dance," a revue, and, finally, "The Vortex." His other appearances in this country were in "This Year of Grace," his revue, and in "Private Lives," in which he played opposite Gertrude Lawrence for three months on Broadway.

It also should be recorded, says Mr. Benedict, that Coward is the author of several Charlot revues, of "Bitter Sweet," which introduced the blonde loveliness of Evelyn Laye to American audiences; "Cavalcade," just released by Fox in its film form, with an all-English cast, and "Words and Music," a highly successful revue which is now playing in London.

Of all his performances, the one which gave him the most pleasure was when he played Stanhope in "Journey's End" for three performances with an English amateur company in Shanghai. This was during a world cruise. His two passions, incidentally, are the theater and travel.

In fact, "Private Lives" was written while Coward was a passenger on a British battleship in the China Sea and "Design for Living" while he was aboard a freighter in the Pacific Ocean last spring.

WITH the results of the national balloting on the ten best pictures of the year so fresh in mind, every screen offering, at least during the next few weeks, will be looked upon specifically as Karen Morley, Wallace Beery in "Flesh" —Loew's Fox.

Bette Davis in "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" —Metropolitan.

Warden's Story of Prison Life Goes Into Second Week

To accommodate the thousands who are anxious to witness it but were unable to see it during its first week showing, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," First National's tremendous picturization of Warden Lewis E. Lawes' human document of the same name, has been held over for a second week.

Warden Lawes is the one and probably only man who has looked so deeply into the innermost hearts of prison inmates that he could draw so vivid a picture of the human side of the men beyond the law. He has been sitting on the lid of a human volcano at Sing Sing for many years and knows from intimate association the powerful passions that stir the souls of the men housed in that institution.

"20,000 Years in Sing Sing" condenses into one story the most dramatic and spectacular incidents in his career as warden. These include the humorous and the romantic sides of the prisoners as well as thrilling episodes and the grim tragedies in the lives of the leading personalities whom Sing Sing has housed.

An exceptional array of short subjects supplement the feature, including Eddie Cantor in a reissue of one of his most popular shorts, "Getting a Ticket," in which the pop-eyed comedian creates many laughs in his tussle with the arm of the law.

Constance Cummings in "The Billion Dollar Scandal" —Earle.

Federal Intrigue Basis of Feature Showing at Earle

The program for the current week at Warner Bros. Earle Theater is headed by "The Billion Dollar Scandal," Paramount's sensational expose of Government intrigue, with Constance Cummings, rapidly rising young screen star, in the featured role.

"The Billion Dollar Scandal," said to be a finely conceived and finely directed melodramatic romance, tells the story of one Partos, who becomes the man of the hour and the champion of 120,000,000 people when he exposes plans of a "deal" which Washington Government officials and financiers put over on the Government, details of which he had heard discussed. "Fingers," young brother, whom he is trying to give a chance in life, falls in love with the daughter of the financier who has planned the national swindle, which complicates matters for the time being, but which is eventually straightened out with the young lovers finally finding complete happiness.

The stage program features the charming Grace Hayes, radio star and Shubert musical comedy favorite. Other acts are Joe Laurie, jr., the pint-sized author-comedian and his company of comics; Sylvia and Clemence and the Andrini Brothers in a song and dance offering; Les Gellis, two pantomimists from France, and Maxine Doyle, mistress of ceremonies.

The program is completed by special short reel subjects, the Graham McNamee Newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude.

Wiseacres who have witnessed the split-up of many a famed stage and screen team agree that at least one such partnership is as inevitably bound together as, for example, ham and eggs.

The partnership: Robert Armstrong and James Gleason.

Their latest coappearance: In "The Billion Dollar Scandal," this week's screen offering at the Earle. They are featured in it with Constance Cummings, Olga Baclanova, Frank Morgan, Irving Pichel and Warren Hymer.

Other stage and screen partnerships have lasted for years, only to break up because of financial or professional jealousy—arguments over respective shares in the profits, arguments over "stealing" of lines, arguments over advertising billing.

The Gleason-Armstrong partnership, however, will endure because such matters have not entered into it, wiseacres agree. For eleven years, ever since they played in the same stock company in Milwaukee, they have appeared together. But without fail, each has tended to his own business deals; each has looked after his own role, his own billing, without worrying what the other was to do about it.

Chain Gang Story By Jim Tully Has Pat O'Brien in It

Seldom does the screen reflect such bold, passionate, vivid drama of a purely elemental nature as it does at the Rialto Theater this week, where a truly great and startling picture is being shown to Washington audiences for the first time.

The production in question is none other than the film version of "Laughter in Hell," adapted from the best-selling novel of that rough-and-ready American literary genius, Jim Tully, who did "Circus Parade," "Beggars of Life" and "Shanty Irish."

Pat O'Brien of "Front Page" fame, is the featured player and critics have hailed his performance as his finest. In the supporting cast, under the direction of Edward L. Cahn, are Merna Kennedy, Douglas Dumbrille, Gloria Stuart, Arthur Vinton, Tom Brown and Berton Churchill.

"Laughter in Hell" is an epic of the strife and struggle of penal life in the chain gangs, which are already under fire in State and National affairs.

Rounding out the Rialto program are a number of selected screen novelties, plus the latest Universal News, with Graham McNamee as the Talking Reporter.

The most picturesque figure in American literary life is the man who wrote "Laughter in Hell."

The man is Jim Tully.

He wrote "Circus Parade," "Passing Strangers," "Jarnegan" and "Beggars of Life," all of them fiction successes.

His rise to fame is as good as any novel he ever conceived. Born in Ohio, Tully was early in life left an orphan. He was sent to an institution and grew up in surroundings that made him, in later years a keen, quick appraiser of humanity. He came to know abuse, poverty and the calloused side of humanity.

As a "hobo," he traveled the roads of America, learning the "inside on life," finally turning to the prize-ring for a livelihood. Being Irish, stockily-built, bull-necked and courageous he was willing to try fighting, but he soon saw the error of his choice and gave it up.

It was Henry L. Mencken who gave him the encouragement to try writing in a commercial way. Mencken even bought some of his short pieces for the American Mercury.

With this indorsement, Jim Tully wrote his first book, then his second and his third. "Circus Parade" made him famous; "Shanty Irish" added to that fame; now "Laughter in Hell" has fixed him in the writing firmament.

His works are realistic, strong, vivid, sometimes brutal in their forcefulness. But that is the life he has seen at close range—and he knows it.

As he says: "I write what I know."

Noel Coward and the Lunts in a New Coward Play

Noel Coward Does Comedy for Lunts And Noel Coward!

Beginning tomorrow night at the National Theater, Max Gordon will present Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and Noel Coward in "Design for Living," Mr. Coward's new play, which will be seen here prior to opening on Broadway.

During the last eight years, Mr. Lunt has played an amazing variety of roles under the aegis of the Theater Guild—a bootlegger in "Ned McCobb's Daughter," a Mexican emperor in "Juarez and Maxmilian," a Viennese barrister in "Caprice," a gentleman thief in "At Mrs. Beam's," a Russian youth in "The Brothers Karamazov," an egomaniac in "Meteor," the Earl of Essex in "Elizabeth, the Queen" and a Hapsburg in "Reunion in Vienna."

Among Miss Fontanne's list of characterizations are the title role in "Elizabeth, the Queen," Nina in "Strange Interlude," Ilsa in "Caprice," Eliza in "Pygmalion," Grouchenka in "The Brothers Karamazov," Raina in "Arms and the Man" and the Actress in "The Guardsman."

Mr. Coward describes "Design for Living" as a comedy about three people who love each other very much. In it, he makes his fourth appearance on the American stage. He was also seen in "The Vortex," "This Year of Grace" and "Private Lives."

In addition to the three stars, the cast includes Campbell Gullan, Gladys Henson, Phyllis Connard, Ethel Borden, Alan Campbell, Ward Bishop, Philip Tonge and Macleary Stinnette.

The play has been directed by Mr. Coward. The settings have been designed and supervised by G. E. Calthrop.

Five Travel Talks At National Start Sunday, Jan. 22

How many of us have expressed the wish to travel around the world? Even though the chances for most of us are remote, the idea thrills us and then we return to our daily routine with a hopeless sigh.

New hope springs forth, however, when we learn that E. M. Newman, master traveller, offers all of us the opportunity of making the fifty-thousand mile trip with him through the eyes of his still and motion picture cameras, added to which are the stories of his exciting adventures.

This new series of Traveltalks, to be presented in five thrilling episodes at the National Theatre on the five consecutive Sunday afternoons, beginning January 22, will be offered as follows; "Thru the Mediterranean," "India to Cambodia," "Singapore to Hong Kong," "China and Japan," "Hawaii to the Arctic."

One of the attractive features of this "journey" is that we arrive in each country at the right season. Mid-winter is the proper time to photograph such tropical places as India, Siam and Cambodia and Newman arranged to have his camera man where he should be when the finest views could be obtained.

Original Cast to Come Here in the Prize Winning Hit

It is seldom that a musical show leaves Broadway with its cast intact after a long run, but it is the boast of Sam H. Harris, producer of "Of Thee I Sing," which comes to the National for the week beginning Monday, January 30, that not only is the cast intact, but that no changes have been made even in the chorus, or as someone wittingly put it, there's not a spangle missing. When it is considered that the organization numbers nearly 100 people, this is a record, indeed.

In "Of Thee I Sing" the chorus plays a very important part and is called upon for many changes of costumes, ranging all the way from the alluring bathing suits worn in the Atlantic City number, to the last word in evening clothes during the White House ball.

Another startling innovation is found in the costumes worn by the Supreme Court judges, during their song and dance numbers, and when they are called upon for their most important decision, that of determining in advance the sex of the First Lady's expected offspring.

Koussevitzky.

Announcement is made by Mrs. Wilson-Greene that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, its world-renowned Russian conductor, will make its only concert appearance of the season in Washington two weeks from next Tuesday—Tuesday afternoon, January 31, at 4:30 o'clock—as the fourth attraction of her artists' series of afternoon concerts. Dr. Koussevitzky has not yet announced his program.

GRACE HAYES, star of radio and Shubert musical productions, whose voice will be heard in the headline spot of the current vaudeville bill at the Earle.

Noel Coward, Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne in "Design for Living"—National.

Rachmaninoff, pianist, Constitution Hall (Monday).

Issay Dobrowen, conducting Philadelphia Orchestra, Constitution Hall (Tues.).

Vladimir Horowitz, pianist, Constitution Hall (Thursday).

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Of the impressive list of actresses the late David Belasco elevated to stardom, Irene Purcell was the last to be granted that accolade. An engaging blonde comedienne, she was immediately lured into a term in talking pictures, but now she has returned to Broadway in an amusing, if not polished, comedy called "A Good Woman, Poor Thing."

Its author, Dillard Long, follows the paths of romantic whimsy of such writers as Noel Coward and John Van Druten. He has not approached the sophisticated perfection of these two, but his play is, for the most part, a delightful, far-from-serious tale of a bubbling lass who would be, but isn't, indiscreet.

SEPARATED from her first husband, she returns to her first love, as played by Arthur Margetson, and literally forces him into marrying her.

So much does she resent his complete faith in her that she arranges a fake elopement with a mythical lover. In the midst of this there arrives her first husband to give the second husband much advice on the proper procedure to discipline this bit of fluff whose only indiscretions are in her imagination.

Miss Purcell's role suffers from stretches of uncertain writing, but her charming aptness for light, romantic comedy comes to the aid of the dialogue in these parts and keeps the play spinning along at an entertaining pace.

THE $2 theater has definitely returned to Broadway. Every day finds new shows cutting their scale to this top price. George M. Cohan, who will bring his newest production, "Pigeons and People," to the Sam H. Harris theater Monday night, announces today that his highest price will be $2.

At "Flying Colors," the first week the prices were cut 50 per cent receipts at the box office were double what they were the week previously.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD has completed the casting of her play, "Forsaking All Others," and now has it in rehearsal. Among those who will appear in her support are Mary Duncan, Ian Keith, Cora Witherspoon and two others who are making their debuts as legitimate actors. These are Fred Keating, the magician, and Johnny Green, songwriter, who composed "Body and Soul."

"STRIKE ME PINK," the musical comedy which was tried out earlier this season under the title of "Forward March," goes into rehearsal Monday with Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez and Hope Williams as the principal performers.

The Don Cossack Chorus Here for Evening Concert

The Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus, that remarkable unit of 36 former officers of the Russian Imperial Army, whose performances in Washington have constituted one of the musical highlights of the past two season, will again be heard locally at Constitution Hall next Saturday evening, January 21, at 8:30 o'clock, when they appear as the fourth attraction of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's Saturday evening concert series at that auditorium.

The Don Cossack Chorus, under the dynamic leadership of the diminutive Serge Jaroff, scored an instantaneous triumph on their first appearance in the Capital two seasons ago, and this success was repeated on an even bigger scale when they reappeared here last season.

The first part of the Don Cossack program will be devoted to a group of church compositions, such as "The Beatitudes," "The Burial of Our Lord," "Have Mercy on Us, O God," and "Who Can Equal Thee?" There are five of these numbers, after which the chorus passes to a group of Ukrainian folk songs, a Cossack lullaby and songs of that type. Then follows a group of peasant songs, and the program concludes with a number of Cossack songs.

New Faces Appear In Gayety Troupe

The sure-fire method of assembling a group of popular stars is said to account for the success of the burlesque units now being presented at the Gayety Theater, under the personal supervision of Jimmy Lake.

Heading the cast of the "Oriental Girls," opening with the usual Sunday matinee today, will be the new guest star Carita, a beauty of the Spanish type, in songs and dances of her native Spain. She will be supported by many old favorites and many new faces, among whom will be found Gladys Smith, a blues singer of note; Violet Jordan, a sweet singing prima donna, and Mae Dix, whose individualized ability is known to burlesque patrons everywhere.

Monday is gift nite, Wednesday is money nite and Friday is amateur nite at the Gayety.

Beer! Beer!

The problems which will face America when the beer law is passed provide the basis for "Legal Crime."

Bruno Walter to Conduct Here in January Concert

When the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra comes to Washington on the afternoon of January 24, it will bring with it one of the greatest conductors of the times, Bruno Walter, as well as the famous pianist, Walter Geiseking.

Music and other cultural activities are being maintained in Europe as well as in this country in spite of the depression, Mr. Walter said in an interview upon arriving in this country. "But they were in grave danger and we must fight hard to see that they were continued at all costs," he added.

Mr. Walter believes that theaters, such as the Vienna and Berlin Opera, while in difficult financial straits, will be able to continue. He refuses to entertain a thought that the Metropolitan can possibly cease to present opera.

BOB HOPE, a droll comic, whose nimble wit and quaint conceits will comprise one of the most diverting elements of the stage bill at Loew's Fox.

Carita, with "Oriental Girls" —Gayety.

Clifford Brooke Makes Permanent Home in Capital

New laurels have come to Clifford Brooke immediately preceding the opening of his new school of the drama in Washington, laurels that are particularly gratifying to the many local friends of the prominent director, whose successes with Broadway productions they have regarded with eager interest. Perhaps the greatest compliment yet paid to the talent of Mr. Brooke was his selection by the well-known "Roxy" to direct his company of 140 people in the first production for the opening of the Radio City Music Hall in New York, the largest theater in the world.

Mr. Brooke has now returned to Washington to make his home here permanently.

During his activities as a director on Broadway Mr. Brooke has been responsible for a number of outstanding successes. Among them were "East Is West," starring Fay Bainter; "Peter Ibbetson," "The Circle," "The Last Warning," "Lombardi Ltd.," "Fioretta," Earl Carroll's elaborate musical piece, and "Art and Mrs. Bottle," starring Jane Cowl.

Many young actors, now successful on Broadway, and some of them whose names now shine in electric lights, received their early stage training under Mr. Brooke in the National Theater Players, which he has directed in Washington for a term of years. Minor Watson, leading man with the players a few years ago, then unknown to Broadway, has since appeared with "Howdy King," "This Thing Called Love," David Belasco's "It's a Wise Child" and in support of Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt in the Theater Guild production of "Reunion in Vienna."

Marionettes.

Maj. Dowley will present his famed Marionettes at the Masonic Auditorium on Saturday morning and afternoon, January 27, at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. Maj. Dowley will present the colorful "Captain Kidd and His Jolly Pirates." The performance is under the management of T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau.

The business of being a Marionette puppeteer is only little understood. The Germans insist that no one can be a really finished puppeteer in less than seven years, and that refers only to the business of reading his lines and manipulating the figures through the controller and the score or more of strings which make all the action and gestures possible.

Janet Richards.

Miss Janet Richards, at her weekly review tomorrow morning of "Affairs Political and International," will speak first of the perplexities, contentions, delays and political cross currents besetting the last days of the lame duck Congress, and why; followed by an attempted elucidation of the mysteries of the farm allotment plan and the alleged objections to the Glass banking bill. Recent important developments in foreign affairs also will be reviewed. These talks are given every Monday morning at 11 o'clock in the red parlor of the Willard Hotel.

A TRIO KEEPS THE FAITH

an aspirant for inclusion in the list of the ten best for the year 1933.

There are four film plays on view in the downtown, first-run area this week which, as this is being written in the early hours of Thursday morning preceding their inaugural presentations, bid fair to command serious attention as possible candidates for ultimate honors—"The Bitter Tea of General Yen," at RKO-Keith's; "Flesh," at Loew's Fox; "The Billion Dollar Scandal," at the Earle, and "Laughter in Hell," at the Rialto.

"The Bitter Tea of General Yen," a gorgeously caparisoned adaptation of the novel of the same name by Mrs. Grace Zaring Stone, quondam resident of Washington, offers perhaps as eloquent an example as is apt to happen along of the need that sometimes arises to make drastic alterations in the character and purpose of a book to fit it to the unique requirements of the cinema.

"The Bitter Tea," between covers, is an almost wholly psychological study of the conflicting philosophies of life of a highly educated young American girl and an equally cultured and more cosmopolitan overlord of a warring province in China. On the screen, it becomes primarily a drama of physical action with the climax of the novel so altered to meet the revised contours of the new pattern as to change the entire significance of Mrs. Stone's original work.

This is an exigency, of course, which can militate only against the fullest enjoyment of those who have read the book. Those who are able to divide their interest between the chaotic cataclysms of modern warfare and the splendor of Oriental beauty at its zenith will find "The Bitter Tea" vastly diverting.

• • • •

IN the other current candidates for 1933's critical accolades are to be found topics of wide divergence utilized as the basis of presumably stirring drama.

At Loew's Fox, Mr. Wallace Beery, a participant in the distribution of rewards for merits in 1932, by virtue of his presence in the casts of both "Grand Hotel" and "The Champ," makes another bid for individual acclaim as a hefty German wrestler in an idyllic little thing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's bearing the gossamer title of "Flesh."

That fiery thatched and temperamented commentator upon the seamier side of life, Mr. Jim Tully, enters the lists a little tardily, perhaps, with "Laughter in Hell," another of the burning indictments of the chain gang methods of social reformation, and at the Earle reliance is placed upon the dramatist's skill in transferring to celluloid the sinister machinations attributed to certain allegedly authenticated enterprises of those intent upon plundering the Federal Government.

Altogether, a catalogue of obvious diversity and, it is to be hoped, comparable distinction.

But by this time you have probably made up your own mind as to that.

COMING TO LOCAL STAGES

WALTER HAMPDEN is returning to Washington to play at the National Theater for three days, beginning Thursday, January 26, in two of his greatest successes, "Caponsacchi" and "Hamlet."

"Caponsacchi" will be given the three nights and "Hamlet" will be the bill at the Saturday matinee.

Mr. Hampden has played "Caponsacchi" over 400 times in New York City and for successful engagements in other Eastern cities. He thus established a world record for the romantic drama by a modern playwright.

Based upon Robert Browning's monumental dramatic poem, "The Ring and the Book," and written by Arthur Goodrich and Rose A. Palmer, "Caponsacchi" deals with a celebrated historical murder trial which took place in Rome in the seventeenth century. Its chief character is Caponsacchi, the warrior-priest of Arezzo, who bravely attempted to save the beautiful child-wife, Pompilia, from the savage brutality of her husband, Guido Franceschini. It is an eloquently moving story in which spiritual axaltation is mingled with stirring melodrama.

The role of Caponsacchi, which presents three phases, those of mountebank, cavalier and priest, affords Mr. Hampden one of the most varied characterizations of his career—one which has as many facets and is as theatrically effective as the role of Cyrano de Bergerac.

The players of Mr. Hampden's company have been with him for years. The principal roles in "Caponsacchi" are played by Esther Mitchell, who will be seen as Pompilia; Ernest Rowan as Guido, Whitford Kane as Conti, William Sauter as the Pope, Reynolds Evans as Gherardi, C. Norman Hammond as the governor, Mabel Moore as Margherita and Edwin Cushman as the archbishop.

It is needless to say much about the matinee bill, "Hamlet;" the greatest play of all time and one with which Mr. Hampden's name is inseparably associated.

AT THE Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary matinee performance on Sunday, January 22, Impresario Jimmy Lake will offer another of his amusing burlesk concoctions, featuring a long cast of clever comedians, singers and dancers, and utilizing the services of an agile and well trained chorus.

The policy of holding over favorite guest artists from week to week, with new faces also introduced among the principals, is proving a winner at the Gayety box office.

TWO of the most distinguished stars on the American stage, Grace George and Alice Brady, are appearing together for the first time in Jacques Deval's successful play "Mademoiselle" at the Playhouse, New York. Featured in this play is the delightful English comedian, A. E. Matthews.

This splendid attraction will come to the National following its run in New York, where it is now in its third month. William A. Brady, the veteran producer of many successes, will send "Mademoiselle" on tour with its Broadway cast intact.

The distinguished French playwright and novelist, Jacques Deval, is no stranger to the American theater-going public. His delightful comedy "Her Cardboard Lover," proved popular here both on stage and screen.

Rachmaninoff Will Give Only Capital Recital Tomorrow

Sergei Rachmaninoff, world-famous as composer and pianist and critically rated as one of the two greatest piano virtuosi of the present day, will make his only 1932-33 concert appearance in Washington tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, when he will be presented at Constitution Hall by Mrs. Wilson-Greene as the third attraction of her artists' concert series.

Nearly a quarter century has passed since Rachmaninoff made his American debut, in 1909, but the passing of years has only served to enhance his greatness, not only as a composer but as a pianist. Today Rachmaninoff's piano technique is compared only with that of Paderewski, whose immense popularity Rachmaninoff alone has succeeded in challenging.

Tall, austere, aristocratic in bearing, Rachmaninoff's presence on the concert platform is dignified, aloof yet commanding. Leonine in build, one might naturally expect crashing dissonances, modernistic discord, from his instrument. Instead, one hears delicacy, great emotional feeling, singing tone.

Few Rachmaninoff programs heard in Washington in recent years promise to equal in delicacy, musicianship and appeal the repertoire Rachmaninoff has arranged for tomorrow afternoon's concert at Constitution Hall. Opening with a group of four Chopin compositions, he will next play Beethoven's "Sonata Appassionata" and its three movements without interruption. The third portion of his program will be devoted to songs: "Dedication" (Schumann-Liszt), "Smugglers" (Schumann-Tausig), "Maiden's Prayer" (Chopin-Liszt), "The Return Home" (Chopin-Liszt), "Serenade" (Schubert-Liszt), "Brooklet" (Schubert-Rachmaninoff), "Daisies" (Rachmaninoff), and "Spinning Song" (Wagner-Liszt).

With Peggy.

Col. Stoopnagle and Budd, famous comedy team of the air, have been signed to appear with Peggy Hopkins Joyce.

Dobrowen to Play A Piano Concerto And Also Conduct

When Issay Dobrowen comes to Washington Tuesday with the Philadelphia Orchestra, at Constitution Hall, he will not only conduct that famous organization but will play the piano part in the Bach Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 in D major. The violin part will be played by Alexander Hilsberg, of the violin section, and the flute solo by William M. Kincaid, first flutist.

The program will open with the "Manfred" overture, by Schumann. The second number is the Bach Concerto. After the intermission, Mr. Dobrowen has chosen the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

As always, the concert will begin at 8:45 p. m., after which time, in accordance with the usual custom, the doors will be closed and late comers not admitted until after the first half of the program.

In 1917 Dobrowen was made professor of the Moscow Academy, and at the same time was engaged as conductor of the Moscow opera, where he remained until the spring of 1922. Meanwhile his reputation had reached the continent and in 1922 he went to the Dresden Opera, where he prepared a new production of Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunow," together with the general musical director, Fritz Busch, which he conducted a number of times with much success.

Issay Dobrowen is also distinguished as a composer. Among his works are two piano sonatas dedicated to the memory of Scriabin; a violin sonata, "Hebrew Melody," for violin and piano; "Marchen," for violin and piano; a number of songs, incidental music for "Philip II of Verhaeren," &c.

Cast Complete.

The cast of "The Mysterious Rider" consists of Kent Taylor, Lona Andre, Gail Patrick, Niles Welch, Irving Pichel, Clarence Wilson, Sherwood Bailey, Cora Sue Collins, Buster Miles, Capt. E. H. Calvert, Warren Hymer and Berton Churchill. The Zane Grey story will be filmed entirely on location.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

Mr. Wells' latest book, "The Bulpington of Blup" (The MacMillan Co., New York), is a long, long cry from "Joan and Peter," that other dissecting psychological novel of two young people, creatures of their times. It is of a new school, one that Mr. Wells has now adopted for the first time. Some of those who have sat at his feet for years adoring his work, sometimes agreeing with him, at other times violently disagreeing with him and avowing that the people he creates are not among those of his acquaintance—at the same time knowing that they are—will praise, and others just as surely will blame him. Mr. Wells, of course, has learned that neither praise nor blame can justify a man's own work to himself, and doubtless his personal opinion of the book has been formed and would make mighty rich reading were it available.

The outline history of young Bulpington also deals in large degree with that of Margaret, who early reminded Bulpington of the Delphic Sibyl, a painting which hung above the mantel of his home.

The priggish young Bulpington of Blup embarks in this modernistic, realistic novel on adventures and poses that leave nothing to the imagination. We are invited by Mr. Wells to delve deeply into the conflicts and emotions which lead to disaster in a contemporary brain and then find that brain unworthy. It is a wonder that Mr. Wells took so much of his valuable time to record its workings or relate the actions that brain inspired. Now and then we catch a glimpse of the H. G. Wells with whom we are so familiar, but there are not many. This is not a book which is going to add much to the author's fame, even though it achieve the best seller class—which it may do. There is no telling in these days just what will please the fickle fancy of the reading public.

There is joy in the hearts of those who really love literature every time a new venture in the direction of paying more attention to poetry is started. Therefore a kindly hand of welcome should be extended to the enterprising editors of Measure, the journal of the Gerard Manley Hopkins Poetry Society of Georgetown University.

This society boasts among its honorary members such literary figures as Paul Claudel, Padraic Colum, G. K. Chesterton, Wilfrid Meynell and Edwin Arlington Robinson.

This magazine has associated in it undergradutes, graduates and professors. It is not a college magazine, but one that is the organ of a society within the university, and it is devoted to poetry. It will be printed twice a year, at Chrsitmas and at Easter. Some of the pages will be devoted to critical articles, to reviews and even to a brief editorial.

Here is a sample from one of the pages in the first number of Measure, by James McCarty:

SHE IS TALL, LIKE A KING'S OWN DAUGHTER.

She is tall, like a king's own daughter,
And fair as the willow is fair, in the moonlight,
Asleep in the coolly soft, stillness of moonlight,
And gently stirring in slumber.

And her hair is soft, like remembered sadness,
And fragrant as gardens are fragrant,
Dew-jeweled in the mist, and the moonlight,
And the flowers in love with the earth.

And she is gay with the mixed tender gayness of dancing
To the throaty sobbings of strings,
Or the gayness of quivering aspens
That whisper their laughter at dawn.

What fun it would have been to emulate the little mouse under the queen's chair and "sit in" on the conversation between Mussolini and that enthusiastic biographer of the great and near great, Emil Ludwig. They have now appeared in print in "Talks With Mussolini," by Emil Ludwig (Little, Brown & Co., Boston, Mass.), and the discerning have enjoyed these vivid glimpses of the new Caesar who rules Italy with the iron hand in a velvet glove of some of the more subtle of his predecessors.

Ludwig attacks his subject somewhat in the Carlylesque manner. Whence is the genius of leadership? Why does it appear and vanish on the pages of time. In his talks with the duce we may be sure that Herr Ludwig knew exactly the proper questions to ask this former newspaper man who knows the art of interviewing at first hand.

Out of this evening of talk Ludwig got a portrait of his man that will, no doubt, linger in the gallery of human memory for a long time to come. Epigrams sprang out of it, too, that remain in the mind, such as "Hunger is a good teacher—almost as good as prison and a man's enemies." That is a lesson that many of the great have learned, in this age as in any other one.

"The Last Adam," by James Gould Cozzens, fresh from the efficient presses of Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York, is a stimulating novel with a new line of thought in it. He has told the story of a small town, its doctor, its telephone operators and the threads of human existence held in their hands.

Local politics and the glorious battle of youth for complete freedom from any kind of supervision are woven into the story with the skill of a true literary artisan.

It is a novel which will bear the reading and once read will not be quickly forgotten.

Arlington Club.

Declaring that Arlington County has provided for all of its residents who needed help and applied for it, Mrs. Mae Jacobs, head of the county welfare work, gave an instructive outline of the work of that organization at the January meeting of the Arlington Woman's Club which met at Windsor Arms on Monday. Mrs. Jacobs referred to the drive to raise funds for welfare work in the county which will be started soon, and stated that next year Arlington County would undoubtedly have a Community Chest.

Mrs. Clarence Miles, president of the club, consented to proposal that her name be submitted for consideration as the seventh member of the Welfare Board to represent the Arlington section.

A report was given by Mrs. Royal, chairman of the club's welfare committee. She made a plea for old clothes which her committee will collect and turn over to Mrs. Kelly for use when needed. She stated that the local cleaning establishment had offered to clean any men's clothes, donated, free of charge.

Mrs. Miles, the president, spoke of starting a class to study international relations and suggested that, if the members desired, other federated clubs in the county might be asked to join this class.

The delegates from the American Association of University Women to the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War will be the honor guests at a tea to be held on Wednesday, at 4:30 p. m., at the clubhouse, 1634 I street. Mrs. Delos O. Kinsman will be the hostess, assisted by Dr. Esther Calkin Brunaeuer, Mrs. George B. Wood, Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, Mrs. Fred E. Tyron, Mrs. Frank Houdlette and Mrs. Anne Hartwell Johnstone. All the officers of the conference are expected to be present, among them being Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Miss Ruth Morgan, Mrs. William John Cooper, Dr. Mary E. Wooley and Dr. Kathryn McHale.

At the tea table will be Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. Thomas Sidwell, Miss Belle Rankin and Mrs. James K. McClintock.

ART AND ARTISTS IN WASHINGTON

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE spirit of romance, drama, magnificent tragedy and swaggering adventure still has its artistic appeal at the exhibition of the paintings of Casareo Bernaldo de Quiros, famous Argentine painter, at the National Gallery of Art which opened on Friday afternoon. Disciples of all the various modern schools of art jostled each other to admire and applaud the super-realism of the figures and scenes of the times when the gaucho the Argentine cowboys made life so colorful in the Province of Entre Rios, Argentina, 1850-1870. This exhibition of 25 paintings is under the personal patronage of the Ambassador of Argentina, Senor Espil. The story of the life of this Argentine artist is one as romantic as his paintings. His triumphs and studies in the art centers of the world would make a chronicle of high adventure. His series of virile brilliant contemporary Hispanic paintings, of course, point to the character of his work, but do not, by any means, limit it. He has clearly written a colorful chapter in the preservation of the historic pageant of the New World. Now he will turn his attention to his portraiture and landscape work in his studio in New York.

The prize awards and medals in the possession of Senor Quiros are of the character which place him far in the forefront group of living artists.

As our boys dream of Western cowboys and of the stage coach days and put themselves into the adventures woven by their fancy, so must this Argentine boy have relived the lives of the gaucho in his dreams. The spirit of high adventure abounds in the bold colors and the very atmosphere of his pictures. All of us want to go back to that time, when the Red Lancer lived and the headsman held up the gory head as he does in startling reality on the canvas of this master painter of our South American sister nation. The exhibition will continue for two months.

THE authorities at the Corcoran Art Gallery were not really surprised when the public vote for the most popular picture in the thirteenth annual exhibition of contemporary oil paintings was in favor of a picture, "The Cameo," by Bjorn Egeli, not among the four selected by the jury of artists and art critics. On the other hand they point out that few pictures receiving awards for perfection from a professional viewpoint of other such exhibitions are now among the popular pictures in the gallery.

The Howard University Gallery of Art has on view until January 29 an exhibition of self-portraits assembled by the College Art Association.

These self-portraits have been gathered from the studios of the artists, from private galleries both in this country and abroad, and from individual owners.

A particularly interesting exhibition of photographs by Carroll Frey, a member of the Philadelphia Photographic Society and Philadelphia Art Alliance, is on view at the Arts Club and will remain up until Saturday.

These studies are chiefly outdoor subjects, although one very lovely portrait of a woman, "Nap," is shown. The most charming effects in light and atmosphere are seen in "Into the Light" and "Return." "Passers-by" is also an extremely interesting study in light and shade and done from an unusual angle.

* * * *

TO those who like water colors, and there are many in the Capital, the Sears-Roebuck Art Galleries have an unusual group this month.

It would be hard to find four men as splendid in his own method and manner, yet not suffering by comparison one with the other.

David Shotwell, using pure water color, with just enough pictorial effect, shows an echo of his architectural training but not too much.

Joseph Margulies, perhaps better known as an etcher, and a most successful one, paints with a sureness yet not exhibiting the fine draftsmanship he is capable of.

ABOUT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER

The majority of our readers, we feel sure, are familiar with the "knights tour" on the chess board: albeit we strongly suspect that very few are able to accomplish the tour without recourse to instructions. For the benefit of the uninitiated, however, the following remarks have been extracted from James Mason's "Principles of Chess."

"In complete tours the knight plays once to every square, closing the figure in 64 moves. The general rule for a single tour is to continually play the knight exteriorly, finishing up in the center of the board. In this way the tour is less likely to become confused and fail. Where two apparently equal routes lie open, choose that which leads farthest outward, or to the square to whence the knight will have less scope for action. As the tour many begin at any point and terminate at any other point, this gives over 1,000 distinct tours from variation in the starting and stopping places alone. There are perhaps 14,000 distinct tours in all. Of merely different tours, there may be more than 1,000,000."

In spite of the fact that a million possible tours can be made, the task of making a single one is not so very simple. We are pleased today to present a novelty tour in which the Knight not only successfully completes his tour, but in so doing forms a magic square in which the single ranks and files each total 260. Readers are indebted to Mr. James McKirdy, who submitted the novelty, and writes concerning it as follows:

"I inclose an interesting thing, partly in the chess line, that you might consider worth inserting in 'The Chess Table.' It is a combined 'Knight's Tour' and 'Magic Square!' It was worked out by Maj. Wallace Streater, a well-known attorney of the District. When he submitted it to me as a novelty I was so interested that I thought, perhaps, your readers might enjoy it as well."

Ergo, place your emptied chess board before you in the correct position. Referring to the appended series of figures, move the Knight in numerical order, starting at white's KR3. The tour will be completed and each horizontal line of figures will total 260, as will also each vertical row. Maj. Streater is to be heartily congratulated upon his ingenious conception of the tour

Black Brilliancy.

Pending the commencement of local chess activities, scheduled to begin during the current week, readers may do well to examine the appended gamelet. It is a rare occurrence for the black side to force conclusions so quickly in a queen's pawn opening, and the defense selected will merit attention. The game was recently contested in Hungary and the annotations are those of Brian Harley in the London Observer.

Solutions to Problems.

The key to No. 512, three-move novelty by Sam Loyd, is R(B3)—K3. Solvers experienced some difficulties with this one. Among those sending in solutions were Jacob Frech, J. W. Harris, I. C. Hoover and Fred T. Hafelfinger.

I. C. Hoover comments: "This problem seems to work out more in the manner in which play would normally proceed than in the average puzzle. Your column affords many interesting hours in playing the games printed and problems. I also enjoy what Mr. Frech has to say."

From time to time we receive insistent requests for end-game studies. So today we give solvers the opportunity of demonstrating their abilities at that type of position which more closely resembles that actually obtained in play. The position is a simple one and the solution is by no means difficult.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

WASHINGTON music lovers greet the news that the Pius X School of Liturgical Music, of the Collage of the Sacred Heart, New York City, has announced a course in Gregorian chant to be given under its auspices at the Convent of the Sacred Heart in this city on ten consecutive Saturdays from January 14 to March 18.

This 30-hour course includes a study of the fundamentals of Gregorian rhythm and the basic principles of Gregorian tonality and notation, with the purpose of giving a knowledge of phrasing, and of the interpretation of liturgical melodies. It is planned to enable choir directors and teachers to sing and to teach others how to sing Gregorian chant.

Margaret Hurley will give the course. She is a member of the staff of the Pius X School of Liturgical Music.

Another of a series of musical programs was given Wednesday evening at the Washington Sanitarium for the guests at the institution. Miss Grace Olwin Washburn, coloratura soprano, of Takoma Park, sang three groups of songs. She was assisted by Prof. H. A. Miller, of Washington Missionary College, who accompanied her. Among her songs was the "Bird of the Wildwood," which was composed for Miss Washburn by her father, J. S. Washburn, after listening to the song of a mocking bird one early morning.

During the coming week the United States Marine Band and Orchestra under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson and Second Leader Arthur S. Witcomb will play concerts in the auditorium at the Marine Barracks on the following dates: Monday, band concert, at 3 p. m.; Wednesday, orchestra concert, at 8 p. m.; Thursday, band concert, 11:30 a. m. ("Shut-in Dream Hour"), and Friday, orchestra concert at 3 p. m.

Miss Lavinia Darve, American prima donna, will be the guest artist at the next meeting of the Political Study Club, to be held in the Washington Club, Saturday afternoon. During the war Miss Darve was an important factor in the Liberty Loan rallies. Her repertoire is unusually large, and, in addition to the better known operas, includes such as Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera," Offenbach's "Giulietta," and Leoni's "L'Oracolo." Mrs. Edgar S. Meritt, chairman of music of the club, has been fortunate in securing such a talented artist for the organization.

Edward MacDonald, director of the Ten o'Clock Club, a new organization this season for the younger group of professionals in all the arts, announces that a series of six programs of music will be presented at the club for the benefit of those in distress, especially musicians. Among those already working out interesting programs are Helen Heinl, pianist, and Helen Turley, contralto, who will give a MacDowell program. Mrs. Heinl is a former pupil of the famous American composer.

The six programs will be given February 14 and 21, March 14 and 28 and April 4 and 11.

Kroom Bagranoff, tenor, will be the guest soloist today on the program at the Shoreham Hotel, which will be played by Maxim Lowe's Concert Orchestra under the direction of R. Da Costa.

A song recital will be given by the Lewis Studios of Voice, LeRoy Lewis, director, February 7, at the Washington Club. The setting of stage and the costumes to be worn will suggest the Victorian period of the late 80s in America. Those who will take part in this program are Mary Owen, soprano; Catherine Toomey, contralto; Raymond Pigott, barytone, and Mrs. Carl Chinblom, pianist.

Henry Hadley's overture, "In Bohemia;" the tone poem, "Carnival in Paris," by Svendsen, and the scherzo and finale from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony will be heard at the concert to be given by the United States Navy Band Wednesday night at the band auditorium, navy yard. The soloist will be Charles Brendler, clarinetist.

The National Capital Choir, under the direction of Dr. Albert W. Harned, will sing the anthems, "Oh, Worship the King," an old French melody, and "God Will Make All Things Right," by Nevin, at the morning services of the Universalist National Memorial Church. Dr. Harned will play as his organ prelude, "Cantilena," by Matthews; as the intermezzo, "Largo," by Dvorak, and as the postlude, "Grand Choeur," by Saulkes.

An important change has been made in the National Symphony Orchestra's program for next Thursday. A great number of Washington's concert goers have written to the orchestra's offices, asking that one of the soloists this season play the great Brahm's Concerto in B flat major. Although the concert scheduled for next Thursday afternoon at Constitution Hall had been planned otherwise, Conductor Hans Kindler immediately communicated with Vladimir Horowitz, who arrived in this country a few days ago, asking the famous concert pianist if he would play this concerto instead of the Beethoven Emperor Concerto as previously arranged.

An answer in the affirmative was received during the last week. This necessitated an entire rearrangement of the program to obtain a proper music balance.

Flora McGill Keefer, mezzo-contralto, will assist Lewis Corning Atwater, organist, in a half-hour program of early French music at All-Souls' Church (Unitarian), Sixteenth and Harvard streets, this afternoon at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Keefer will sing "Ariette," by Gretry, and "Bois epais," by Lully.

Betty Baum, pianist, will give the program for the Sunday music hour today at the Y. W. C. A. at 5 o'clock. The program will include "Chaconne" by Bach-Busoni; sonata in E major Op. 109 by Beethoven and a group of Chopin numbers which will include the B flat major and the G minor preludes, etude Op. 10, No. 3 in E major and ballade in G minor. The public is cordially invited.

Anna Yage McGuffey will be featured on the first program of February to be given under the auspices of the Friday Morning Music Club, February 3.

Mrs. Beatrice Taylor, president of the Schubert Choral Club of Washington, announces that this women's chorus will present its first program of the current season Monday night, January 23, at the Hotel Lafayette. Mrs. A. M. Blair, guest conductor of the organization, will lead part of the program, sharing the baton with William E. Braithwaite, regular conductor.

The A Capella choir and the quartet of the First Congregational Church, under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl, present the following numbers today. Morning service: "Pilgrim's Song," an anthem by Tschaikowsky; quartet, "Prayer," by Chadwick. Evening service: Anthem, "Burst Forth in Paeans Loud," by Zwecker; quartet, "Fear Not, O Israel," by Spicker.

Ohio Girls' Club

The Ohio Girls' Club announces a card party for members and their friends, to be held Friday night, at 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK IN WASHINGTON PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS

All material for this column must reach the State office, room 501, 1201 Sixteenth street northwest, not later than the first mail on Wednesday preceding the Sunday on which publication is desired.

The monthly conference of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held Tuesday in the Bryan School, Thirteenth and B streets southeast, at 1 o'clock. The program for this meeting will be in charge of Mr. Selden M. Ely, third vice president and director of the department of extension of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers. This being National Thrift Week, the subject of "Thrift" will be stressed.

The following chairmen will take part: Thrift, Mrs. N. T. O'Connell; safety, Mrs. Ida Simmons; Americanization, Mrs. Tilman B. Parks.

A half hour will be devoted to the studying and discussion of the bylaws, under the direction of Mrs. W. T. Bannerman, national chairman of legislation.

Since at this time there is especial need for milk lunches among school children, letters have been sent from the State office to presidents of local associations in an endeavor to ascertain the needs or possible resources of the different schools. It is hoped to organize an emergency relief committee to receive donations and distribute them as the need arises.

The situation is serious and it is urged that the local presidents will respond promptly to the queries in the letter.

The State program chairman has recently received the yearly programs from the Adams, Gage, Hine Junior, Janney and Kenilworth Associations.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.

The Francis Scott Key Association met on Tuesday at the school, immediately following an executive meeting. It was announced that the dancing class, to be held at the school through the Community Center cooperation would begin this Friday and that a regular "bundle day" would be established for the last Wednesday of each month.

The pupils of Mrs. Frazier sang for the parents and blue ribbons were awarded to nine kindergarten children who qualified in the preschool round-up.

FILLMORE.

The Fillmore Association will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. "The Wise Use of Leisure" is the theme of the program for the year, and each month some phase of this topic will be taken up by a qualified speaker. The topic this month is "Music." The program will be opened by community singing. Following this will be a demonstration of rhythmic movement and piano selections by a group of Burleith children, conducted by Mrs. Mary B. Meyers. The participants will be Mary L. Lakeman, Mary Nickson, Marcia Klein, Katherine Kern, Dan S. Meyers and James F. Callery, jr.

An address will be given by C. C. Cappell, concert manager, on "Music in the Wise Use of Leisure." Master George Anevuri and Master Emile Jospeh will play violin solos, accompanied by Miss Ivalee Newell.

Messages from the State president, as given in the Parent-Teacher Bulletin, will be read by Miss Ossire.

WHITTIER.

"Cooperation of the Parent-Teacher Association with Community Activities" comprised the subject of the Whittier Parent-Teacher Association meeting held at the school Monday at 8 p. m.

The Rev. George Schnabel pointed out the responsibility of mothers and fathers in providing wholesome activities for their children's leisure time. It is during the idle moments of a child's early life that his character is formed for either good or bad, and it is for us to see that his character is built so strongly for good that when temptation comes his way he will not fall before it, and in that way help toward the betterment of his community.

The president of the Manor Park Citizens' Association, Mr. Seaquist, spoke on the subject of "Our Community," telling of all the improvements the citizens' association has accomplished for the betterment of the community in which the school is located. Mr. Seaquist also spoke of the Takoma-Manor Park Recreation Center project.

Mrs. Todd, study group chairman, has set Tuesday as the date for the first study group meeting to be held at the school from 1:30 to 3 p. m., at which meeting Mrs. Alice Wood will be the speaker.

A motion was passed that cakes be given free to those children who were not receiving milk so that all children in the room may have a social period at the same time.

Ten dollars was the maximum amount set aside for a party to be given by the association to the February graduates. The association presented the children with a set of books which were needed and are being used effectively.

Miss Green, principal, is enrolling children between 1 and 10 years of age to receive the Schick test at the Truesdale School, the date of which has not yet been set, but parents will be notified through the school.

Miss Shied, one of the teachers, read the monthly message from Mrs. J. N. Saunders, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers. Miss Scott's room won the attendance prize presented to the room having the most parents represented at meetings. The meeting was followed by entertainment furnished by members of the community, and refreshments were served.

CRANCH-TYLER.

The monthly meeting of the association was held in the Buchanan School auditorium on Monday. Bessie Laskowitz and Catherine Willoughby, fifth and sixth grade pupils, sang.

A play was given by the Cranch-Tyler pupils entitled "The Christ Candle." The guest speaker was Miss Emmeline Whitcombe, from the office of education, Interior Department. Her subject was "The Children's Charter." Miss Eucson's room won the banner and a dollar prize for having the best attendance.

Two checks were given by the association, one to Miss Dugan's and one to Miss Ockershausen's rooms for getting the greatest number of new members during the membership drive. The meeting closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," after which refreshments were served.

KENILWORTH.

The January meeting of the Kenilworth Association will be held in the school basement on Thursday at 2:15 p. m. The blue prints of the new school will be on the bulletin board. The new principal, Miss Emmons, will talk on "Observance of School Regulations." Every member is urged to attend.

JEFFERSON.

January 23 is the date of the January Parent-Teacher Association meeting at Jefferson. This change from the third Monday of the month was decided at the last executive meeting.

At this meeting the domestic art department will exhibit the work of the seventh, eighth and ninth grades. The girls of the graduating class will model the gowns which they have made. An additional feature of this meeting will be a talk by Miss Ruth O'Brien on "Family Relationships." Miss O'Brien has the position of senior specialist in the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture.

Plans for the annual card party are now being made. Friday February 17, is the date selected. The place will be the school lunchroom.

Mrs. Carrie Jones held a party last Wednesday evening at her home and the sum realized will be put into the Parent-Teacher treasury. Mrs. Mabel Newman gave the proceeds of her December card party to this fund.

JOHN EATON.

The John Eaton Parent-Teacher Association met Monday. Mr Freund, barytone soloist, sang. Dr. Elise Martens, specialist in the education of exceptional children, Office of Education, talked on "The Exceptional Child."

POWELL JUNIOR HIGH.

"Electives" was the subject discussed by the principal, Lester Walter, at the regular meeting of the association held at the school on Wednesday evening. Through the monthly programs arranged by Mr. Walter, dealing with some phase of school work, parents are becoming better acquainted with school activities, and the growing attendance indicates that they are finding these programs worth while.

Through the efforts of S. J. McCathran, president, and Miss Myrtle Moore, vice president, a study of motion pictures will be made by a committee with a view to securing pictures more suitable for children at neighborhood theaters. Special effort will be made to see that only wholesome pictures are shown over the week-end when the attendance of children is greatest.

The membership drive under the direction of Mrs. E. B. Fristoe, which has proved satisfactory, will be brought to a close within the next few days. Plans are going forward under the direction of Mrs. P. B. Bransdorf for the card party which will be held on Thursday evening. Assisting her will be Mrs. M. W. Chadwic, Mrs. Warren E. Thomas, Mrs. Warner J. O'Leary, Miss Myrtle Moore and a group of school girls.

JAMES F. OYSTER.

The general meeting of the James F. Oyster Association was held in the school on Monday at 3 o'clock. H. W. Draper was the speaker for the afternoon and gave an interesting talk. Vocal selections were given by Mrs. Alice-Jean Graves Carver, accompanied by Miss Margaret Brower.

A luncheon will be given at the school on Thursday.

GORDON JUNIOR.

The monthly meeting of the Gordon Junior High was held on Wednesday, with Mrs. E. R. Altman in the chair. Tea was served in the library at the conclusion of the meeting.

TRUESDELL.

The executive board of the Truesdell Parent-Teacher Association will meet in the school Monday at 1:30 p. m. Mrs. Willard Jefferis, chairman of ways and means, met with her committee on Thursday to make final plans for the bake sale, which will be held in the school Wednesday, January 18, beginning at 10 a. m.

Mrs. Kenneth R. Peirce, chairman of good cheer, reported that her committee took care of 33 children at Christmas, giving them clothes and toys; also 10 families were supplied with baskets of food. The study group met Wednesday at 1:30 p. m.

KINGSMAN-PIERCE.

The regular meeting of the Kingsman-Pierce Association was held on Tuesday at 2:30 p. m., in the Kingsman School, with Mrs. T. J. Whinerey, president, in the chair. The meeting opened with a prayer and was followed with the reports of the various outstanding committees.

Dr. Howard M. Fisher, of the Health Department, the guest speaker for the afternoon, spoke on the excellent results of the Schick test and strongly stressed the point of the advisability of having the Schick test administered to preschool children.

Blue ribbons were awarded to eight children who were 100 per cent perfect in health by Mrs. Bray. A photograph of the children was taken on the school grounds.

Mrs. E. H. Griffith, Christmas committee chairman of toys, with the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, who worked in conjunction with the Council of Social Agencies, spoke on the marked success of their venture the past Christmas in the collection and distribution of toys to children in need.

Mrs. Pope, Mrs. Love and Mrs. Anderson head the committee for the card party which is to be held on January 20 in the Pierce School.

A group of songs and a number of poems by Miss Hilton's fifth grade were enjoyed by the members present and rounded out a very interesting program.

LANGLEY JUNIOR.

The association will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. The time from 7:30 to 8:10 will be given, as usual, for conferences between the parents and teachers in the classrooms. At 8:15, in the auditorium, the school band will give a concert. The speaker of the evening is Miss Helen E. Samuels, former president of the Vocational Guidance Association of the District, her subject being "Guidance in the Junior High School."

SHEPHERD.

The meeting scheduled for January 9 was postponed to January 16. It will be fathers' night, and the fathers will have charge of entertainment and refreshments. Special speakers have been provided.

ROOSEVELT.

The first meeting of the new year of the Parent-Teacher Association of the new Roosevelt High School will take place Wednesday in the school auditorium. After the business session, parents and teachers will be entertained by a group of the students' glee club in excerpts from the operetta, "Joan of the Nancy Lee." This same operetta was given in the school Friday.

It is felt that the eyes of the city are on this new high school and great things will be expected. The Parent-Teacher Association is urged to do its part in achievement.

BROOKLAND-BUNKER HILL-NOYES.

The executive meeting at the Brookland Building on Monday at 1:15 p. m. was conducted by Miss Pepper, first vice president, in the absence of the president. The ways and means chairman, Mrs. Wright, announced a luncheon to be given Wednesday, January 8, at Brookland Building. The study group chairman, Mrs. Paster, gave a report for meetings, 24 attending the first meeting, December 14, 1932, and 15 the second, January 4.

A special meeting was called for Thursday at 9 a. m. in the Crosby-Noyes Building to observe the work periods of all children up to the fifth grade. Half an hour is to be spent in each room, after which questions will be answered by Miss Pepper, principal.

The next regular meeting of the study group will be February 1 at 1:30 p. m., in the Noyes Building.

The publicity chairman, Mrs. Kester, announces a bulletin board has been put in the hall of the Brookland Building. Posted on this will be found a list of officers, chairmen and grade mothers, together with a list of their duties. The by-laws and the program for the entire year 1932-33 are posted, also any special notices that should be before the association.

Miss Wilson, kindergarten teacher, Crosby-Noyes, has been appointed treasurer on the resignation of Mrs. C. N. Merillat. The State dues are to be paid at once. The association sent $5 to the Receiving Home.

The monthly meeting will be tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Brookland building the topic being "What We Mean by an Activities Program." The speaker will be Miss Lind, principal of the Brightwood Demonstration School. Music will be given by Mrs. Arthur McNerney, pianist. The hostesses are Mrs. E H. Smith, Mrs. Donahue and Mrs. Wyman. Special invitation is given new members to attend this meeting

RANDALL HIGHLANDS-ORR.

A card party will be held in the Orr School Friday evening. A luncheon is being arranged for about the middle of February.

EMERY-ECKINGTON.

The association met January 5, at Eckington School. Miss Sibyl Baker spoke on "Your Child's Choice of Friends." Mrs. Barnhart's 3 A-B Emery, and Mrs. Knight's 2 A-B Eckington, received the attendance prize of $1 each. The February meeting at Emery will be the observance of founders' day.

PARK VIEW PLATOON.

"The most potential influence in the character building of the child is the mother," said Selden Ely, as he spoke at the fathers' night meeting of the Park View Association. Mr. Ely also spoke of the necessary cooperation between parents as the most effective means in strengthening the character of children.

Mrs. Harvey Haun, president, opened the meeting and immediately presented father members, who conducted the meeting. Maj. Walter Sommers acted as president, Fred S. Walker as secretary, and V. L. Kebler as treasurer. Mr. Glenn Leach acting program chairman, presented the McKinley High School Cadet Band, conducted by Mr. Manley. Mr. H. N. Stull, chairman of the committee on education of the Federation of Citizens Associations, spoke on the six objects of the committee, each one of vital interest to citizens of the District.

Community singing was led by W. Schmucker, with Erskin Carr as accompanist. Mr. Wilfred Nerlick gave vocal numbers, accompanied by R. E. Rapp, one of the father members. Other fathers on the program were Warren Wagoner, who read the President's messages, H. Haun and George Corbin, reporting chairmen.

Announcement was made that a first aid study group would be formed, date of first meeting to be announced. The meeting closed with a social hour, during which refreshments were served by Mrs. L. Mister, assisted by the grade mothers. The highest attendance was recorded by Miss G. Townsend's room, 35 members present.

CURTIS-HYDE-ADDISON.

The monthly meeting of the association was held in the Curtis School Monday. A card party and luncheon for March 24 was announced by the ways and means committee. Mr. H. W. Draper, supervising principal of the first division, gave a short greeting for the new year. Miss Catherine Barudi, a former Curtis pupil, gave several selections on the harmonica.

Miss Molster, physical training director, was the guest speaker of the evening, "Physical Education" being the subject of her talk.

Appreciation was expressed to the association for its gifts of sweaters at Christmas to the Boy Patrol, of the three buildings.

BUCHANAN.

At the January meeting of the Buchanan Association on Tuesday evening, an interesting movie on "Our National Parks" was shown. After the business routine, an adaptation of the book "Freckles" by Gene Stratton Porter, was presented by the pupils of the fifth grade. Plans were made to hold an entertainment on Friday evening, January 20, to raise funds for the organization. The attendance prizes were won by Mrs. West and Mrs. Atchison. Refreshments were served.

JOHNSON.

The executive committee of the Johnson Association met on Monday at 1:30 p. m. The monthly meeting of the Johnson Association was held Tuesday, at 3 p. m. Miss Marshall's sixth grade held the best attendance record.

Francis St. Austell, guest speaker, talked on American education and the opportunities which it offers for the development of world peace.

The children of the 6A and 6B grades entertained with a program which included a farewell address to the members of the Parent-Teacher Association from the class graduating in February. The meeting was followed by a social hour.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, vice president of the Board of Education, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Adams Association on Tuesday, the theme being "The District School." Miss M. Merritt, principal, spoke on "School Affairs."

The hour of the study group, under the leadership of Mrs. B. R. Wood, has been changed to 1:30, the next meeting taking place on Wednesday.

The stamp club, sponsored by the association, will meet tomorrow at 3 p. m. in the school.

KEENE.

The Keene Association met in the school Tuesday evening. After the business meeting, the different chairmen gave reports. The membership chairman reported 43 new members this year, with 100 per cent principal and teachers as members. The student aid chairman asked for help each Wednesday this month at the student aid rooms. The ways and means chairman announced a dance to be held Saturday evening, January 14, at Chillum Hall, on Riggs road, also a card party on Friday in the Paul Junior High School at 8:30 p. m.

The sixth grade, Miss Short, teacher, won the banner for having the greatest number of parents and friends present.

Mrs. J. C. Brown and Mrs. A. W. Taylor were named by the president as delegates to the State congress.

It being Thrift Week, that subject was stressed in a talk by Dr. Paul Ewerhardt. Two readings were given by Miss Dorothy Goebel, followed by "The Rosary," played by Miss Vivian Kern on a Hawaiian guitar, and a song, "The Kings' Serenade," by Misses Frances and Dorothy Goebel, accompanied on the guitar by Miss Kern. After the meeting, refreshments were served while parents met teachers in a social half hour.

WHEATLEY.

"Get your child's viewpoint when directing his problems," urged Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, as he addressed 300 parents at Wheatley School Tuesday night. Mrs. Alice Manning presided at the meeting.

Other features of the program were talks on Boy and Girl Scout activities by C. C. Mullady, District scoutmaster, and Capt. Susan Mellichampe, sixth grade teacher at Wheatley School, who has had a Girl Scout Troop for five years, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association.

"Boy of Mine" was sung by the music teacher, Mrs. J. F. Mayhugh. Educational readings were given by Mrs. Edna Rawlings, second vice president, and Mrs. Walter C. Jones. Important committee reports were read by Mrs. E. Knight, R. H. Hilsinger, Mrs. Gene Starr and others. Community singing was led by Mrs. Alice Brooks, sixth grade teacher.

Parent-Teacher officers from other associations who attended this meeting were: Mesdames Mullady, Griffith, Parsons, Whinerey, Marks, Franklin, Denit, Green, Herman, Scaggs, Smith and Mr. R. Green, past president of Eliot Junior High Association. A social hour followed the meeting, when refreshments were served.

The Parent-Teacher Grade Mothers will hold a question box conference January 25 at 2 o'clock in the school library. Mrs. Nina Russell, vice president, will preside. Discussion will be led by Mrs. Walter C. Jones.

Bridge Bids and Bumps

By FRANK B. LORD

The expert solved a problem alone,
Where all the cards he could see;
Then paraphrased Puck, in a sneering tone,
"What fools these bridge fans be!"

YES, we have bridge fans, literally millions of them, the same as we have baseball fans, golf fans and movie fans, as the devotees of popular games, sports and amusements are described. Few, however, know how they have come to be so called.

The word "fan" was coined and first used in The Washington Post more than 30 years ago by little Joe Campbell, the premier sports writer of his day, if not of all time. It was he who enriched the vocabulary of all sports and games with scores of words and phrases that have now come into general use. Delete an everyday baseball story of its Campbellisms and it would be as dull as a congressional tariff speech and as stupid as an English account of cricket. He took the performance on the diamond, previously reported in stilted schoolboy style, and made real literature in recording them in print.

Joe's two-fingered typing was so bad and so profusely interlined with pencilings that a special compositor had to be trained to set it. One night he was writing an account of the manner in which a crowd of baseball fanatics had cheered a brilliant play when his typewriter stuck at the end of a line with the word "fanatic" half written. He dropped to another line, went on, and the word "fan" was coined. Other sports writers soon plagiarized it. Finally, it came to the attention of Dr. Vizetelly, who acknowledged it and gave it literary legality by placing it as a bona fide word in Funk & Wagnall's edition of the late Noah Webster's best seller, with the definition, "An enthusiastic lover of any sport or game."

Bridge players have gladly accepted it as fittingly describing their love of and enthusiasm for the game.

WITH approximately one-half of the games played in the season's tournament of the Women's City Club, Mrs. Laura Bradley heads the list of 40 or more contestants for the club's grand trophy to be awarded at the end of the season. Mrs. Bradley now has a total score of 306 match points and has maintained her lead for several weeks. Her friends are confident that she will be able to continue her lead and win the coveted prize, although the battle is spirited and a single session might cause her to drop behind her nearest competitor, who is Miss May Mason, with a total score of 298½ match points. Several other players are also promising contenders and are unwilling to concede victory until it is finally won.

The tournament began last October and will continue until May under the direction of Mrs. John K. Freiot, who has been training the players and conducting their bridge matches for several years. The games are played on Friday nights and much enthusiasm is shown. Under the tutelage of Mrs. Freiot the club has developed upward of 100 contract players, some of them of exceptional skill. Two of the club's members, Mrs. Meta Cole and Miss Benjamin, won East and West honors for the District of Columbia in the first Olympic games conducted by Ely Culbertson in a series played throughout the world. The club also expects to enter several players in the forthcoming Olympic which will be held some time this spring when more than 200,000 bridge enthusiasts will contest for honors in every State in the Union and in more than twelve foreign countries.

There are two practice classes each week supervised by Mrs. Charles H. Curl, one for beginners and another for advanced players.

WASHINGTON players had the pleasure last week of sitting in with P. Hal Sims, of New York, and Deal, New Jersey, one of the recognized big-wigs of bridge and chief exponent of the newly developed One-Over-One system of bidding. Mr. Sims was en route home from Jacksonville, Fla., where he went to direct a convention of teachers who are seeking to master the One-Over-One method. Accompanying him were Mrs. Sims, also an accredited expert, John Rau and Sir Derrick Wehrner, both of whom rank high in the bridge world.

A round robin was arranged for the visitors at the Shoreham and Mr. Sims was given an opportunity to exhibit that prowess which gained him fame as a member of the "Four Horsemen" who for a time swept nearly everything before them in a series of tournaments in New York. The big fellow found players here worthy of his attention and some who were able to defeat him on several of the boards. The evening's contest, however, was won by Sir Derrick, a member of Mr. Sims' party, by the narrow margin of one-half a point. Three tables played thirty-three boards and Sir Derrick's score was 36½, with A. P. Stockvis and Herbert L. Shepherd, both of Washington, tied for second place with a score of 36 match points. Mr. Sims finished with 33 points.

Those who participated, in addition to Mr. Sims' team, were Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Shepherd, A. P. Stockvis and Roy Thurtell.

Mr. Sims expressed his admiration for the ability displayed by his Washington opponents, and was invited to come back for another engagement.

Winners in last week's duplicate at the Washington Golf and Country Club were: North and south, Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Huffman, first; Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Weaver, second, and Mrs. G. F. Bogan and Mrs. R. B. Pirie, third. East and west, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Howard, first; Mr. and Mrs. Veerhoff, second, and Mr. and Mrs. Kent, third.

Deep regret is expressed among the members of the Mayfair Club and in diplomatic circles generally over the recall of Maj. George Thenault, of the French Embassy. Maj. Thenault is military aid for air and has spent several years in Washington. He was one of those who assisted in the organization of the popular and swanky Mayfair Club, and has been a frequent player at its tables. He will return to Paris within a short time and will doubtless be assigned to some European post. The major has a grand fondness for bridge and will be much missed by those with whom he has been accustomed to play.

EVERYTHING is set for the big winter championship tournament to be held in Miami this week. Mrs. E. W. Schrodel and Mrs. Harry Beck, who won the right to represent Washington and Baltimore in the finals at the Shoreham last week, left Washington yesterday for the Florida resort, carrying the best wishes of their defeated rivals for the honor.

The success of Mrs. Schrodel and Mrs. Beck in winning in the local contest came somewhat as a surprise to those players in Washington who more or less regard themselves as experts. Heretofore the two ladies have not been considered as dangerous adversaries in the various tournaments that have been played at the Capital. They were entered against eighteen other pairs of Washington and Baltimore, nearly every one of whom has at one time or another triumphed in hard-fought bridge matches. Each pair participating in the finals had gained the right to enter in a series of preliminary games where their skill was in every case given a severe test. Mrs. Schrodel and Mrs. Beck won, however, not by any fluke or break of luck, but rather by an exhibition of skill both in bidding and playing that entitled them to first rank among local devotees of the game. They were tutored by Mrs. Martha Lemon, who was also one of the players in the finals, and they had the satisfaction of defeating their teacher and winning the distinction of representing the two cities in what promises to be one of the most interesting national tournaments of the season.

Dr. L. W. Lord and Mrs. M. W. Jones, of Baltimore, won second place in the finals, but as such they will not be entered in the Miami event.

The players and their respective scores follow:

Mrs. Schrodel and Mrs. Beck, 108½; Dr. Lord and Mrs. Jones, 105; Maj. G. W. Chipman and Maj. J. C. Sibert, 104½; Mrs. Dixie T. Wright and Mrs. Granville Fortescue, 101½; Col. Clifford and Capt. White, 96; Mrs. J. D. Cairus and Mrs. Allen Rutherford, 93; Tom Hamlin and Mr. Moncaster, 89; R. D. Lewis and M. M. Judd, 85; Roy Thurtell and Dr. Ed Conolly, 85; Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Clarke, 82; Mrs. E. J. Whithall and Miss F. Kenyon, 80; Mrs. Eugene Nolan and Mrs. M. C. Robinson, 79½; Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Shepherd, 79½; A. P. Stockvis and "Dick" Wood, 78½; Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon, 77; Mrs. C. E. Cheeks and Mrs. C. A. Woolsey, of Baltimore, 77½; Mr. Rosett and Mr. Link, 77; Col. Perkins and Maj. E. B. Gray, 74; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Emery, of Baltimore, 59½.

In addition to winning the free trip to Miami and a week's entertainment, Mrs. Schrodel and Mrs. Beck were awarded the local prize of an electric bridge table. Dr. Lord and Mrs. Jones, of Baltimore, received a set of 24 Foxcraft bridge boards.

WATCH your score in duplicate. Failure to do so lost two promising young players, Harry Clendenny, local broadcaster, and P. J. Wester, the right to participate in the finals for the winter championship and perhaps the right to go to Miami as the representatives of Washington. In one of the preliminary contests on the final board, these two lads made a contract of five clubs when vulnerable, entitling them to a score of 600.

It was top for that board among ten or more tables. They were playing East and West and inadvertently the score was entered in the North and South column. Notwithstanding, they carelessly placed their "O. K." upon the score card with the result that they were recorded as having made bottom on the board while their adversaries were given top. As the match was close the defeated pair was enabled to have high score for the evening. The error was not discovered until after the announcement of winners had been made and the defeated couple declined to allow a revision. Although they thus gained entry in the finals they were not successful in winning the coveted opportunity of participating in the tournament in Miami.

"Two Diamonds" Tillie says she can not understand why they call it an unabridged dictionary when she found both the words "contract" and "auction" in it.

McGoofey's First Reader

By H. I. PHILLIPS

WHO is this?
This is Robert.
What is Robert doing?
Robert is sitting in an open boat in a duck blind.
Is Robert uncomfortable?
Very.
Robert is shivering, is he not?
Yes, Robert is shivering.
Why is Robert sitting in the open boat shivering?
He is a duck hunter.
How does he hunt the ducks?
By putting out decoys and waiting until some wild ducks come near.
Then what does he do?
He shoots at the ducks.
Does he get any?
In the course of the whole day he may get one or two.
What will Robert do with the ducks?
He will take them home and eat them.
Does his family like duck?
No.
Does Robert like them?
Not much.
Then why does he take them home and eat them?
Because there isn't much else he can do with a dead duck.
What would it cost Robert to buy two ducks at the market?
It would cost about $1.30.
What did it cost him to get these two ducks?
About $25, if you include car fare, ammunition, boat hire and rubbing liniment.
It doesn't make sense, does it?
No.

THE STORY OF POLLY.

POLLY was a New England girl.

She was born and raised in the hills of Vermont.

All Polly's people were plain-living, straight-laced folk.

She wore heavy woolen underwear the year around as a girl. All her dresses were made with high collars, and she wore her skirts to her shoetops.

Her folks emphasized modesty as a major maidenly virtue.

She never took off her hat without first pulling down the shades.

Once when she turned a corner on a windy day, and the wind blew her skirts above her ankles, she felt so embarrassed she was red for 24 hours.

Her ma made her wear long nightgowns to bed.

She was never allowed to go in swimming because the manufacturers had stopped making swimming costumes with petticoats, stockings and blouses.

Her folks refused to let her take a part in the high school play once because the part assigned to her called for her to appear in her bare feet.

When her boy friend came to call, her mother made her sit in the living room with all the lights on.

Polly was lectured on modesty and the proprieties so much that it hurt.

Then one day her spirit rebelled, and she ran away to New York.

She forgot to write, but some neighbors happed to go to New York. They discovered Polly and told what she was doing.

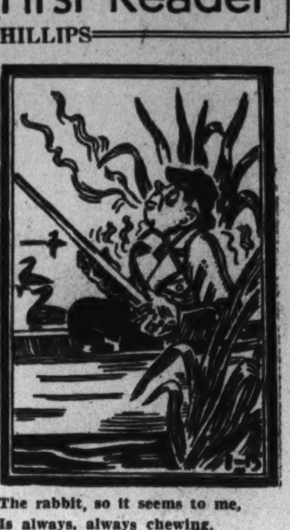
She had taken a job demonstrating a rowing machine in a one-piece bathing suit in a drug-storw window.

Moral—You can overdo any kind of bringing up.

OUR DOMESTIC PETS, THE RABBIT.

The rabbit is an animal
That very quickly grieves
Unless you feed it turnip tops
And lots of cabbage leaves.

It seems to eat the whole day long,
Despite what else it's doing;



The rabbit, so it seems to me,
Is always, always chewing.

It lives in burrows in the ground
And builds a subway grand
In which, unlike the subs we know,
It never has to stand.

It sometimes goes upon the stage
And presently appears
As some magician yanks it from
A silk hat by the ears.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

WASHINGTON boasts of no more polished diplomat than Juan de Jara Almonte. In fact, Almonte is a diplomat by birth. He was born in Paris of Spanish parents, who were visiting the French city, but whose home was in London, where the father was a member of the Spanish Legation.

Almonte is night manager of the National Broadcasting Company in New York. As such, he welcomes all distinguished artists and guests, and what a job he makes of it. In his five years association with radio he has greeted almost as many noted singers, actors, diplomats, business men, visiting nobility and popular idols as Ike Hoover, veteran major domo, has at the White House.

Almonte gained a reputation for astuteness by avoiding a very embarrassing situation one night. A group of notables were guests in the studio for a favorite program. The feature was preceded by an important political talk which, it was learned at the last minute, would run well overtime and force the cancellation of the studio broadcast. Almonte ordered that the program be presented as scheduled, even to the announcements. However, it was heard only in the studio and not broadcast. The guests never knew the difference, unless listening friends outside put them wise later.

That is typical of Almonte, keeping artists, clients and guests happy. He unintentionally pays himself his greatest compliment by declaring that he never has met a temperamental artist, not even among opera singers.

JOSEF HOFMANN, concert pianist, will be heard for the second time this season over WJSV and the Columbia network when he appears as soloist with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra in the broadcast direct from Carnegie Hall, New York, from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon. With Bruno Walter conducting the orchestra in the accompanying passages, Hofmann will play the last and most ambitious of Beethoven's five piano concerti, the B-flat major.

Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times, will act as commentator on the selections played, giving program notes during the concert intermission. The second and concluding number on the presentation will be the infrequently performed Fifth Symphony in B-flat major, by Bruckner.

Lily Pons, prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will give her first radio recital of the season when she sings as guest artist on the General Electric Sunday Concert over WRC at 9 p. m. "Cara Nome," from "Rigoletto," will be Mme. Pons' featured number, and she will make her first venture into American operetta with the "Italian Street Song," from Herbert's "Naughty Marietta." Delibes' "The Girls of Cadiz" and "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn," complete the program.

The tang of the American Negro's folk legends will be brought to radio in a new series of sustaining programs based on Roark Bradford's story of "John Henry" to be presented by Columbia each Sunday night beginning tonight. The program, to be known as "John Henry—Black River Giant," will follow the exploits of the fabulous Negro strong-man of the Mississippi country in dramatized incidents from Bradford's book.

The debut of "John Henry" on the air will bring to radio a new departure in showmanship. The established system of presenting one episode of a series each week or even each night will be set aside for the first time and two episodes of the series will be presented in one evening with a half-hour interval between them. The opening broadcast of "John Henry" will be heard from 8 to 8:15 o'clock tonight. The second episode will be on the air from 8:45 to 9 p. m., Eastern standard time. Each period will be complete in itself.

A NEW detective program, featuring "Detectives Black and Blue," produced and written by Harry Earnshaw, creator of several radio mystery serials, will be heard on Station WRC on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, for 52 weeks, beginning tomorrow night, from 6:30 to 6:45 o'clock.

Harry A. Earnshaw, the author, has woven into this new detective serial a rapid succession of shivers, thrills and laughs. The episodes dramatize the experiences of Black and Blue, correspondence school sleuths. Described as the world's dumbest detectives, Black and Blue, stumble to their own amusement, onto solutions of many a baffling mystery.

The Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., noted Dominican preacher, will give the third of his series of sermons on "Christ and the Delusions of 1933" on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour which will be broadcast from the Immaculate Conception Church over Station WOL at 5 p. m. today. The music will be under the direction of Ann Arlen, violinist; James F. Nolan, barytone, and the Boys' Sanctuary Choir.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER, of Kansas, and Rollo G. Reynolds, principal of Horace Mann School, Teachers College, New York City, will be the principal speakers on "Our American Schools" program over WRC at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Reynolds will talk on "Realities in Education" and Senator Capper will discuss "The Necessity of an Education from the Business Man's Standpoint."

The second part of the play, "The House of Rimmon," written around the biblical story of the healing of Naaman, the leper, by the Prophet Elisha, will be presented by WMAL at 3 o'clock this afternoon under auspices of the Washington Readers Club.

The play is directed by Mary Randolph Ruff, who also plays the part of Ruahmah, the captive maid from Israel.

Y. W. C. A.

The program for the Sunday music hour at Seventeenth and K streets today at 5 o'clock will be given by Betty Baum, pianist. The Cleveland Park Chapter of the Y. W. C. A. will be hostess at tea at 4 o'clock. The music hour today at 614 E street will be a program of German vespers. Those taking part in the program are Miss Minnie Volkman and Mrs. Helen N. Perry. Mrs. Harold Doyle will preside.

The Cleveland Park Chapter will meet tomorrow at 3 o'clock with Mrs. Irving R. Saum, 3218 Newark street, Cleveland Park.

The Princeton Chapter will celebrate its eighteenth birthday tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. William S. Hommers, 715 Webster street northwest.

Miss Ruth Woodsmall, of the foreign division of the national board, will be the speaker at the World Fellowship luncheon tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock at Seventeenth and K streets.

A general party for young people will be held on Wednesday, January 18, from 8:30 to 11 o'clock at Seventeenth and K streets, with dancing and games.

Tomorrow the registrations will close for the Girl Reserve trip to New York. Registrations may be made in the Girl Reserve office until 5:30 p. m. of that day.

The Saturday Morning Girl Reserve Clubs will leave the Y. W. C. A. Building at 9:30 o'clock on Saturday for a sight-seeing trip.

Tomorrow the 3-E Club of the Downtown Center will meet for a cafeteria dinner at 6, followed by a program.

Columbia Heights

On January 5 the Columbia Heights Art Club met with the president, Mrs. M. K. Nalle, in her apartment in Chatham Courts. A paper on Pompeii and Herculaneum was read by Mrs. H. K. Fulton, and a paper, "The Cornish Road Garbaldi," was read by Mrs. E. G. Russell.

Soroptimist Club

The Soroptimist Club held its first meeting of the new administration on Wednesday, at the Lafayette Hotel. The new president of the club, Miss Nora B. Huffman, presided. She asked the cooperation of the members in the work to be carried on in the new administration.

Much of the luncheon hour was taken up with the business of the old administration. The club went on record as sponsoring the unique movement by a society of architects and business men of the city in selecting an old dilapidated house wherever it may be found, rebuilding it into a modern home and allowing a poor family of the District to dwell in it free of charge, and giving them the opportunity of buying it. Clara May Downey, second vice president of the club, invited the members to a social function at Olney Inn.

U. D. of C.

The Gen. J. E. B. Stuart Chapter, U. D. C., met January 4, at Mrs. Julia Almonds, 1735 New Hampshire avenue northwest, Miss Doris Casey presiding. It was decided to give a reception on Gen. Stuart's one hundredth birthday anniversary, February 6. Greetings were read from Mrs. Constance Goodman and Miss Bertha Deane. Mrs. A. W. Tuck gave a description of her trip abroad. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Woodridge Book Club

The January meeting of the Woodridge Book Club was held in the Woodridge Branch Library, Tuesday morning. President Mrs. Oscar E. Meinzer conducted the meeting. Mrs. Walter Lydenberg was hostess. The program was "Brief History of France," by Mrs. Charles Norris; "The Basque Country," by Mrs. Mary Wingate; "The Women of Rostand's Plays," by Miss Marian Weed.

PENALTIES AND OVERBIDDING.

MOST small penalties at game contracts throughout a rubber cannot entirely be laid at the door of overbidding. Overbidding is the mark of the aggressive player, and while on certain hands his policy is a losing one, in the long run a skillful manipulation of the cards enables him to make many apparently impossible contracts. For this reason, consistent overbidding by the eventual Declarer cannot be called a fault.

These small sets are chiefly due to a habit which is hard to overcome—namely, the habit of rebidding the same values. A player holding a hand fairly strong in honor-tricks, but with little playing strength, makes an Opening bid. His partner gives him a minimum Raise, and because of his top-card strength, he now contracts for game. He fails to realize that his lack of distribution decreases the strength of his tops, and that, consequently, his first bid has been about all that his hand is worth. For example, take the following hand:

Spades	A K x x
Hearts	A x x
Diamonds	K x x
Clubs	x x x

This hands contains 3½ honor-tricks and is a sound Opening bid of one spade. When his partner raises to two spades, however, he should not count his additional honor-trick over a minimum as worth a Rebid. A moment's glance at the possibilities of the hand will assure him of this, as it is fairly obvious that he cannot expect his partner to turn up with enough to fill in his many losers. The same honor strength with a slightly different distribution could conceivably warrant a double Rebid, and even with less honor strength the Opening bidder could offer one more try for game.

It may seem that the above statements stress the importance of distribution over honor strength. Actually they are about equal in importance, and the presence of one without the other handicaps the hand greatly. It is the player who can balance the two values the most effectively who will prove the most successful in the long run.

• • • •

It is surprising how many people are confused by one point in the new rubber scoring. This point is one which I am sure the Whist Club felt would be quite easy to understand, and yet it seems to be causing more confusion than all the others put together. This is the new notrump scoring. The fact that the tricks are scored 30-40-30-40, ad infinitum, would seem to be a fairly simple one, and yet, in scoring overtricks, many people are under the impression that the first overtrick must start at 30, regardless of the number of notrump bid. I think a simple emphasis of the fact that there is no difference between tricks scored below the line and tricks scored above the line would be the best way of clearing up the matter. If three notrump are bid and four made, the overtrick, which is the fourth trick, counts 40 and not 30. If people will bear this main principle in mind they should not continue to go wrong.

As far as I, myself, am concerned, the most confusing matter is the question of undertricks. While the mathematical ratio is quite sound and the method of figuring quite simple, I still find myself occasionally confused by the 900's, the 1,000's, the 1,350's and the 1,400's, all of which possibilities still exist. However, I am quite sure that it is only a question of time before all these things will become instinctive, and then we will look upon the old scoring as antiquated, and rate the present one as exactly what was needed to perfect the game—that is, until the next changes occur.

Against certain players, deliberate underbidding can prove very effective. These players, knowing you to be naturally optimistic, will place a certain amount of strength in their partner's hand when you deliberately allow the bidding to die at a low contract. Occasionally, of course, tactics such as these will sacrifice a game, but in other cases the penalty which will be derived will more than compensate for these "lost" games.

The following hand was played at a table of experts at Crockford's Club not long ago, and the unfortunate East player, one of the ranking experts of the country, found himself trapped through the failure of his left-hand opponent to live up to his reputation of bidding every hand to the hilt.

North—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North:
♠ Q 7 5 4
♡ Q J 7
♢ J 4
♣ A K Q 5

West:
♠ 9 8 6
♡ K 10 8 2
♢ 7 6 5
♣ J 10 9

East:
♠ J 10 3
♡ A 9 4
♢ A Q 9 8 3

South:
♠ A K 2
♡ 6 5 3
♢ K 10 2
♣ 6 4 3 2

The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣(1)	Pass(2)	1♡(3)	Pass
1NT(4)	Pass(5)	2♣(6)	Pass
Pass(7)	2♢(8)	Dbl.(9)	Pass
Pass	Pass(10)

1—An absolute minimum when vulnerable. This bid proved a very fortunate one for the team.

2—Awaiting developments.

3—This bid can be explained only as wishing to avoid a lead of hearts if the eventual contract should be three notrump.

4—Two hearts might have been better, but the hand is an absolute minimum, and the opening bidder wished to convey that fact.

5—Still awaiting developments and hoping that a three no-trump contract would be defeated.

6—A remarkable underbid. In the first place it was more or less of a sign-off, and in the second place the issue had already been confused by the first heart bid. In this particular case it was made deliberately, in order to trap East in reopening the bidding.

7—Obviously this hand contained no further Rebids.

8—East finally entered the bidding. Knowing that South would not sign off a hand in which he held any strength at all, and also knowing that North could be relied upon to push the bidding higher if his values warranted it, it seemed fairly obvious that a great deal of the missing strength must be located in the West hand. In this case it was essential that the partial be defended.

9—Even with only three trumps, the Double is quite sound. The hand is probably worth 4 tricks in defense of diamonds and partner can certainly be counted on for at least 2. The balanced distribution of the hand also creates the impression that the other hands are probably balanced also.

10—Trapped, but unable to extricate himself.

The play was quite simple, and East was unable to avoid a 3-trick set, or a penalty of 900 points. Two clubs, three spades, one heart and two diamonds were lost before the massacre was completed, and the sorrowful Declarer could only curse himself for having fallen into the net which had been laid for him. Of course, had South's tactics not succeeded, he and his partner would have sacrificed a perfectly good vulnerable game, but who would not trade a vulnerable game for the very fine possibility of a 3-trick set of vulnerable opponents?

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Neither side is vulnerable. You have bid one heart. Your partner has responded with one spade. You hold:

Spades	Q 4
Hearts	A Q 3 2
Diamonds	K J 6 3
Clubs	9 8 4

What do you bid?

Answer—One notrump, in line with the Approach-Forcing principle of keeping a "One Over One" bid open whenever possible. Although this hand is a minimum Opening bid, the extra value of the Queen of spades plus the slight fit with partner's spade bid makes it advisable to give partner another chance.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Each Sunday I am giving a problem in bidding. This is Number 2 of the new series, which started last week. The answer to today's problem will be given next Sunday.

You hold:

Spades	A Q 9 2
Hearts	A J 4
Diamonds	7
Clubs	A Q 10 6 3

Neither side is vulnerable. You have bid one club. Your partner has responded with one notrump. What do you bid?

PURPLE ATTIRE, INCLUSIVE OF HATS, STRIKINGLY BECOMES MRS. LONGWORTH

All Brimmed Hats of Straw Worn in South

Crowns Are Deep Enough to Hold Chapeau on Head At Breezy Beaches.

By DARE.

Now's the time, my deahs, with the cold north wind blowing, and sleet and snow falling, on most of us, at least, to start in singing that old song of the Southland's styles. For the fortunate among us are going forth to playlands of all nations, to bask in the sun, on golden sands, in clothes lovelier than ever before. 'N' just because there are more unfortunates than fortunates, at least from the go-south-young-maid angle, you needn't think it a waste of time and energy to discuss Southland fashions.

For that's just where you're wrong. Southern resort fashions affect all of us—a little later on. The frocks, pajamas, or lack of 'em, bathing suits 'n' other suits of all descriptions that hie their way to warm climes now, tell us just what we're going to wear when the warm weather comes our way. And whether these clothes are worn on the Riviera or in Palm Beach, they'll be worn by smart women everywhere when summer comes.

Year after year the same characteristics spring up in summery, resort clothes. Prints, for instance, always return to favor, after semi-obscurity, and a Southern season without jackets just wouldn't be a season. Then, brilliant colors and color contrasts always crop out at this time, and I was interested to see in nearly all the collections in Paris recently that the old favorite, red and white, was with us again.

Now, don't start thinking that the Haute Couture is lying down on its job just because I say this—or that originality is no more. On the contrary, these old acquaintances of ours return to us in brand-new and even lovelier-than-ever guises and indicate very careful thought and the necessary touch of genius on the part of the couturiers. Prints of this season are completely different from those of former ones; jackets haven't a thing in common with previous ones, and the familiar color combination of red and white is carried out in most novel ways.

Jackets are seen just about every hour of the day. They don't contrast with the skirts as they did before—some bright soul must have discovered how sawed-off it made nearly every woman look. The well-tailored novelty jersey or fantasy wool suits worn for the Southward journeys matched perfectly as to skirt and jacket, giving a slim, trim look that just makes the really smart suit. Even in the bright printed jackets and skirts that are worn about in the mornings there isn't any return to the "reversed' idea that was so popular before. There is a tendency to have a plain skirt exactly matching the background of the printed jacket, but as the design printed is scattered, leaving large spaces of background visible, the contrast isn't startling.

And now for a few brand-new observations that stand alone and don't have to be compared with any previous Southern fashions. There isn't any quaintness! Even evening gowns have a sort of informality that prohibits period styles. 'N' the basque beret and pancake and draped turban hats worn in cities right now aren't in a single case going South. Hats for Southern wear are all brimmed, generally of rough straw, and with crowns sufficiently deep to hold the hat firmly on the head in breezy moments.

And here my space is all used up and I haven't told you about bathing suits and beach dresses and lots of things! Never mind, I'll write you another letter about these soon.

Gown of Princess of Red and Blue

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Princesse de Faucigny Lucinge wears a smart ensemble of navy blue and red wool this season. The coat of diagonal blue wool is designed along fitted lines and finished with a shawl collar lined in bright red wool.

The frock of red wool has a corsage buttoning straight down the front, finished with a fabric tie.

Brown Gown Worn By Mrs. Vanderbilt

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt wears a striking costume of reddish brown this season. The coat of reddish brown wool, designed along simple lines, is trimmed with a voluminous collar and cuffs of sable.

With it she wears a simple frock of reddish brown crepe to match the coat.

White Vest Worn With Black Jersey

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The Duchesse de Levis-Mirepoix wears this winter a black jersey frock which has sleeves set square onto the shoulders with black buttons. It is finished with a little vest of white crepe de chine tied with a soft bow at the throat.

Shirtwaist Frocks Of Dark Colors

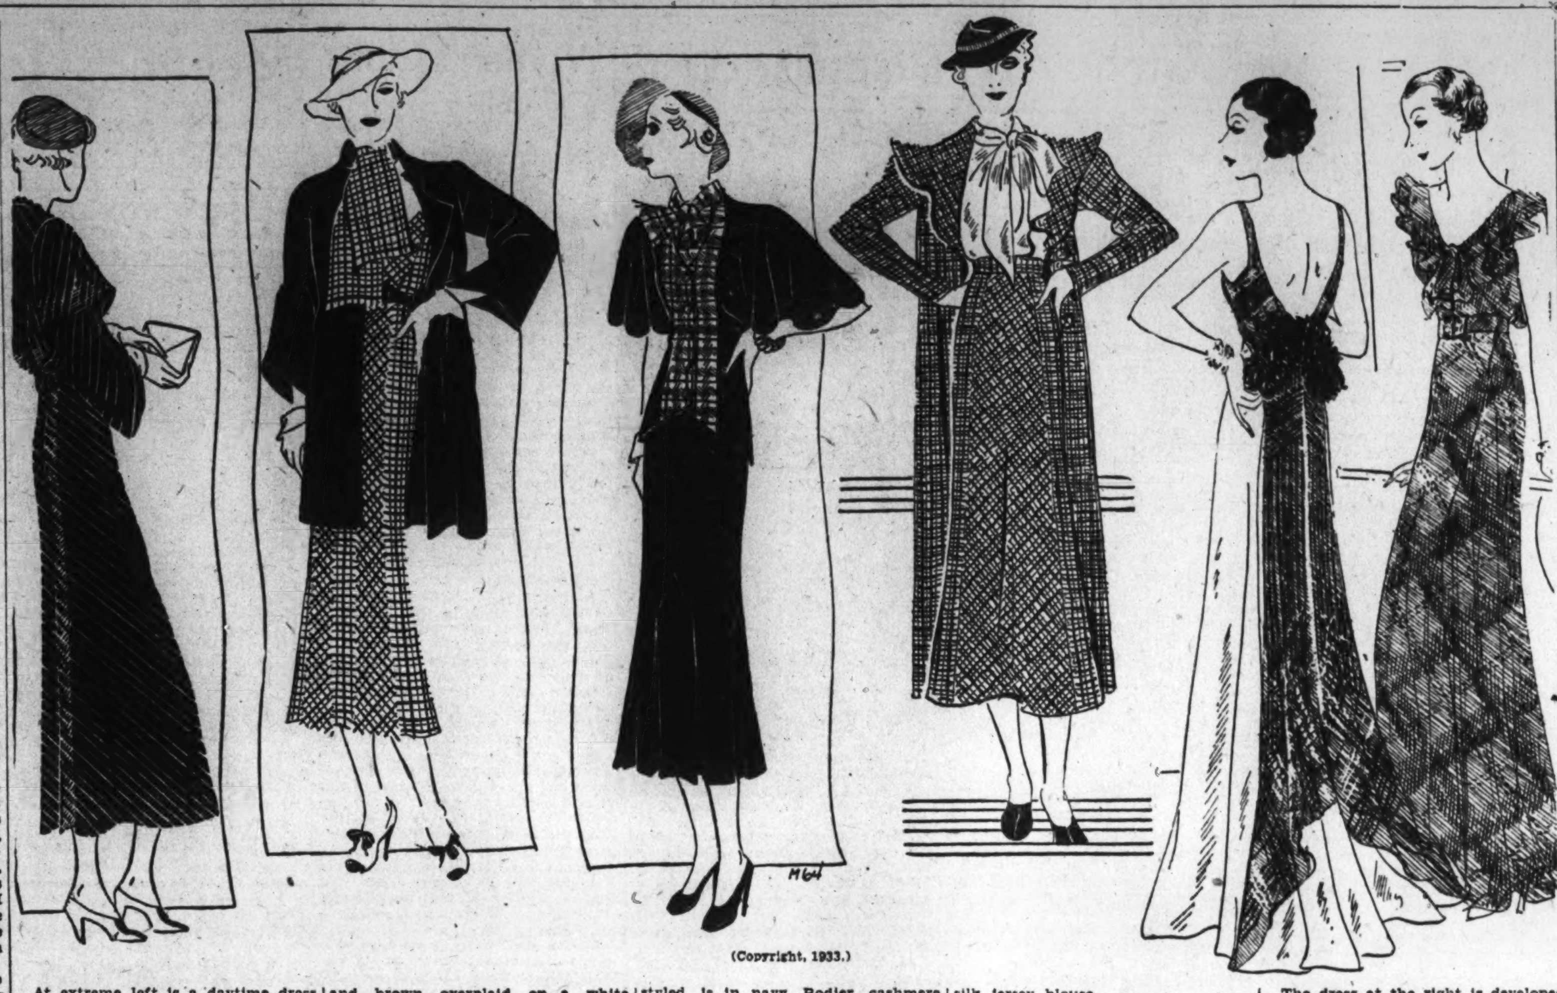
Shirtwaist frocks for formal wear, done in the sheerest fabrics and in dark colors, with high neck and long-sleeved blouses and full-length skirts, are one of the newest ways of coordinating formal and informal themes into a very sophisticated costume which may serve many purposes.

Skirts Will Be Full

Fullness, back or front, is this year's limit on fullness at all in skirts. Just as long as the side profile stays straight and slim, pleats or shirred fullness are permissible.

Dresses for Cruises

The lightweight woolen dress for active sports is something that should go on numerous cruises, or be worn at home.



(Copyright, 1933.)

At extreme left is a daytime dress developed in a striped and bordered print, black and white with a dash of red. The covered shoulder, fullness at back and button detail are effective. The next costume combines a black and brown overplaid on a white ground with a brown woolen, the latter used for the coat in three-quarter length. The scarf is a noteworthy feature.

The jacket costume, youthfully styled, is in navy Rodier cashmere wool, with the linen weave waistcoat a gay springlike detail.

Next, a checked woolen is sponsored for long coat suit, in blue, eggshell and pink with the pink repeated in silk jersey blouse.

The first evening gown is fashioned of white jacquard taffeta, with sections of the bodice and long panels at the back in red, white and black chiffon with a plaided border.

The dress at the right is developed in a plaid chiffon, with dots and stripes creating an effective pattern, the colors including apple green for the ground, with blue and orange for contrast.

Old-Fashioned Buttons Are Losing Ground

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The old-fashioned button is losing ground in the advancing style parade. The smart set is fastening its clothes these days with new and tricky knickknacks, and manicured fingers are fumbling with slides and strings, thongs and bars, lacing milady into her twentieth century costume in a manner reminiscent of a fifteenth century knight.

Buttonholes remain in the style scene, however, for most of the new fastenings are slipped through a slit in the frock before they are clamped or tied in place.

Copper and brass, bone and glass, string, leather and wood are used for the new gadgets which many fashionables use to fasten their clothes. Bolts and bars, stirrups and stars are only some of the shapes of the new designs.

Two-inch copper squares laced and tied like a shoe, 6-inch copper bars thrust through a series of copper loops, and copper pyramids snapped to the fabric are used on importations from one Paris house to fasten the sports and street clothes which it designs in blue and brown wools.

Leather rolls 3 inches long, slipped through a leather loop, and broad copper hooks or other innovations of the same house. Silver daggers passed through a silver ring and held in place by a little chain, wooden bolts slipped through a fabric loop and white bone stirrups passed through a slit in the material are used by another designer to fasten up street clothes.

A silver key passed through a silver disk closes a raincoat, a wooden spear slipped through a gold ring holds a sports coat in place, and a silver ball and chain clasps the girdle of a black satin afternoon frock. Safety pins are much in the picture, big gold and silver ones being used to fasten sports scarfs. Belts also reflect the vogue for unusual fastenings. Some of them lace together like an old-fashioned corset, while others are snapped into place by galalith, or burnished metal clips.

White Crepe Gown Featured by Fringe

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Fringe is being worn by some of the smartest women in Paris. Among them is the Marchesa Sommi Piccenardi, who has a frock of white pebbled crepe with long fringe hanging from the hip yoke to the hem.

Dark Straw Hat Of Black Leghorn

Trimmings on hats are becoming a preoccupation with French modistes, just as they are with some of our own.

Black leghorn is a new note for the dark straw hat, and Lemonier gets the credit for it.

Plaid Evening Dresses Predicted By Stylists as Coming Fashion

Frocks So Patterned Will Be as Chic as Once Were Striped Gowns, It Is Asserted—Crayon Prints Shown in Brush-stroke Effects. Matelasse Crepe Has Returned.

By ELEANOR GUNN.

New York, Jan. 14.—It must make even a dour Scotchman smile to see the way we are all clamoring for Scotch in one form or another—usually in plaid, the purest Scotch of all. While it is not literally true that a plaid evening dress is a thing unheard of, it is true that it is rarely seen. But how long one may be able to say that, is a moot question. Stylists believe that plaid evening dresses are going to be rather plentiful. They argue that they are not only different, but quite as chic as the striped ones, and these, as we know, have gone over.

Whether we wear plaids for evening or whether we wear plaids for afternoon, the fact remains that we will wear plaids. The Glenurquhart, which is called both a plaid and a check, has every chance of becoming as fashionable with women as with men—that is, if the classic tailleur comes in as strong as is predicted. Plaid sports or top coats, and smaller plaids and checks in shirtwaist dresses, either in flannel or cotton, are already backed by those who never bet on anything but a sure thing.

It will not be long, now, before prints of various kinds will be engaging our attention—florals, geometrical designs and such. Among the first to be shown are those in crayon or brush-stroke effects. These are rather sketchily done, and therein lies their chief charm.

At the moment we are less concerned with prints than we are with interesting weaves. While a good many classic crepes are worn, these are outnumbered by the rougher crepes, the leader of which is matelasse, an old friend returned in fine fettle. As long as a woman is allowed to use a mat and a shiny-surfaced fabric together, she does not seem to mind if color contrasts are denied her. This season, when she has both, she is naturally quite content with the outlook.

There is talk of the two-piece dress being revived, not only in the shirtwaist type already press-agented, but also in dressier versions. It is to be doubted whether any effort will be made to deprive us of the ensemble—call it what they may.

Smart Women Are Inclining To Monograms

Chicago, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—M is for monogram in today's fashion alphabet, and monogrammed the smartly dressed woman can be, if she desires, from the crown of her hat to the tips of her stockinged feet.

A modishly dressed woman was seen on Michigan boulevard with two medium-sized chromium initials ornamenting her severely plain black mid-season hat.

The jewelry counters offer such an array of initials that no longer should it be possible for an accident victim to be described "as without a clue to her identity."

First there are huge initial breastpins set with rhinestones. There are smaller ones if desired. Then there are bracelets engraved or embossed with initials or the first name.

Smart handbags carry initials, and some of the new ones are very large. They are to be had in chromium, copper or gold metal finish for daytime use and in rhinestones for formal occasions.

Handkerchiefs can be had with the full name embroidered in a corner.

And the vogue of the embroidered first name in stepins and teddies is still here.

The holiday season saw the advent of monogrammed hosiery with the initial cleverly worked into the midsection of the clocks.

Fancy Materials Put In Fluffy Blouses

Blousemakers are introducing the softer note in the most utterly feminine type that can be imagined.

While not strictly new this spring (since it was launched last fall but not generally adopted), the "fluffy" blouse involves such bonbon effects as sheer silks, candy pastels and rows of baby width Valenciennes lace ruffled, and applied in allover patterns. It is the lingerie 1900 blouse to the nth degree.

New Worsted Twills In Tans and Blue

We are headed for a suit spring and, with the confident statement that suits will be good, comes the prediction that a first choice will be the classic tailleur.

Fabrics take their cue from the silhouette and are more mannish than ever. Most advanced in feeling are the worsted twills in tans and blue that look positively old-fashioned they are so new.

Many Intriguing Items in Fashions Are Revealed in Capital Stores

Coats, Gowns and Singlettes Discussed by Meanderer in Shopping Tour.

By M. REED BUNDY.

"Spring lines are straight. Spring sleeves are full." Thus began the modish lady who is one of those who know about what women should wear, if her important position with one of Washington's smartest shops is any criterion.

"But it's still winter," rudely insisted the Meanderer, fresh from a walk against one of those stinging winds Washington injects frequently into January.

"Oh, you are one of those women who want none of spring until it's here," the Woman Who Knows about style said tolerantly to the Meanderer. "There are many like you and we are ready for you. We have studied the spring styles, have taken the spring coats and have copied them line for line in warm, wooly, cozy winter materials. How is that for respecting you women who like warm clothes with smart lines in January?

"Admirable. You deserve a medal," the Meanderer beamed, warming to the assigned subject of style reviewing, in the comfort of the luxurious rose-draped style salon. Gallant cooperation was given by the salespeople and eagerly taken by the Meanderer in her quest for "what women want to know about clothes."

So the winter coats with spring lines were displayed. Furthermore, the heavy winter models were placed side by side with the spring ones, and the Meanderer could see that the advance coats were not a whit smarter than the winter coats, and often were line for line, almost stitch for stitch, alike except for weight of materials. Furthermore, the winter coats are on sale. Call The Washington Post, National 4205, extension 52, on Monday and you may learn where to find the winter coats with spring lines, at January sale prices.

An ensemble for spring warm enough to brave the chilly January winds has three fetching parts—coat, skirt and a jacket blouse. It is a Schiaparelli model. Very different materials and color combinations have been used in the execution of this model shown in the important shop mentioned just above. A dark brown coat and skirt, with a jacket blouse, which is not apricot or orange color, but a skilful mixture of these colors; another brown coat and skirt has a jacket of a block-patterned Linton tweed in brown and white; still further in variation is a blue and white Linton tweed coat to be worn over a plain blue matching jacket blouse and skirt.

Evening dresses in high shades, shown by a pretty brunette model, were especially interesting. A brilliant red crepe evening gown made very simple with its only trimming a row of jeweled buttons below the low-cut back; a sapphire-blue Lanvin model with a graceful shoulder cape; and a violet and blue printed white crepe evening gown for spring with a most graceful jacket in deep violet crepe tying in the back in long sash ends, were the three best remembered by the Meanderer out of the dazzling array presented.

Scarcely out of their packings were some airy things suitable for Southern trips, including a hand-blocked, mouse-line in pastel pink and green; a much be-ruffled poppy chiffon; a yellow crepe gown with matching jacket, simple and untrimmed; a quite new and sophisticated evening gown of gray with fur-trimmed shoulder cape; a hand-crocheted, two-piece gown in neutral colors; in rose tints, red and other high shades, very new; an unusual gown made entirely of sheer scarfs in plaid designs; and a stunning black crepe frock with long sleeves and yoke of stripes in Czechoslovakian boldness, which may be dimmed at the wearer's desire with an accompanying black crepe shoulder cape, which slips over the head, devoid of fastenings.

"Patou's tuxedo" is a smart jacket-gown of soft, imported black woolen and fine black satin, made to sell for about $35, now reduced to $16.50 in the January dress sales in a Seventh street shop, whose labels read "Serving Washington since 1860." Another interesting value in the dress sale is a green imported woolen with removable baranduchi cape collar, also tagged $16.50; also worthy of attention of those hunting good dress values are some wool crepe dresses in smart removable cape designs in black, green and blue for $25.

If you are small, wearing under size 14, there is a quaintly interesting little red gown which may suit you exactly in the shop described in the preceding paragraph. It is of wine crepe with cunningly puffed long sleeves and fitted waistline. It's chief trimming is a narrow bit of real ermine bordering the neckline.

"Velvet evening gowns are acceptable throughout the year," declared a dress buyer in the shop on Seventh street under discussion above. "Aboard ship on my buying trips velvet evening gowns are worn in to dinner regardless of the time of year." Often the velvet evening gown is a double duty one, with a long-sleeved jacket matching the evening costume. Just such a useful gown in wanted shades of green and in other colors is selling for the absurdly low price of $10 in the dress department just mentioned.

"Singlettes," meaning most efficient bits of underthings meant especially for wear under evening dresses, are priced from $2.95 to $4.95 in one of Washington's department stores where high-class silk underwear is sold as reasonably as the Meanderer has found such merchandise anywhere. This store also is in the Seventh street shoppping district. One of the nicest of the "singlettes" is of the best heavy glove silk, with brassiere top, elastic straps and detachable garters. It sells for $4.95.

Exquisite white underthings suitable for trousseaus are marked to $3.95 from their original price of $5.95 in the underwear department of the big store on Seventh street, where the Meanderer found the "singlettes." There, too, are beautiful hand-made, real silk gowns for $3.95, the same merchandise which could hardly have been bought for twice that amount two years ago. Bias cut slips, tailored or lace trimmed, white pastel or colors, in good quality silk, are priced in this store $1.95 up.

Lace bed jackets for as little as $1.95 are being sold to accompany dainty silk nightgowns trimmed in similar lace. In the Seventh street department store mentioned just above the total cost of the lace jacket and gown may be under $5.

Telephone your questions about anything mentioned in the above paragraphs to The Washington Post on Monday and you will be directed to the places where the women's wear articles are sold. Call National 4205, Extension 52, for attention to your inquiries. Each Sunday the Meanderer will report on weekly shopping tours, with the hope that her searching for values in both style and price will be of service to Washington women.

Men's Shirting Features Spiffy Sport Frocks

Material Is Diagonal With Pin Stripes and Is Made Into Tailored Dresses Both Wearable and Trim; Plaids Out in Front.

Chicago, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Men's shirting has found a new job this spring, dry goods displays disclose, in clothing feminine winter resorters in spiffy sport frocks.

The material is made up into tailored dresses that are both wearable and trim. Shirting with diagonal pin stripes is smart and many of the new creations have hats of similar material to match.

Stripes again hold well in the spring fashions and checks also are very good. Plaids are out in front, too.

One new print, called "rain drop print," features solid colored backgrounds with brightly colored "rain drops." One is in beige with red and white "rain drops" and another has red and white "rain drops" of a blue background.

There's a voile called "triple sheer" that is lovely for evening frocks. It comes both in solid colors and printed effects.

Silk taffetas, now being unpacked by the shops, are becoming prominent for the in-between season wardrobe. Black and midnight blue models are leaders, but gray lends a new note.

Decided color combinations are also being favored. One shop shows an oyster white taffeta frock with two deep rich garnet bows on each shoulder.

Mrs. Taft Also Is Fond Of Appearing in Purple

Printed Dresses Are Shown in Greater Numbers at Teas and Luncheons.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

HARBINGERS of spring are the newest of the printed dresses which are appearing in greater numbers each day at luncheons and teas and even dinners and dances. Those who are to remain in Washington all spring as well as those who have already left or are packing for a late winter at a Southern resort have hailed the new prints, especially the flowered ones, with delight as relief from the clothes of the winter.

There is a verve to the new silks, chiffons and woolens with designs of flowers or stripes or plaids on them that can not but appeal and strike the beholder with their difference. In our Washington shops we see gay little dresses of the shadow prints in flowered or conventional effects in grays and brown and dark blues and black and white for Washington wear and real summer colors for the South. The flowered evening dresses have made their annual reappearance, vying with the pastel shaded chiffon evening dresses for popularity. Next to gingham for morning wear, flowered organdie dresses are to be the prime leaders in the fashion parade in late spring and early summer.

Already the new administration has put its stamp of approval on these flowered and printed silks and cottons and chiffons. Both Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter, Mrs. Curtis Dall, took a goodly supply with them on their recent vacation at Warm Springs, Ga.

Mrs. Longworth in Purple.

How well Mrs. Nicholas Longworth looks in purple and how smart this color is. Not only is Mrs. Longworth wearing much purple for evening wear, but she has a chic costume for day time, of purple wool made on sport lines with a shaded wool scarf knotted about her throat. With this she wears the same type of hat she always chooses, with due regard, of course, to the prevailing fashion trends, with a soft crown and medium drooping brim. With the purple dress she wears a purple hat.

Miss Ann Daingerfield was the center of attraction at one of the young people's luncheons of last week, in a dress of gray wool, made with large sleeves and a sport-like scarf collar and an intriguing little gray hat sitting far up on her softly waving hair. Miss Daingerfield was the subject of the painting by Bjorn Egell, "Cameo," which won the popular prize at the Corcoran Gallery biennial exhibition of American oil paintings last week.

Mrs. William Howard Taft has a penchant for the popular purple and has an ensemble costume of purple velvet trimmed with rich dark fur. With this Mrs. Taft wears a small purple hat.

Frances Hill looks handsome in her new spring hat of black felt and straw which she wears with an advance spring model suit of gray and black and red silk made in coat effect. Miss Hill also has a rustling modish taffeta evening dress of pale shell pink flowered in blue.

At Work for Inaugural.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman has garbed herself for the hard work she is doing for the inaugural committee in chic tailored wool dresses, which look smart at any hour of the day and besides make such comfortable "working dresses." Mrs. Harriman, who has a decided liking for printed silks with small designs on them, has a gray one and a brownish and tan one for the warmer days.

Many eyes followed Mal Sykes as she danced through the mazes of the cotillion at the Bachelors last week in a dress of blue velvet just matching her eyes with that dash of elegance even a debutante likes, achieved by the touches of ermine on the gown. When she put on her short white coat with the high collar at home she presented still another changing picture.

Mrs. John N. Garner seldom gets the tribute she should as a well-dressed American business woman, if the secretary to the Speaker of the House can be described as a business woman, of course. Mrs. Garner always has her really pretty hair well arranged and wears smart dresses of dark silk. Already she has acquired one of the new dark printed silks, perhaps as a promise of the spring that is nearly here, which will usher in the "new deal" of which she is to play such an important part.

Somehow one would not have to know Mme. Claudel by sight to pick her out from among a group of diplomatic women as the wife of the French Ambassador and doyenne of the corps. She looks the part. Recently she wore a suit of the new brown rough surface satin made on modish lines and a hat of brown silk so closely fitted to her head that it was hard to tell where the hat ended and the neat coiffure of shining hair began.

Mme. Claudel is a consistent advocate of the chicness of the small hat. Since she has been in Washington she has not been lured from her adherence to this type of chapeau by any passing winds of fashion.

Worn in Congress.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who would be scornfully impatient if she could hear the visitors in the House of Representatives describe her as "cute," is always so well and appropriately dressed for the sessions of Congress. Her clothes are of the handsomest material and so well made, and even the cut of the black silk smock she sometimes wears for work in her office in the House Office Building is well cut and becoming.

Mrs. Rogers is wearing a dress of heavy herring bone silk crepe just now with sleeves wider above the elbows than below them and with a neatly knotted white chiffon collar to match the knotted cuffs. She, too, has a liking for flowered silks for wear under coats now or without a coat when the first warm days arrive. Mrs. Rogers seldom wears colors, but has in readiness, it has been learned, for a bright spring day, a dress of gray and black shadow silk and an attractive little straw hat to go with it.

Color of Hosiery Will Be Neutral

Greges, those illusive values that are claimed by both the gray and beige families, will make their appearance in spring hosiery colors.

Neutrality is the keynote of practically all hosiery. Colors are being adopted on the basis of versatility—their ability to blend with costumes and shoes.

New Jumper Has Contrasting Skirt in Color

Material in Different Designs Also Shown as Outstanding Paris Mode.

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Striking combinations of different fabrics and different colors in one ensemble mark the mode sponsored by Lelong in his latest collection.

A new tunic costume combining a sleeved or sleeveless jumper with a contrasting skirt, is among outstanding notes. Occasionally the jumper contrasts with the skirt in color, again it varies in fabric, and again it contrasts in the design of the material as when stripes are combined with a plain fabric.

A dark green wool skirt is worn with a white shirt blouse and a sleeveless jumper of red knit wool topped with a dark green jacket. A wine red wool frock appears with a sleeveless jumper of wine red velvet, while a blue and white striped wool skirt is finished with a tunic blouse of plain blue wool. The tunics, which are of hip length are generally belted.

Sleeves which contrast with the body of the frock are another interesting note. One of the smartest of these is a simple black wool model with big sleeves of knitted wool in orange, green, beige and black stripes.

The evening mode, designed on long slended lines, combines velvets with lace, crêpe and chiffon in a score of different ways. A black lace frock has a flat pink velvet bow appliqued at the waistline in back and is worn with a short pink velvet wrap collared in black fox.

A pale blue satin princess gown has long shoulder straps of dark blue velvet which blend into the back vee decollete, and a brown chiffon dancing frock is accented at the shoulder line and waist with shirred chiffon circles centered in brown velvet.

Novel Evening Gowns Striped

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Striped evening gowns are a novelty of the evening mode being adopted by smart women.

They are made of a heavy white silk crepe worked in half-inch stripes of lusterless black silk. Most of them are simply made on a princess silhouette, relying on the novelty of the fabric for their chic.

Crepe Is Chosen for Evening Gown

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Comtesse de Ganay wears an evening gown of heavy, black pebbly crepe, which is distinguished for the gold and silver rings fitted into the shoulder straps of the square decolletage.

It is designed along a straight, form-fitting silhouette, with a bolero effect at the back.

Gray Broadcloth Is Singer's Choice

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Miss Cleora Wood, American soprano appearing this winter at the Opera Comique, wears a frock of pale gray broadcloth designed with a draped bodice and close-fitting sleeves.

It is accompanied by a cape of gray broadcloth banded in gray astrakhan.

Marquise Chooses Turquoise Gown

Bandage Sleeves Novelty in Paris

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Bandage sleeves are something new. One designer makes afternoon frocks and hip-length evening wraps of black velvet with the sleeves made entirely of strips of the material wound about the arm in criss-cross fashion.

Mist Gray and Hyacinth Blue New Spring Colors

Beige and Green Also Among Outstanding Hues in Mid-season Fashions Which Are Appearing; Coat Dress Seen in Brown Tweed Flecked With Beige.

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—New midseason ensembles in springtime shades of mist gray, hyacinth blue, beige or green have made their debut in the fashion world to freshen wilting winter wardrobes before real spring styles appear.

They are designed with three-quarter length coats or hip-length jackets harmonizing with a frock, or skirt and blouse. Most of them are as trimly tailored as a man's suit, depending on the flash of a scarf or the fillip of a new frivolity to strike a feminine note.

Gray is one of the most popular hues. One smart model has a severely tailored jacket of oxford gray wool, a straight-line skirt of lighter gray and a little high-necked blouse of black wool crepe studded with pink polka dots.

Another combines a gray wool frock having a brown hand-knit yoke with a hip-length gray jacket and a gray knitted scarf of gray, brown and leaf-green. A third ensemble in a mist gray diagonal weave is accented by a narrow bright red leather belt.

Hyacinth-blue ribbed jersey makes one of the smartest designs. A three-quarter-length, straight-line coat with exaggerated padded shoulders and brown rolled leather fasteners is worn with a straight skirt of the same material and a high-necked blouse of dark blue crinkled crepe.

Coat and frock ensembles are another wardrobe freshener. A three-quarter-length dark blue velveteen coat appears with a dark blue marocain frock touched with white peau d'ange.

A beige wool frock having a belt and neckline edged in cocoa-brown ribbon is worn with a straight-line beige coat trimmed in brown galyak bands, and a green wool frock is accompanied by a hip-length cape of green corduroy velvet.

Coat dresses are also offered to vary the mode. One of the smartest, of brown tweed, flecked with beige, is designed on straight, trim lines, with its only accent a triangular scarf held in place by three silver squares.

The closing feature of the morning will be a delegates' conference conducted by Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk, secretary of the Commission on International Justice and Good Will of the Federal Council of Churches, the general theme being "What Can We Do to Help the Situation at Geneva?"

Dr. Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald, will serve as chairman of a round table on Wednesday afternoon, the general theme being "Clearing Up Causes of Disagreement and Misunderstanding;" other speakers at the round table will be Frederick Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, and Bruce Bliven, editor of The New Republic. The afternoon session will close with an address by Dr. D. F. Fleming, assistant professor of political science at Vanderbilt University, whose subject will be "Should the United States Apply for Membership in the League of Nations?"

A marathon round table will be conducted during the evening, the participants of which have been selected by the various States. Following the seminar on "Peace on the Western Hemisphere," which will be conducted on Thursday morning by Dr. Duggan, an address on "War-Provoking Influence of the Manufacture of Armament" will be delivered by Dr Ralph H. Stimson, instructor in political science at the University of Vermont. Dr. Stimson will also speak at the opening session on Thursday afternoon on "The War System," and he will be followed by Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, of the Institute of Economics of the Brookings Institution, whose subject will be "What Issues Should Be Considered at the Coming Economic Conference?"

A round table on "War Debts" will be conducted on Thursday evening, Dr. Jacob Viner, professor of economics of the University of Chicago, serving as chairman, the principal participants being Dr. Jacob H. Hollander, professor of political economy at Johns Hopkins University; Prof. Stephen P. Duggan, Mrs. Beatrice Pitney Lamb, of the League of Women Voters; Dr. William Crane Johnstone, of the school of government at the George Washington University; William T. Stone, of the Foreign Policy Association, and Dr. Susan B. Lough, of the University of Richmond.

The closing sessions of the conference will be held on Friday, the seminar on "Peace on the Western Hemisphere" being continued from the previous days. The closing address of the morning will be delivered by Dr. Nathaniel Peffer Guggenheim Fellow in China, who will talk on "The Situation in Asia—Does it Help or Hinder the Coming of Permanent Peace?"

Mrs. Vera Micheles Dean, of the Foreign Policy Association, will open the afternoon session with an address entitled "Russia Plans a New Order!" and at the evening session Mrs. Israel Zangwill will speak on "The World Around." Dr. William Allan Nielson, president of Smith College, will talk on "The Chances for Peace in the World Today;" and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the national committee on the Cause and Cure of War, will give the closing address. Miss Ruth Morgan is the administrative chairman of the conference and will preside throughout the conference.

Women Abroad Are Still Mute in Political Matters.

With the gathering of the clans of many different organizations of women in Washington for midwinter meetings and conferences and to prepare for spring conventions there is a general expression of interest and much discussion of the condition of women not only in this country but all over the world. Even those who once carried the banners of the anti-suffragists in this country agree that the franchise for women has been a success in this country. They view with concern the ever increasing propaganda throughout countries where women are striving for the franchise, or at least some part in the body politic, that the condition of women as the household goddess and dispenser of the family income is much more secure than if she took her activities outside of the home. There have been many stories written recently about the contentment of the French women as the ruler of the household with her present condition. French women, who seek for the freedom of women and not simply "buying them off" by allowing them to administer funds which they can do better than the men anyway, are very earnest in their insistence that French women do need the vote to reach their highest stage of human freedom.

In the homes they may be queen. But in regard to laws and legislation and matters affecting the home and the family and the moral status of the nation they are, of course, as politically the women of America were before they received the franchise. It is pointed out that the French woman in the professions in almost every case has to be in partnership with some man in order to make any progress or even a living in her profession.

In Italy where women belong to the various guilds and have a say in them the condition is much better. Women have read with deep interest, too, the discussion in some of the countries where women have the vote on their responsibility towards the armed defense of the country.

They point out that in colonial times in our nation women took their part frequently as combatants. Some of the outstanding facts of active warfare heroism revolve around the bravery of the women.

The newest member in the gallery of fame achieving American womanhood, Mrs. Minnie Craig, elected speaker of the North Dakota House of Representatives, bears out the tradition of most of the women who have won their spurs in State and national government. She is an accomplished housewife and has the safety and welfare of the American home as the first essential standards of her political code. Mrs. Craig, who is well known in Washington, as Republican national committeewoman, 1928-1932, does all her own housework.

Washington club women have fallen into line in the nation-wide campaign being carried on by the women of clubs and organizations in the interest of community health on the grounds that good civic housekeeping contributes to the good housekeeping of the Nation. The local clubs have arranged for speakers and discussions of local health conditions on their programs for the winter and spring meetings. The committees are active in carrying out health programs.

Girls Friendly.

The Junior Branch of Trinity G. F. S. Branch attended a dolls' reception on January 4, at the home of Mrs. Marcelyn Nolan, 1346 Perry place northwest, at which they reviewed her collection of more than 100 dolls. This collection will soon be given to the National Museum for a permanent exhibition.

The Girls Friendly of the Chapel of Nativity will have an Admission Service in February, on Quinquagesima Sunday. About 14 girls will be admitted. They have instituted a Corporate Communion for the first Sunday in the month, followed by a breakfast in the parish hall.

February 17 the G. F. S. of St. Paul's, Rock Creek Parish, will give the following plays: "Norah Mixes In" and "The Fortune Teller" with the following cast: Lelia Dixon, Mildred Dixon, Addie Louise Jones, Elizabeth Sommers, Mildred Facer, Virginia Garrott, Marian Fagan, Eosene Moller, Sadie Ruth Berry, Hester Hatcher, Elizabeth Evans. Annie Miller, Esther Summers, Martha Janes Behrend and Margaret Waldecker.

About 69 members of the Epiphany Branch and their friends attended a party given by Mrs. Grace Berry and Mrs. Charles W. Berry on January 7. Mrs. Richardson gave a most interesting talk on her collection of old and rare china, many pieces of which were exhibited on a large table.

French Circle

The Cercle des Precieuses Ridicules was received at East Clifton Terrace on Wednesday evening by Mme. Camille Hindmarsh and Mme. Manuel Cambouri. The meeting was opened by the president, M. William J. Wallis, and after the reading of the minutes of the preceding meeting by the secretary, M. Charles H. Probert, Mme. Pierre de Chauny and Mme. William J. Wallis played as a piano duo "La Marche du Mariage" and "Le Chant de la Mariee," from the "Mariage de Jensen."

Mme. Gaston de Bouy followed with three recitations—"Le rouet de ma grand-mere," by Ernest Chebroux; "La ronde des annees," by Caroline de Bouy, and "L'art d'etre heureux," by Botrel.

Mme. Manuel Cambouri continued with a poem, "Si," by Sully Prudhomme, and anecdotes, and as the final number on the program, Mme. Camille Hindmarsh read selections from a book entitled "L'esprit d'Alexandre Dumas." The evening closed with the annual "tombola," each one present contributing and receiving a small gift.

Rowac Club

A luncheon meeting of the Rowac Club was held last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. William de Kleine, of Tilden Gardens.

After the business session a talk was given on "Wise Spending," by Miss Florence Hall, of the Department of Agriculture. General discussion of the subject followed.

The president, Mrs. Richard Thrush, presided, and Mrs. Maurice Reddy and Mrs. Everett Dix assisted the hostess. The sewing section of the club will meet Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. B. Given, 3806 T street northwest.

U. S. Uses Trader's Method For Navy, Pratt Declares

(Associated Press.)

The American people were accused of indifference to their national defense Friday night by Admiral W. V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, who said "perhaps trader's methods in stock market dealings have crept into the practical matter of building an adequate fleet."

Writing in the current Army and Navy Journal, Admiral Pratt said both Japan and Great Britain are taking better care of their naval "deficiencies" as compared with the United States.

He said this country will find itself 313,000 tons under the naval strength of these other two nations with the expiration of the London naval treaty at the end of 1936.

"We like to buy on margin," the admiral said, "trusting that some day the common stock securities we hold in the shape of a Navy not built up to treaty terms will prove as good an investment for us as though we had paid the price and invested our money in good substantial bonds, viz.: A Navy built to treaty terms. What we hope to get out of the gamble is that in the turn of the market we can make a gain in capital investment through the sale of our common stock. * * *

"Expressed in terms of naval craft, this means we hope that by further limitations of armament we may bring the stocks of ships held by others down to the margin held by us and therefore the relative values of our holdings increase. This is the gambler's way.

"Unfortunately, others will not sell as we have found after repeated efforts, with the result that year after year we find our margined stocks of naval security dropping lower and lower in the world markets.

"The secure method, that of buying outright good substantial bonds, comparable in naval terms to building to treaty strength, is the method of the sound buyer who wishes to get an interest return on the capital invested."

Turkish Airplane Service Is Near

First Steps Taken for Passenger Service to Angora.

Paris (U.P.).—With the recent arrival at Istanbul of two Curtiss-Wright six-passenger monoplanes, the first definite step will be made in one of the most important aviation developments of the last few years.

The two twin-motor planes will start air travel between Istanbul and the capital, Angora.

The line, about 250 miles long, will be the first eastward prolongation of the air route linking the capital of Europe with the Bosphorus. It will cut down a three-day train journey to a few hours but it is the development which it heralds that is drawing the attention of travelers and business men not only in Europe but the world over.

GENERAL STEPHAN RETURNS TO DUTY

29th Division Commander of District Guard Had Been Ill Several Weeks.

After an illness of several weeks' duration, Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division of the District of Columbia National Guard, returned to duty at the Armory Tuesday.

Staff Sergt. Howell K. Stephens, Headquarters Detachment, Twenty-ninth Division, and Privates John J. Devaney and Henry A. Garland, Headquarters Detachment, Special Troops, Twenty-ninth Division, have been transferred to the National Guard Reserve because of business interference with the performance of military duty.

The following named enlisted men are transferred from the National Guard Reserve to the active list, and assigned: Corpl. Frederick J. Roy, to Battery B, 260th Coast Artillery; Privates Delma A. Lipe and James J. Walling, to the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company.

An honorable discharge has been issued to Private Connie V. Southern, Headquarters Detachment and Combat Train, 260th Coast Artillery, because of his removal from the District of Columbia.

Old Hoover Textbook Used at Oregon College

Oregon State College, Corvallis, Oreg. (U.P.).—Fundamental ideas of Herbert Hoover regarding labor and industry are revealed here in a college textbook, "Principles in Mining," used as standard text on the campus.

Pertinent is a paragraph written 24 years ago, giving President Hoover's views on labor.

"In a general way it may be stated with confidence that the white miners can, under the same physical conditions and with five to ten times the wage, produce the same economic result," it reads.

Rail Outlet Adds Two New Buildings

Paris (U.P.).—The Saint Lazare station, principal Paris rail outlet and already a miniature city, has added an art gallery and a lecture hall to its movie theater, barber shop, terraced cafe and department store. Only a church is lacking to make it a village within Paris.

The art gallery is devoted to paintings, photographs and sculpture of subjects in Normandy, Brittany and Vendee, the principal provinces served by the state railways.

World Botanical Center May Be Recognized

Philadelphia (U.P.).—Philadelphia may soon be recognized as the botanical center of the world.

This was the prediction of Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, when he announced the gift of the Morris Arboretum to the university.

According to leaders in the field of botany, the Morris Arboretum is equaled only by the Arnold Arboretum in Boston.

QUALIFICATION CARD REVISION IS PLANNED

Change Being Considered in Reserve Officers Form 0761 A. G. O.

By STAFF SERGT. A. S. DE AGRO.

According to an announcement made by the War Department, consideration is being given to the question of a revision of the qualification card for reserve officers and of the change in its method of preparation. The form is known as 0761 A. G. O.

When that form was originated in 1921, much the larger portion of the appointees in the Officers' Reserve Corps were former officers. The form was devised with that point in mind, and in order that corps area commanders might have record of such prior service for those under their assignment jurisdiction it was necessary that the form be prepared in the War Department where records are available. However, at the present time less than 10 per cent of the appointees have had prior active commissioned service.

It is proposed now that chiefs of arms or services prepare the reserve officers' qualification card only for those to be retained in the arm and service assignment group and that corps area commanders prepare the form for those in the corps area assignment group.

Notice to Commander.

Under this plan the chief of arm or service, in making recommendation for appointment, will, if desired for the arm and service assignment group, make a request to that effect.

If no such request by the chief of arm or service, one copy of the application and statement of preferences for reserve officers will be sent to the corp area commander with the notice of appointment.

Receipt of the copy in this manner will constitute notice to the corps area commander that the appointee has been placed in the corps area assignment group, effective upon acceptance by him of the appointment tendered by the Adjutant General's office. The corps area commander will then prepare the qualification card for his records.

Meetings Planned.

Meetings for four units of the combatant sections of the service have been planned for this week by local Reserve headquarters. Maj. T. M. Chambliss, Infantry instructor, will conduct the conference for both the 428th and 320th Infantry, on the subject of "Organization of the Headquarters and Service Company," including "The Infantry Regiment in Defense." The 428th Infantry will meet tomorrow and the 320th Infantry on Tuesday.

The 313th Field Artillery and the 315th Field Artillery will assemble at Reserve headquarters Wednesday. Field artillery gunnery will be the subject to be taken up by Maj. John M. McDowell.

Maj. H. C. Dagley, Cavalry instructor, will conduct the conference for the Second Squadron of the 306th Cavalry Thursday night. His instruction will cover "Aerial Photograph Reading" and "The Solution of Map Problems." Equitation classes for the Cavalry officers will be held on next Sunday morning at Fort Myer, Va.

Take-Offs and Landings

By HARRIS B. HULL

THE noise of the airplane is probably the most entirely unfavorable feature connected with aviation from both a military and a commercial viewpoint.

Further, it is the only feature that in the past decade has not yielded in some way to the improvements being worked out by the aeronautical engineers.

In the field of military aviation the always important element of surprise is rendered almost out of the question by the roar of an approaching plane.

In commercial aeronautics thousands of potential passengers remain forever only potential passengers because on their visits to the airport they are terrified by the terrific roar emitted by the average trimotored transport as its throttles are opened preparatory to the take-off. This is particularly true of older people but even in the case of the up and coming younger generation there is nothing soothing, encouraging or comforting in the noise made by the planes.

It should be pointed out here that the above refers exclusively to the aviation passenger not trained in the theory of flight.

I have noticed that the more noise that surrounds an airplane when it is being made ready for a flight the better the pilot likes it. And further in the air he is not at all nervous as long as there is noise and plenty of it. It is when things get quiet that he becomes nervous.

During the past year we have heard much of the work being done against this deadly enemy of aviation. And it might be added that noise elimination has become something of a science in fields other than that of aviation. The New York City budget carried an item for the elimination of noise as far as possible in the subway system constructed in that city. Having traveled considerably in that subway I am heartily in favor of eliminating all possible noise there. It is much worse than any airplane factory.

And in a report recently received from the Air Corps it is indicated that the engineers working on noise elimination in the subway may hope for better results than those hoping to take the noise element out of our flying machines.

"It seems that the only completely silent airplanes ever to be achieved will be those on the ground with the engines shut off," reads this report prepared by the Materiel Division of the Army Air Corps.

This, of course, is very frank and somewhat discouraging as the announcement comes from one of aviation's outstanding research departments.

Further it comes on the heels of a much publicized announcement from London that British engineers are of the opinion that by setting up another noise in the airplane working on a different wave length the two would tend to equalize one another and everything would be quiet.

Nevertheless it is apparent that much progress can be made in the direction of improvement, and the Air Corps in its report brings out some interesting points in connection with this.

From a military standpoint the engineers say: "The causes of noise are understood and efforts to subdue them have reached practical limits, with the result that the single-engined airplanes equipped with noise-reducing equipment are not heard on the ground when flying at an altitude of 8,000 feet.

"The principal sources of noise, in order of importance, are: The propeller, the exhausts, engine clatter and whistling wires. The noise energy of any one of these is so great that even large reductions in that energy result in only what appear to be small reductions in the noise heard.

"Regarding the propeller, it has been established that the tip speed is the controlling factor, although the thickness, width and pitch of blades are contributing elements. Therefore it would appear that when a propeller with the widest and thinnest blade, turning at the minimum practicable tip speed, is employed the ultimate has been achieved in propeller noise reduction."

The development of the so-called soundproof cabins has been a forward step in the elimination of noise in the modern airplane. Present day transports, generally speaking, are well insulated. It is only necessary to make a trip in an entirely uninsulated airplane to appreciate what has been done on these ships. But of course this applies to the passenger who has been sold on getting in the plane, and not to the casual observer, who watches from the outside, and is entirely unimpressed by soundproof cabins and keeps both feet firmly planted on the ground.

We find, therefore, that in the opinion of experts we may never hope to completely eliminate the noise element. We can hope for much improvement, based on partial elimination at the source, the engine, and also by the development of soundproof equipment.

This is all based on the power plant of the airplane as we know it at the present time. It does not take into consideration the development of any other engines, especially the steam motor on which much work has been done and on which preliminary results are very satisfactory.

INVENTION of a "robot" which automatically tunes on an airplane radio telephone set to different wave lengths and regulates the volume instantly when the pilot presses a switch has been announced by communications engineers of United Air Lines who have installed the new device on the company's coast-to-coast mail and passenger planes.

When changing wave lengths to conform with regulations of the Federal Radio Commission, it was formerly necessary to land an airplane and make the adjustment by hand. The new development enables a pilot of a plane in flight to shift from one wave length to another by means of the automatic volume control features.

PURCHASE of the world's first commercial autogiro of the transport cabin type by Henry L. Doherty, financier, and president of the Florida Year-Round Clubs, has been announced by the Pitcairn Co.

The new windmill craft, the first of the transport type ever turned out either here or abroad, will be used as an air ferry between the Miami Biltmore, at Coral Gables, and the Roney Plaza Club, at Miami Beach, and among other Florida Year-Round Club units.

The rotor of the new giro is 50 feet in diameter. The over-all length of the craft is 34 feet 11 inches. It is powered with a 420-horsepower Wright "Whirlwind" engine and has seats for the pilot and four passengers. It is equipped with an adjustable-pitch propeller.

44 WILL BE NAMED IN NAVY PROMOTION

Vacancies Are Open in Rank of Commander Adams; Appoints Board.

Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams announced last week that a selection board, of which Rear Admiral Harris Laning, U. S. N., is president, will convene at the Navy Department February 1 to recommend officers of the line of the Navy in the rank of lieutenant commander for promotion to commander.

The board will name 44 lieutenant commanders for promotion. Members of the board are as follows:

Rear Admiral James J. Raby, U. S. N., commandant, Sixth Naval District, also commandant Seventh Naval District, Charleston, S. C.; Rear Admiral Arthur St. C. Smith, U. S. N., commander Special Service Squadron (U. S. S. Memphis); Rear Admiral Clarence S. Kempff, U. S. N., commandant navy yard, Portsmouth, N. H.; Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, U. S. N., commanding Submarine Base, New London, Conn.; additional duty command of submarines and attending craft based thereon and inspector or ordnance in charge Naval Mine Depot, New London, Conn.; Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, U. S. N., Division Fleet Train, Naval Operations, Navy Department; Rear Admiral Adolphus E. Watson, U. S. N., General Board, Navy Department, Washington; Rear Admiral Harry L. Brinser, U. S. N., in charge Navy Yard Division, Navy Department, Washington; Rear Admiral Edgar B. Larimer, U. S. N., chief Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, Washington.

Spanish War Veterans Oppose Pension Slashes

(Associated Press.)

Spanish-American War veterans appealed to Congress against proposed reductions in their Federal pensions. Rice W. Means, chairman of the national legislative committee of the United States Spanish War Veterans, appeared before the joint congressional committee on veterans' legislation in answer to advocates of a $100,000,000 decrease in amounts paid the soldiers who went to war with Spain.

He told the committee that that war was "the only campaign in which there was never an act passed as an inducement to enlistment."

Veterans of Foreign Wars Add New Posts

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—Within the first three months of the 1932-33 fiscal year, more than 100 new posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars have been organized in the campaign to establish 750 new units before the 1933 encampment in Milwaukee, national headquarters here announced.

The campaign will take on new life for full speed ahead after the first of the year, headquarters reported. The program is under the direction of Joseph H. Hanken, Revere, Mass., national chief of staff.

EVENTS OF WEEK IN WASHINGTON WAR VETERANS' CHAPTERS AND AUXILIARIES

AMERICAN LEGION.

Lincoln Post.

Post Commander Porter L. Bush, of Lincoln Post, has appointed Comrade David Gates as employment officer and Comrade Elery Flester as athletic officer for the ensuing year. Senior Vice Commander C. T. Milne, chairman of the membership committee, reports a paid-up membership in excess of 50 per cent.

The first monthly meeting of the year will be held tomorrow night in the new post home, in the Riggs Bank Building, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, formerly occupied by the studio of Radio Station WRC.

Fort Stevens Post.

At a special meeting Tuesday night the Fort Stevens Post voted rejection of the offer of consolidation with another Legion post of the District. Although the charter, colors, trophies and other equipment of the old post were among the inducements, the Fort Stevens organization unanimously decided that, since it appealed to the veterans of North Washington to become charter members of an entirely new chapter with the novel community ideal, it should pursue the accomplishment of the idea.

While the post will have an initial membership of not less than 200, it is one of the by-laws of the Legion that to grant a charter to a post 100 of the veterans applying for the charter must not have been members of any post of the Legion during the year prior to application. The charter is being held open, despite the fact that sufficient signers have been obtained, in order that no veteran in the North Washington area will be deprived of the privilege of signing the charter of what will probably be the only Legion post serving that community.

An offer of an estate with a twelve-room house, located on Georgia avenue, at an attractive price, was referred to a committee for a detailed report at the next meeting, the date of which will be announced.

Jacob Jones Post.

The monthly meeting of the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post No. 2 was held Monday at the Thomas Circle Club. The Americanism officer, Comrade Alberta Lacy submitted her program for the year. An appropriation of $100 was granted by the post for carrying out the program. The purchase of an electric lathe to be installed in the work shop of the Northeast Boys Club house was included in the program.

The next Braille class will be held on Tuesday at the Red Cross Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest. Initiation of the following new members took place at this meeting: Minerva Cramer, Josephine Davis, Margaret Gorman, Janet E. Litchfield, Rae Ludwig, Mary N. Pickles, Helen S. Riley, Alma O. Sarton, Florence M. Scheel, Josephine Broderick, Olga McCambridge, Bertha F. Carwithen and Winnie P. Brannon.

Costello Post.

Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, a member of Portland Post, No. 1, Portland, who served in the Sixty-fifth Artillery during the World War, will be the guest speaker at the next meeting of the post, to be held in the boardroom of the District Building Tuesday. National Commander Louis Johnson, in a letter to Post Commander Norman Grant, stresses the fact that the American Legion's fight is the fight of every service man and it is our duty to carry the word to every eligible member, telling him in no uncertain terms that the call in this fighting Legion year is for full ranks. In response to this appeal Costello Post has outlined an intensive membership drive under the direction of Comrade Charles R. Boone, the membership chairman.

William N. Richards has been named as post employment officer for the present administrative year, and Taylor R. Van Horn has been appointed to the membership committee.

Thomas S. Gulick, Millard J Holmes, Anthony Gerard Walsh and Steve Uhlarik have been elected to membership in the post.

National Commander Louis Johnson, addressing the members of Costello Drum Corps in the presidential room of the Mayflower Hotel, complimented them on their organization and referred to Costello Post as one of the outstanding Legion organizations in the entire country.

LEGION AUXILIARY.

Victory Unit.

The executive committee, Department of the District of Columbia, will meet on Thursday at Sears, Roebuck. & Co. Galleries.

Victory Unit, No. 4, will be represented at the National Defense Conference by its president, Mrs. P. E. Doleman, and its chairman of national defense, Mrs. Sarah Hines.

Mrs. Lillian K. Urban, president of Kenneth H. Nash Unit No 8 will be hostess at a silver tea for the benefit of the unit today, from 4 to 6 p. m., at her home, 1731 R street northwest.

Mrs. Margaret Hosselbarth, ways and means chairman, reported a successful card party in December and announced another to be held at Southern Dairies January 31. Mrs. Maud Miller, membership chairman, has given five members' names to each member of the executive committee, same to be called on personally within the next month, feeling it will stimulate the unit financially and socially. Mrs. Marie Hargy, department of Panama, presented the unit with a pillow to be used for raising funds.

Vincent Costello Unit.

The monthly meeting of the Vincent B. Costello Unit, No. 15, was held January 3 at Sears & Roebuck Art Galleries. Twenty-five members were present. The membership chairman reported 45 paid-up members.

The welfare chairman reported that a destitute veteran's family had been cared for during Christmas week, having been supplied with food and toys. The family consisted of father and mother and nine children. Mrs. Ada Wimbush donated a quart of milk a day for the month of January for a needy family.

A benefit bingo party is to be held at the home of Miss Alice Costello, 216 S street northeast, on Tuesday evening.

Sergt. Jasper Unit.

The Sergt. Jasper Unit, No. 13, met at the Willard Hotel Tuesday evening. The president, Miss Ethel Hodges, presided. Committee reports were read, among them being the report from Miss Gilbert Cone on the Christmas party.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

The department council of administration met on January 6, Department Commander O W. Hollingsworth presiding.

The council went on record as indorsing a resolution adopted by the Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards Post, No. 2135, protesting against any curtailment of the strength of the Marine Corps.

Commander Herbert Borchardt was elected department judge advocate to fill the unexpired term of Joseph McCloskey.

Department Trustee J. E. Fondahl read a resolution to the council, which was adopted by the Police and Fire Post, relative to the protesting against a reduction in the police and firemen of the District. The department council concurred in the resolution as sent from Police and Fire Post.

The department recruiting committee, headed by Col. C. A. Brode, met in department headquarters on Friday evening and made plans for a vigorous drive to increase the membership of the department.

Front Line Post.

At the regular semimonthly meeting of Front Line Post No. 1401 on Monday, January 9, at 808 I street northwest, Commander Biggins presided. The post went on record as condemning the action of the board of education in refusing the use of the gymnasium of McKinley High School to the Columbia University for the purpose of holding intercollegiate boxing matches therein. At this meeting it was decided that efforts should be made to have Comrade Walter Johnson, who has been elected an honorary member of this post, obligated at the banquet to be given to the national commander-in-chief on February 11 at Wardman Park Hotel. Comrade Eli Busada was received in Front Line Post on presentation of an honorable discharge from Follow-Me Post.

The post was addressed by Past Department Commander Dr. Joseph F. Beattie and Past Department Commander Capt. Charles B. Jennings.

Federal Post.

On January 5 Federal Post, No. 824, held its semimonthly dance at the Arlington Hotel. The dance was a big success. There was a nice crowd and a good time was had by all. On Thursday Federal Post will hold another dance at the Arlington Hotel from 9 to 1.

Robert E. Peary Ship.

Peary Ship met at Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club on Tuesday evening, Ship Captain Bright presiding. Admiral Robert E. Coontz, retired, U S. Navy, commander in chief, and Department Commander O. W. Hollingsworth, District of Columbia, addressed the ship.

Commander Jack Mooney, of Washington Police and Firemen Post, No. 2249; Past Post Commander Daniel E. Campbell, of Equality-Walter Reed Post, No. 284; Quartermaster Frank Heise, of Defense Post, No. 2357, and Past Department Inspector James F. Bird were guests.

Follow-Me Post.

Follow-Me Post met in the Continental Hotel Tuesday evening. Senior Vice Commander Boteler presided. Plans are rapidly being completed for the card party to be held in the Continental Hotel on Friday.

Leon Brusiloff, one of the outstanding orchestra leaders of Washington, was elected to honorary membership and will be obligated at the next regular meeting.

Follow-Me Auxiliary has invited the post membership to attend its social evening in the Sears-Roebuck Galleries on Thursday, January 26.

Comrade Belt has resigned as post adjutant and will be succeeded by Comrade Alfred E. Ruth, who was recently appointed by the commander.

Comrade Sheffer has been appointed to serve on the department relief committee and Comrade Dube on the department recruiting committee.

Among those present were: Chief of staff, Mrs. Lawson; past chief of staff, Mrs. Edith DemBroder; Mrs. Lola Heise, District hospital chairman, Mrs. Dorothy Lohman, and past District hospital chairman, Mrs. Roberta Fawcett. Commander Jack Mooney presented greetings from the Police and Fire Post. Comrade Burton made an address about the auxiliary and its work.

Sergt. Jasper Post.

Appointments were made by Commander Paul H. McMurray at the meeting of the Sergt. Jasper Post No. 13, held at the Thomas Circle Club on Thursday evening, of the various committees to arrange for the testimonial dinner to be given in honor of retiring Commander Edward L. Marthill in February. Maj. Thomas J. Frailey was appointed welfare officer to succeed B. W. Douglas.

Included among new members admitted were Sam Davids, Charles R. Botsford, Frank C. Alloway, Joseph G. McAlwee, Daniel H. Tucker and John W. Peake. Daniel A. Goodacre, finance officer, reported 150 members in good standing for 1933.

Potomac Post Auxiliary.

Potomac Post Auxiliary, No. 1085, held a bingo party at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club last night. Mrs. Marion Stone was chairman of the committee.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Department.

Department Commander Patrick J. Callan called together the department council of administration on January 6, at which meeting it was decided to hold the annual banquet to the commander-in-chief in the Mayflower Hotel at 7:30 o'clock, the ladies being included. A committee visited the department council of the auxiliary, then in session, and extended to them an invitation to participate in the banquet. Department Commander Callan reported arrangements about completed for the national observation of Maine Memorial Day to be held on February 15 in the Riding Hall at Fort Myer at 1:30 p. m.

The department good and welfare committee met at the call of its chairman, Jere A. Costello, and outlined the arrangements and distributed the tickets for the annual banquet to the commander-in-chief.

Harden Camp.

Richard J. Harden Camp No 2 convened in regular session on January 5. Commander Thomas D. Binckley presiding. Recruits Thomas S. Sweet, First Regiment Mississippi Volunteer Infantry, and Charles L. Benjamin, New York Volunteer Cavalry, were mustered in. A letter of condolence was ordered sent to Mrs. Grace Coolidge, wife of the late President Calvin Coolidge.

All officers' reports for year of 1932 were read and filed. Installing officer, Commander William I. Jenkins, was welcomed and the gavel was turned over to him by the commander.

Comrade John Hamburg was appointed master of ceremonies and the officers were installed. The gavel was turned over to the new commander, William O. Ohm, who thanked the installing officer for his services. Visitors were Department Commander Patrick J. Callan, Past Department Commander Samuel J. McWilliams, Past Commander Oscar Feldser, all of whom addressed the camp. The following members spoke: Quartermaster Gen. James J. Murphy, Terrance N. Fielder, Clarence L. Benjamin, Thomas S. Sweet, Jacob Orken, Thomas A. Hudlow and Daniel Foley.

Lawton Camp.

Henry W. Lawton Camp No. 4 convened January 4, Commander Richard L. Lamb presiding. Daniel L. Morgan, an old member of the camp, was reinstated.

The camp officers were installed by Installing Officer William I. Jenkins as follows: Commander, Chauncey L. Davis; senior vice commander, James R. Henkel; junior vice commander, Charles E. Hawkins; trustee, Richard L. Lamb; patriotic instructor, John M. Farner; historian, William S. Hodges; surgeon, Clarence A. Weaver, M. D.; chaplain, George J. McDermott; officer of the day, Joseph F. Brewster; officer of the guard, Joseph Lane Smith; senior color sergeant, Albert A. Glaze; junior color sergeant, John W. Lynch, and chief musician, Capt. Taylor Branson.

Astor Camp.

Col. John Jacob Astor Camp, No. 6, convened January 4 and was presided over by Commander Lewis H. Forsyth. Charles Schallaburg, recent private 114th Company Coast Artillery Corps, was admitted into the camp by transfer from Hamilton S. Hawkins Camp, No. 43, National Military Home, California. Installing officer, Commander William I. Jenkins was received, and he appointed Chief of Staff John A. Gallagher as master of ceremonies and installed the officers for 1933.

Department of Auxiliaries.

The Auxiliary Department Council of Administration convened on January 6, President Catherine Huhn presiding. Chief of Staff Margaret Burns announced that arrangements had been completed for the annual dance to be held on March 17 at the Washington Hotel. A committee from the department of the District of Columbia, United Spanish War Veterans extended an invitation to the ladies to participate in the banquet to the commander in chief on February 16 at the Mayflower Hotel. The invitation was accepted.

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS.

Representatives of the majority of the State departments of the Disabled American Veterans on the Eastern seaboard are now in Washington in a series of conferences with National Commander William Conley, of Los Angeles and members of the staff of the Washington office of the organization. These men came here as guests of the District of Columbia department at its annual dinner at the Raleigh, and in addition to a general conference of all out-of-town members, which was addressed by Commander Conley and others, Les T. Turner, of this city, national executive committeeman for the fourth district, had a special conference with the delegates from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, which constitutes the fourth district of the national organization.

Rea Chapter at its regular meeting last Friday evening installed the following officers for the ensuing year: Commander, Walter H. Colston; senior vice commander, Robert Jones; junior vice commander, Comrade Griggs; treasurer, Comrade Beuchert.

Commander Helen E. O'Neill, of Gen. W. W. Atterbury Chapter, will soon resume her radio broadcasts of dramatic readings which were necessarily interrupted by a recent severe illness, which confined her to Mount Alto Hospital for several months. Commander O'Neill's readings were popular, and her many listeners welcome her return to the air. Miss O'Neill will also do several television programs.

At the regular meeting of Federal Chapter last Tuesday evening, 21 new members were initiated and given the obligations by Department Senior Vice Commander Ralph N. Werner. Commander Melton was present at the meeting and commended the chapter highly on the consistently fine attendance at its regular meetings and on the splendid results obtained by the membership committee. Past National Commander E. Claude Babcock and Junior Vice Commander John Arthur Shaw addressed the members. Comrade Doyle, chairman of the employment committee, read a letter received from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, relative to the prevailing wage rate in the District, over the strict observance of which there has been much dispute. Comrade Lawton, chairman of the Disabled Veterans' preference committee, expressed his willingness to assist the members in every way possible.

The next meeting of Federal Chapter will be held Monday evening, January 23.

Col. Charles Young Chapter will hold its next regular meeting Thursday evening in the Twelfth Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A.

AMERICAN WAR MOTHERS.

The Admiral Robert E. Coontz Chapter, American War Mothers, met in the new national headquarters of the organization, at 1527 New Hampshire avenue northwest, January 3.

Committee chairmen for 1933 were announced as follows: Mrs. Sarah L. Loveless, magazine; Mrs. Mae H. Alexander, memory tree and markers; Mrs. Henrietta Smith, welfare and child welfare; Mrs. Eleanor C. Wagner, Americanism and legislation; Mrs. Estelle Richardson, hospitalization; Mrs. Hannah L. McCarty, memorial home; Mrs. Joanna G. Hynson, gold star; Mrs. Nora Wainwright, constitution and by-laws; Mrs. May Settle, resolutions; Mrs. Sophia Pierce, membership; Mrs. Mary Glascock, chairman of finance committee with Mrs. Florence Kilgour and Mrs. Myra Martzs members.

THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, one of England's most celebrated advocates, has been briefed by Sir Simon Flaquer, solicitor, to defend his client, Mrs. Paradine, against a charge of murdering her husband, Col. Paradine.

While Mrs. Paradine is in Halloway jail awaiting trial, Lord Horfield is appointed judge of the case.

Sir Malcolm and his pretty wife, Gay, who bears a subtle resemblance to Mrs. Paradine, have been happily married for ten years, but the husband's obsession with the Paradine case is beginning to cast a dark shadow over their happiness. Sir Malcolm finds himself fascinated by the mysterious blonde, whom he passionately desires to save. Subconsciously he is not wholly convinced of her innocence, but he declares emphatically to Sir Simon that he believes her innocent. Sir Simon is skeptical about the defense Sir Malcolm has prepared, which is to suggest that the colonel's servant, William Marsh, who had been Paradine's batman in the war, might have had a hand in the murder. Sir Malcolm is afraid of Lord Horfield, who seems to have a streak of cruelty that manifests itself toward women who come up for trial before him.

Col. Paradine had been blinded in the war and had never seen his beautiful wife, who had been a servant before her marriage. She is a Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degradation by a philanthropic American. After a short period in the United States, she had settled in London to earn her living, and had married the rich Col. Paradine after the war.

Sir Malcolm goes alone to the north of England to look over the Paradine home at Hindley. On his return he invites the Horfields to dinner and the theater, against Gay's wishes. The dinner passes off in a friendly enough spirit. Leaving for the theater Keane takes Lady Horfield in his car and Gay accompanies Lord Horfield, who makes love to her, much to her disgust.

When the Paradine trial opens, Gay goes to it with Judith Flaquer, unknown to Malcolm. Mrs. Paradine is put on the stand and testifies that William Marsh had pursued her with unwelcome attentions and that she had as a last resort complained to the colonel the afternoon before he died. Marsh is called to the stand and gives the lie to Mrs. Paradine, testifying that it was she who pursued him.

There were many in that court who never lost the memory of Marsh's voice as he again took the oath. He spoke loudly in his deep voice, like a man uttering an invocation. His resolution to cling to the truth rang through the court.

"You asked to be reheard," said Lord Horfield to the witness. "Do you wish to correct any of the evidence you have given in this court?"

"Yes, my lord," said Marsh resolutely, "I do."

"You know of the penalties for perjury, confessed or unconfessed?"

"Yes, my lord."

"Very well. What part of your evidence do you wish to correct?"

"About what happened in the library on the day before my master died, sir—my lord, I mean," said Marsh.

"Was what you testified to about that untrue then?"

"It wasn't true, my lord."

Without making any comment upon this the judge continued:

"When Col. Paradine summoned you to his library on the afternoon before his death what did he give you as his reason for doing so?"

"He said that my—that Mrs. Paradine had been saying something to him about me, my lord—about me and her," said Marsh gripping one big hand with the other, looking straight before him, and speaking in a voice that sounded unnaturaaly loud.

"You told the jury in your former evidence that what she told her husband was that you meant to leave his service. Was that true or untrue?"

"Untrue, my lord."

"You told the court a lie?"

"I did, my lord."

"Why did you do that?"

"Because I was ashamed of the truth, my lord, and——" Marsh broke off.

"Yes? And what other reason had you?"

"I didn't care to tell against a woman," said Marsh in a lower voice and with less resolution.

"What is the truth? Tell it to the jury in your own words."

Keane shut his eyes and folded his arms. At that moment he heard again the sound of the wind and the roar of the sea outside the rattling windows of the hotel at Sedale; he saw Marsh sitting opposite to him in the night. A voice in his ears said, "She's a woman of Babylon—some day you'll know it." That same voice was speaking now. He heard it say:

"When I came into the library my colonel was in a terrible state. As soon as he knew I was there he turned on me and told me that his wife—Mrs. Paradine there—had made what he called a confession to him."

"What was this confession? Tell the jury," said the judge.

"The colonel said she'd told him that—that I'd been with her up at Hindley."

"You mean that you had had guilty intercourse with his wife?"

"Yes, my lord."

"He told you that?"

"Yes, my lord."

"And what did you do?"

"At first I swore it wasn't true."

"And then——?"

"In the end I couldn't keep to it, my lord. I—I—I'd never been given to tell lies to my colonel, and I couldn't keep it up. He wore me down and at last I told him."

"What did you tell him?"

"Told him it was true, my lord, and that I'd been with her—once."

"Where was that?"

"Up at Hindley."

"Was it before, or after, the two attacks of illness your master had?"

"After them, my lord, not long before we came to London."

"The prisoner had said that while in service with Col. Paradine you pestered her with your attentions. Is that true?"

"No, my lord," said Marsh.

His voice sank to a deep murmur as he added:

"It was the other way about."

"Explain yourself."

"That's clear enough, my lord, ain't it?"

"No. You must tell the jury exactly what you mean."

Marsh looked down.

"She came after me and gave me no peace till I—I didn't want to do the dirty on my colonel. I would have gone through fire for him—and had. But she couldn't see it that way. She said he was blind and would never know. I was all against women. That's quite true, my lord. But a man's only a man after all and she knew how to get over me. It was only once but that was enough. He went to his death and I was never able to put it right. I don't say I wasn't in the wrong of it. I was, God knows. But I wasn't as bad as my master thought. Dead that very night! And the last words I heard him say to me was 'Get out of my sight!' And he blind as he was!"

During this speech Marsh's voice sank lower and lower. The last words came from him in a sort of pitiful groan.

"I have only one more question to ask you," said the judge after a pause.

"My lord!" cried Marsh. "I lift my hand against my colonel!"

The exclamation, following immediately on the dolorous murmur, startled the court by the nakedness of its sincerity.

"That is all I have to ask you," said the judge.

But Marsh remained standing in the box till his arm was touched by an attendant of the court. Then he staggered heavily from the box. He stood for a moment looking dazed. Finally he lifted his eyes to the judge.

"Am I—am I at liberty to go, my lord?" he asked.

"Yes," said Lord Horfield. "You have purged your contempt."

Marsh turned and made his way out of court, looking neither to right nor left. As he went by some stared at him, but many lowered their eyes. There was that in his face which forbade them to look at him.

That strange and, as it seemed, ill-assorted couple, Lord and Lady Horfield, dined alone together that night in their big house in Sussex square. Lady Horfield had again been in court and had returned home with her mind in a condition of violent excitement and upheaval after the sensational events of the day. Lord Horfield had been to the club for a while, as his custom was, and had arrived in Sussex square about an hour before dinner. They dined when at home always at half-past 8.

There was not much conversation, but evidently the judge was not troubled by the occasional, rather prolonged silences. He was enjoying his food, his wine and the warm, cozy atmosphere of the spacious, well-furnished room. Apparently his mind was a pleasant companion, for as he ate and drank there was a serene look on his long, narrow face, and now and then he showed his long, yellow teeth in a smile that seemed caused by some agreeable procession of thoughts taking place unseen, unheard, in the mystery of the inner man.

At length dessert was put on the table and the men servants went out of the room.

"Shall I stay with you, Horfield?" asked Lady Horfield in an uncertain voice, glancing at her husband and looking away, "or would you rather drink your wine alone?"

"You can stay, my dear; you can stay."

Lady Horfield, who had made an awkward movement as if to get up, checked it and flumped on her chair.

"Did you enjoy yourself today?" continued her husband, in his agreeable voice. "It was quite entertaining, wasn't it? A good deal of drama, too."

"I thought—it seems to me—but, of course, it isn't often that I have anything to do with—oh, Horfield, it was terrible!"

"Did you notice something today in court?"

"Yes. No—I'm not sure! What?"

"That at times there's an odd flash of likeness to Lady Keane in Mrs. Paradine?"

"O—surely——"

"Yes. It's something about the mouth and at the corners of the eyes. The shape of the head, too. There's a likeness."

His voice for a moment held a sound of warm satisfaction.

"But Lady Keane is so different—such a—there's something in her character——"

"I'm talking not of character, but of physique!" said Lord Horfield, with a sudden tone of asperity.

"O—well—if you mean—but I didn't see it."

"But what do you see, my dear? Now, take William Marsh! How did the last evidence which he gave, when I had him back, strike you?"

He half closed his eyes, lay back in his chair, one hand on the stem of his glass, and let his close observation play over her congested features.

"It was awful. It seemed impossible that—and yet there was something——"

"Give me your impression, your exact impression!" he said, in a thin, sharp voice.

"O, Horfield, I felt then that he had to speak the truth; that it was forced out of him in spite of himself. Could a man say such a thing of himself if it wasn't true?"

"That man couldn't—and didn't. We shan't see him in court again. He's gone, like the scapegoat, into the wilderness. Those last words of his colonel will ring in his ears till the end of his time on earth, if I know anything of human character."

His face hardened into grimness and he looked suddenly very old.

"She knew today that she had lost him forever, whatever the result—tomorrow," he muttered.

"What—I didn't hear! What did you say? Something about tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow I sit till I get a verdict, however late that may be."

"How I shall pray tonight that it may be not guilty!" Lady Horfield exclaimed, distractedly.

Her face was working now and her little hands moved incessantly.

"Pray—pray as much as you like!" said her husband. "You prayers won't turn justice aside from her course. Farrell's closing speech for the crown was a masterly effort."

"I thought it abominably cruel" exclaimed Lady Horfield. "He asked that the poor wretched woman should be hanged. He wanted her to be hanged. Don't ask me ever to have Sir Joseph here again, for I really——"

"What folly's this?" said the judge, showing sudden irritation, "Farrell was for the crown. Didn't you realize that?"

"I don't care what he was for. His speech was the most terrible thing I ever heard. I don't defend treachery—if she was! But when a woman's the prey of love for a man—but no man, I'm sure, knows, or even can know, what that is, for no man can ever—and she had been a servant and had been taken out of her sphere and then, perhaps, went back to it in her heart. And there is something in that poor wretched man, Marsh, which might——"

"Are you defending adultery?" the judge asked in his purring voice. "And treachery to a blind man, whom he pretended to care for?"

"Not pretending! Horfield, that poor fellow loved his master. He was broken to pieces by that, when he said those last words, and went out. It made me——" her voice broke; she stopped, recovered herself and said, with awe, "it made me think of Judas. He went away—and hanged himself."

"And that fellow probably went to the nearest public house and drank himself silly," said the judge.

But, as he said it, he looked at his wife with a sort of musing wonder, that was not wholly divorced from admiration.

"It seems to me that you pity every scoundrel who cumbers the earth," he added.

"I do! I do pity them!" she said with the strange sudden fierceness that revealed now and then the fire burning somewhere far away in the grotesque bulk that misrepresented her to the sons and daughters of men. "Does any one need pity more than the man—or woman, too, of course—who has sinned?"

Suddenly, with an awkward, even startling movement, she stretched forward over the dining table, knocking over a glass as she did so.

"Horfield, my dear—don't be cruel any more!" she said, in a trembling voice. "Give it up! You may think it makes you happy, but you're wrong. It doesn't! It can't! It's—it's an illusion."

He got up, staring at his wife.

She had dared—after all these years! He stared like one examining a stranger.

Lady Horfield began to get up.

"Horfield, forgive me! I am obliged—I feel I must——"

Sit down, Sophy!" he said, turning sharply round.

She sank down upon her seat, looking desperately up at him.

The judge came back to the dinner table and pressed a foot on a place close to his chair. Then he sat down and waited. The door was opened almost directly and the butler appeared followed by a footman carrying coffee on a silver tray. The butler held a smaller tray on which was a box of cigars, a cutter and lighter.

In silence the coffee was served. Lady Horfield's cup and saucer rattled as she took them with both her little hands.

"Brandy, my lord?" asked the butler.

"Yes," said the judge.

Brandy was brought to him.

The butler was about to put the decanter back on the sideboard when Lady Horfield exclaimed:

"I'll take some, too."

"O, I beg your ladyship's pardon!"

"Of course I never—but I will tonight."

"Yes, my lady."

"That's enough—please."

The butler and footman went out. Then the judge said, with his usual slightly sub-acid graciousness:

"You have been talking even greater nonsense than usual tonight, Sophy. I told you not to come to this trial. You are much too excitable, and devoid of reasoning power to be able to comprehend the processes of justice. Tomorrow you had better stay at home."

"I will—I will if only you'll promise me not to give way to——"

"Be quiet, Sophy! How dare you speak like that to one of his majesty's judges?"

"Don't sum up against that poor woman. I don't know what she's done—how can we be certain? No one saw her put—there's no absolute proof. Perhaps she did, but—— O, Horfield, don't have another poor woman's death on your conscience! You think I don't see. You think me a fool. I know that. But for a long time I have seen it growing in you, always growing—the need to—how can you wish to give a woman to the hangman? No man has the right—you know what I feel for you, Horfield. Don't think I am criticizing you. You are so much more than I am. I could never dare. But for once listen to me and resist that awful——"

"Drink your brandy, if you're going to, and then you can leave me alone. You're the victim of a crazy imagination. Because, on account of my profession, I am at times forced to pronounce sentences upon evildoers you imagine that I like doing it."

"You do! you do! O, Horfield, it's your pleasure. It's becoming your chief pleasure in life to——"

The judge suddenly leaned forward over the table, stretched out his right hand and seized one of his wife's wrists with his long, bony fingers.

"Have you ever said anything of this to Malcolm Keane?" he said, sternly.

Lady Horfield's congested face lost some of its extravagant color. It did not become pale, but it seemed suddenly to fade. Her cheeks looked flatter. Her little mouth opened, but no words came from it. One of her finlike hands beat on the table cloth. The other trembled in the grasp of her husband.

"Do you hear me?" he asked.

"Yes."

"You mad woman!" he said. "You old mad woman!"

He let go of her wrist and violently thrust her hand away from him.

"That's the way a woman loves!" he exclaimed, with sneering bitterness. "I suspected this, of course. Your manner with Keane! And his blundering attempts to get round me! Stroking the dome of St. Paul's to propitiate the dean! So you two actually supposed you could play about with me? What exquisite absurdity? I'm glad really I've lived to enjoy it. Well, my dear, by tomorrow evening you, and he, too, will know the inner meaning of the title of one of Balzac's best books. Ever heard of it? 'Les Illusions Perdues?' Let him try to spellbind the jury! Let him do his damned best!"

He got up and went slowly over to the wood fire, cigar in hand, his head a little bent. When he got there he turned round, stood with his back to it and straightened himself.

"Tomorrow no doubt when the court reassembles we shall have one of the most florid specimens of burning rhetoric, and what the Americans picturesquely call "sob stuff," that has ever been heard at the Old Bailey. The great actor at the top of his form. And yet I don't know. He's not far from the end of his tether. He's on the verge of a breakdown."

Feidt Elected President Of Worshipful Masters

George W. Feidt has been elected president of the Association of Worshipful Masters for 1933 at a recent meeting of the organization. He is a member of Harding Lodge. Gilbert C. Clark, National Lodge, was chosen vice president.

Paul J. Bergh, St. John's Lodge, was named secretary-treasurer, and the executive committee was designated to include the officers and Joseph C. Bruce, Columbia Lodge, and Harold Martin, Mount Pleasant Lodge.

Women Repealists to Meet.

A meeting of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4 oclock, at the home of the president, Mrs. Ben B. Cain, 619 South Lee street, Alexandria. Plans are to be formulated for a membership drive on February 15, in accordance with instructions from national headquarters.

Playground Activities

Since the Plaza Playground was abandoned two years ago to make way for the Capitol Plaza beautification the Northeast citizens have been clamoring for a new play space for the hundreds of children in that section. Recently it was announced by Lieut Col Grant, executive officer of the Park and Planning Commission, that land has been purchased in the block between Ninth and Tenth, F and G streets northeast for a recreation area.

Already Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor of playgrounds, has been in conference with the Northeast playgrounds committee to discuss plans for conditioning the ground at an early date. Mr. H. F. Winn, chairman of the Northeast playground committee; Mrs. Frank T. Parsons, president of the Peabody-Hilton Parent-Teacher Association, and Miss Helen Story, of the Associated Charities, conferred with Miss Baker.

The Takoma Park Playground Stamp Club will meet every Friday at 3:45 o'clock, according to an announcement by Mrs. Olive Hancock, director. Mrs. Hancock also announces that the Dramatic Club will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Last week Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, director of Garfield Playground, and her assistant, Miss Elizabeth Bowie, gave a dinner to the members of the basket ball squad. Among those present were Rosemary Payne, Francis Pope, Eunice Klotz, Margaret McAdams, Margaret Alley, Ida Madeoy, Anita Grist, Loraine Coll and Judy Cannon.

Have you made a "depression" plant? They are being made and watched with interest on all the playgrounds. The formula is as follows: Take one-half cup of iodized salt, one half cup of liquid blueing, and one-half cup of water. Mix and pour over a lump of soft coal in wide bowl. The effect will be a beautiful crystal growth in a few days.

The nursery play centers which were conducted during the fall months in Franklin Park and Chevy Chase Playground will be closed during January and February but will resume early in the spring. The nursery play stations were open from 10 to 12 daily. The preschool age kindergarten is still being held daily on all municipal playgrounds at 2 o'clock.

With the aid of unemployed labor several playgrounds have been enlarged and facilities increased by rearrangement of equipment and grading. Park View, Georgetown and Mitchell Park playgrounds are notable instances of this.

With the aid of the unemployment commission the Banneker Recreation Center is expected to be completed in the near future. It is hoped that the lower rooms of the hall will soon be electrified so that the activities of the Banneker Boys Club can be increased.

In cramped quarters the following program is already under way:

Technical Activities.

Monday—6:30 to 7:30, chair caning; 7:30 to 8:30, radio.

Tuesday—6:30 to 8:30, handcraft.

Wednesday—6:30 to 7:30, shoe repairing; 7:30 to 8:30, radio.

Thursday—6:30 to 7:30, chair repairing; 7:30 to 8:30, handcraft.

Friday—6:30 to 7:30, shoe repairing; 7:30 to 8:30, electrical instruction.

Athletics.

Monday through Friday—2 to 5:30, basket ball, volley ball, soccer, on playground; 6:30 to 7:30, handball and volley ball, juniors and intermediates; 6:30 to 7:30, quiet games, seniors; 7:30 to 8:30, quiet games, juniors and intermediates; 7:30 to 9:30, gym work, including basket ball, handball, volley ball and boxing for seniors.

Saturday—9 to 4:30, regular playground schedule.

Companionship

Taken from the Christian Science Monitor.

THE true nature of companionship is not fully understood, and the universal desire for it is therefore seldom entirely satisfied; or if for a time this relationship apparently is permanently established, it often is reversed by a sense of loss and separation. Human companionship can be based only upon harmony of the interests and pursuits of those concerned. Recognizing this fact, Mary Baker Eddy says in the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 60), "Kindred tastes, motives, and aspirations are necessary to the formation of a happy and permanent companionship." And she goes on to say that "the beautiful in character is also the good, welding indissolubly the links of affection."

These words point to a spiritual fact which, when understood, has brought healing comfort to thousands of hearts weighed down with grief; for as seen in Christian Science "the links of affection" can not be severed by any circumstance, since the eternal qualities of God, divine Mind, reflected in man as His likeness, live on despite any contrary material appearance.

This view of inseparable companionship, admitted to be beautiful even by the sorrowing, requires pure, scientific thinking to be proved practicable in actual experience. First of all, one must clearly understand that the beautiful and the good, which alone can form a basis for the true sense of companionship, are not personal possessions, but are the eternal reflections of God, the one infinite Mind.

This being so, these satisfying qualities are forever being expressed in fresh and happifying ways; and these expressions must be recognized and accepted as evidences of the ever-present Principle which is their source. It is seen, then, that it is impossible actually to lose any good that one has known and loved.

A seeming loss is apparent only to the finite sense which would limit all that is beautiful and good. The human sense, which would "circumscribe happiness within the limits of personal sense" (Science and Health, p. 61), may seem to lose the object of its affection. But even in this circumstance limitless divine love is present to broaden the vision of good as impersonal, boundless, ever expressed.

Must one, then, who is believing in separation as real abandon his love for a dear one or his desire for companionship in order that he may find spiritual good? No. In Christian Science such a one learns to turn more unreservedly to divine Love and Life, the source of all good, including the good that seems to be lost, so that he may see more clearly how it is that companionship as a true idea of Mind, is forever unfolding and expressing itself in Love's beautiful and satisfying ways.

The spiritual idea of companionship is not limited in expression to one single avenue. And if in the finite sense of life one may seem to lose sight of some beloved expression of this true idea, one should not strive to destroy his need of companionship, but rather strive more clearly to recognize the limitless character of this idea and its ever unfolding expression, that he may behold its beauty in larger and purer ways.

So ineffably tender are Love's lessons, so clarifying and healing, that the faithful heart, clinging to God, divine Mind, finds that the actuality of the love or the companionship which he thought was lost, is included in the immortal, ever-present Principle, which is continually expressing good. Then one begins to see that he can rejoice in all manifestations of good, wherever observed, as evidences of God's continuing loving kindness. This glorious truth of God's allness and ever-presence Jesus understood, and anticipating the aloneness of his great trial he said, "I am not alone, because the Father is with me."

Though the human heart, not seeing the divine ever-presence, may for a time seek satisfaction in finite ways, striving to find "happiness within the limits of personal sense," each one must eventually learn that Love alone is to be loved and recognized as the source whence emanates the ceaseless, satisfying companionship of divine ideas. Mrs. Eddy says (ibid., p. 60) "Higher enjoyments alone can satisfy the cravings of immortal man."

"Learning this lesson, and accepting all these words imply, the sorrowing, the lonely, the uncomforted, may lift up their hearts to the Father-Mother God and say with the Psalmist, "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee." Having found Love, as ever present divine Principle, forever expressing itself, one finds the true idea of companionship, as all other spiritual ideas, being made manifest in experience in continually new and tender and lovely ways.

Hadassah

A special board meeting of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, of the Women's Zionist Organization, was held on Tuesday, to make plans for the annual donors' luncheon to be held on February 28 at the Jewish Community Center. Much enthusiasm has been shown by members of the committees in charge of carrying out the plans, and extensive arrangements are being made to provide ways and means for each guest at this luncheon to earn the price of the ticket, the greater part of which goes to the Hadassah fund for medical and hospital work in Palestine.

A large general committee for the donors' luncheon has been appointed by the Washington chapter, president, Mrs. Henry Ovenberg, as follows: Chairman, Mrs. Sidney Wiseman; cochairman, Mrs. Dave Alpher, assisted by Mrs. Nick Bobys, Mrs. Oscar Basseches, Mrs. Morris Blumenthal, Mrs. Meyer Dodek, Mrs. Joseph Freedman, Mrs. Leopold Freudberg, Mrs. Charles Gordon, Mrs. Louis Krupshaw, Mrs. Max Offenberg, Mrs. Alex Rosenblum, Mrs. Charles Rosenthal, Mrs. Harry Schwartz, Mrs. Max Shapiro, Mrs. Morris Wittlin. Committee on tickets, Mrs. Paul Perlman, chairman; Mrs. Sam Harcisenfeld, cochairman.

Among the subcommittees are: Mrs. Joseph Freedman, in charge of rummage sales; Mrs. H. Hutt, in charge of a thrift shop to act as a woman's exchange for the sale of home-baked products, jellies, jams, candies, and other items.

A report of the progress being made by the various chairmen is to be made on Tuesday, at a luncheon meeting of the board, to be held at the Jewish Community Center at 12:30.

Mrs. John W. Thompson, 3158 Nineteenth street northwest, entertained members of Chapter B on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Edward T. Leomas presided. The program for the meeting was in memory of the founders of the sisterhood in 1869. A candelbraum, with spaces for seven candles—the number of founders—was set on a table. Each taper was lit and encircled a tall candle, the love candle.

Mrs. H. J. Harris interpreted the Spirit of the Past and the seven girl founders were represented by members as their names were called, filing up and lighting the candles. A short tribute was made to each founder. Mrs. Worthy P. Sterns acted as Mary Allen Stafford; Miss Jessie O. Elting, Alice Bird Babb; Mrs. George Lewis Peckham as Luella Pearson Penfield; Mrs. Sidney R. Jacobs, Francis Roads Elliot; Mrs. Alfred Hopkins Williams, Hattie Briggs Banquet; Mrs. Charles M. Jones, Alice Virginia Coffin, and Mrs. Robert Miller, Ella Stewart. The service was closed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Miss Isabel Allen, president of Chapter H, P. E. O., was hostess to the chapter at its first meeting of the new year, Tuesday, January 3. Continuing the series of programs on the States, Mrs. M. B. Lacy gave a description of the pleasures afforded to California's visitors throughout the various seasons of the year. The evening closed with a social hour.

One of the high spots of the P. E. O. year in Washington will be attained Saturday evening, when the annual Founders Day banquet will be held in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel with Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, an unaffiliated member, as guest of honor and speaker of the evening.

Travel and Resort News of Interest to Post Readers

GRACE LINE OFFERS ATTRACTIVE TOURS

South America Is Pictured as Unspoiled Land of Scenic Beauty.

Seagoers tired of the traveled trails are discovering that South America, our own sister continent, is one of the most unspoiled lands on the globe.

The west coast—with its stupendous mountain scenery, colorful Indian life, the oldest cities on the continent, and the baffling pre-Inca and Inca ruins—is particularly fascinating and easy to visit. The express "Santa" ships of the Grace Line sail every two weeks from New York to all the countries on the west coast.

First comes Colombia, traversed by the western, central and eastern Cordilleras of the Andes and the Magdalena, which ranks fourth among South America's rivers. From its mountains come gold, silver, platinum, iron and the world's largest supply of emeralds; from its valleys and hillsides, coffee, sugar, cacao, tobacco, bananas and vegetable ivory. Buenaventure, its chief port, is an attractive town of white high-roofed tropical buildings edged with countless thatched huts of the natives, lying on a green-clad bay.

Topographical Contrasts.

Further down the coast on the Equator lies Ecuador, smallest of the South American republics, which provides, perhaps, more startling topographical contrasts than any other area of its size on the continent, and boasts two of the highest peaks in the Andes.

"Santa" ships enter the Guayas River, sail through 30 miles of gorgeous jungle scenery to Guayaquil, the port. It is a town of pastel-colored, balconied buildings of Moorish stucco; friendly sidewalk cafes, and arcades with shops open to the street—where cafes, up-to-the-minute movies and smart hotels, with cool roof gardens, provide entertainment.

A spectacular train route through magnificent mountain scenery leads to Quito, the capital. This city, with Mexico City and Cuzco, antedates the white man's discovery of America. No one knows its exact age, but at the time of the Spanish conquest it was inhabited by the Caras, a race contemporary with, and ruled by, the Incas. Its old churches, whose bells toll continually; the older section, where hilly cobbled lanes are overhung with balconies, and markets crowded with Indians, are its most interesting features.

Glorified Dude Ranch.

Halfway between Guayaquil and Quito is a glorified dude ranch, known as the Hacienda Rio Negro, which provides hunting, fishing, horseback riding jungle style, excursions to villages inhabited by the Quechua and Aymara Indians, and a safari for those who wish to visit the Jivaro head hunters, or explore the Amazon jungles.

Next on the Grace Line route lies Peru, with the crumbling dead city of Chan Chan, that was hoary with age before the Incas were born; Lima, the jewel-like "city of kings," built in 1535 by Francisco Pizarro from the largest king's ransom ever demanded—an old Spanish town built around the Plaza de Armas, with up to date hotels, fascinating shops, a bull ring, race track and magnificent country club; the smart seaside resorts of Chorillos, Miraflores and La Punta.

Up in the mountains of Peru and Bolivia lie Arequipa resting at the foot of El Misti with its "Quinta Bates," that noted inn which is the rendezvous for famous people from all over the world; Cuzco, a medieval city which sprawls over the ruins of the Inca capital; Lake Titicaca, highest navigable lake in the world, resting in the heart of the titanic prehistoric ruins of Peru and Bolivia; La Paz, highest capital in the world, with three-quarters of its population of pure aboriginal blood (Aymara Indians) and Cholos (half breeds)—a city of aged streets haughtily stepping llamas, fantastically costumed Indians and scenic views that beggar description.

Special Tours Added.

Finally comes Chile, "the Shoelace Republic." The highlights of this country are quaint little ports which ship nitrate, the chief source of Chilean wealth; Valparaiso, principal port of the west coast, an attractive city of gayly painted buildings resting in the shadow of Aconcagua, highest mountain in the Western Hemisphere; the Lido-like Vina del Mar; Santiago, founded by Valdivia in 1540, a city famous for its beautiful parks, and one of the most charming capitals in the world; and the Chilean Lakes, the "Switzerland of South America"—a region of sky-scraping volcanoes and seemingly bottomless caverns; quiet streams and roaring waterfalls; mighty forests and lovely lakes.

As a result of the increasing interest in South America and the demand for short cruises, the Grace Line has added several special tours to its west coast service, so that the cruise to South America will fit comfortably into the short vacation, or may be extended to several weeks.

Outdoor Activity Crowds Asheville

Five Golf Courses Open at Resort Despite Winter.

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 14.—Winter has added zest to outdoor activities in "The Land of the Sky," for visitors of the season in Asheville. The crisp days of January and February in the mountains have their own peculiar lure for the outdoorsman and many sojourners are enjoying the golf, horseback riding and hiking which are the paramount sports of the season here.

Asheville's five fine golf courses this season, as in previous years, are open for winter play. In addition to the eighteen-hole Asheville Country Club course, the eighteen-hole Biltmore Forest Country Club course, the eighteen-hole Lake View Golf course and the nine-hole Malvern Hills Golf Club course, the city offers one of the finest eighteen-hole municipal golf courses in America. Visiting golfers are actively playing on all of the courses this winter.

Through the Pisgah National Forest and the mountains near the city, the hundreds of miles of scenic mountain trails are luring many equestrians and hikers into the field. The trails lead to high summits and points from which extensive views of the mountain terrain may be enjoyed.

School and College News

Georgetown University.

Problems connected with the new tariff policy will be the main theme of this year's meeting at the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University. Dr. Lynn R. Isle of Pines Boasts Fine Scenery and Many Sports

Tropical Garden Off Southern Coast of Cuba Easy to Reach and Has Modern Hotel Facilities; Paradise for Fishermen.

By DARRELL PRESTON AUB.

We feel very nautical, not to say piratical, when we think of the voyage which our Washington Post group took to the Islands of the Spanish Main this winter. We have visited every part of the West Indies. We sailed to the Windward Isles and the Leeward Isles, to the Greater Antilles and the Lesser Antilles. Our galleons were splendid ships such as the gold-earringed roamers of old never dreamed of. We came, we saw and were conquered by the beauty of these jewel-like islands, and we are loath to leave this region. But we need not say farewell to the West Indies while the winds still blow chill up North. There is one charming spot we can easily visit from Havana, and who desn't find himself in Havana at one time or another in the course of a winter? The spot is—the Isle of Pines.

The Isle of Pines lies approximately 60 miles off the south coast of Cuba, and is frequently referred to as "Treasure Island," due to the popularity of Stevenson's legend. It is also called the "Garden of the Caribbean," for its rich vegetation, fertile soil, citrus groves and fields of luscious pineapples.

Named for Trees.

It takes its name—the Isle of Pines—from the pine trees that cover the northern part of the island, being interspersed with the beautiful royal palm tree that waves aloft its green fronds like giant ostrich plumes. Other tropical trees of many varieties are here, but the pine and the palm predominate in the northern part of the island, while on the south coast are immense forests of many varieties of valuable hardwoods, including large areas of cedar and mahogany.

The climate of the Isle of Pines is officially described as "delicious, the air pure and balmy and, notwithstanding the fact that the island is surrounded by water, it is considered dry. The winds coming from the sea and passing over the pine forests are gentle and invigorating." The fact is, the climate of the island is among the healthiest known. Although south of Cuba, its temperature is lower on account of the gentle breezes, which are always blowing. From all parts of Cuba, as well as the United States, invalids come to be cured by the pure air and beneficial waters of its springs and rivers.

Ideal for Vacation.

To the invalid and convalescent, the mineral springs, which are famous, and the equally famous climate of the island promise much in regained health and strength. And to us lustier creatures it offers much in the way of sports and an invigorating outdoor life. There are many fine hotels for us to stop at, or, if we wish, we can rent a little cottage or an apartment at small expense. But all this is a matter of choice, and is easily settled when one arrives on the island.

The isle is famous for the sport activities it affords.

The calzadas (government highways) lure us on delightful motor drives. Surf bathing is enjoyed to the fullest extent even in midwinter. Boating, horseback riding, mountain climbing and—

Fishing—Piscatorially speaking, the Isle of Pines is the realization of lifelong dreams. The rivers and the sea teem with finny beauties, and in the channels between the keys the "big fellows" are trailed to their lairs. "Once a fisherman, always a liar," is the customary comment on most fish stories, but there is no need to exaggerate the size or number of your catch in these waters. Tarpon, barracuda, Spanish mackerel and gallagos are big enough and gamey enough to test the skill and satify the ambition of any fish fan. This is sport.

Easy to Reach.

How to get to this island of tropical beauty and calm is simple. We can go either by airplane or by train and boat. By air it takes only an hour, by land and sea it is a few hours, and the trip is usually made overnight. We leave Havana in the early evening for Batabano, crossing the island of Cuba from north to south. It is a delightful trip. The short railroad journey is through an interesting bit of rural Cuba, where, in the winter months, during the sugar-cane harvest, thousands of ox teams, often four yoke to the team, are employed in hauling the cane, loaded on two-wheeled carts. Many of these carts can be seen at the railroad stations along the way. Sugar has been the dominant crop in Cuba since the end of the eighteenth century.

Then follows the sea trip on the Caribbean, on a modern, comfortable motorship. We are sailing among innumerable verdure-clad keys that fringe the island. The view from the deck of the boat as it passes Columpo Mountain and enters the Cassas River is altogether enchanting and will long live in our memories. There are nice staterooms with comfortable berths aboard, and we spend a restful night.

Arrive Near Dawn.

Early the next morning we are in the Isle of Pines.

The island is 34 miles from north to south and 43 miles from east to west. In general, the surface of the island is rolling, from 50 to 250 feet above sea level, and made picturesque by low, verdant mountain ranges that rise abruptly from the plain. Some of these mountains contain vast deposits of fine marble of various colors. A large quarry is now in operation and is making shipments to the Havana market.

In addition to the sport facilities, the interesting social life, the golden, balmy days and fragrant, starry nights, which are an unending delight, there is some sightseeing to be done here. We drive around Neuva Gerona, the principal city of the island, and through Santa Fe, where are the famous Santa Rita Thermo Mineral Springs. We also drive through Santa Barbara. We visit the Presidio Modelo, the finest and most modern institution of its kind in the world. And we also swim at Bibijagua Beach, in the warm, blue waters of the Caribbean.

But the outstanding attraction of the Isle of Pines is—just itself.

Its perfection of scenic setting almost seems to need no addition or adornment by the hand of man. The fragrance and tropical beauty of this flowering island brings to mind the words of the immortal poet Heine:

"This is the New World,
As it was when Columbus
Drew it first from the ocean,
Radiant with its freshening bath;

Still dripping its watery pearls,
In showers and spurts of color
As the light of the sun kisses them!"

And so, some time this winter, when we wish for a little respite in a sunnier, kinder clime, we need only embark on one of the many ships sailing for Havana—and then—visit the Isle of Pines!

F. H. MURPHY NEW FRENCH LINE AGENT

Is Coming Here From New York in Succession to J. F. Nolan, Going to Chicago.

James F. Nolan, who has represented the French Line in Washington as general agent for the past nine years, has been appointed to a similar post in Chicago, with jurisdiction over Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, and part of Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin. This announcement was made yesterday by H. Ainsley Highman, general manager of the passenger department of the French Line in New York.

The Chicago territory is one of the most important in the country, Mr. Highman said, and Mr. Nolan was selected for this important post because of the excellent record he has made in Washington territory since 1923, when he assumed charge of it. Mr. Nolan, a native of New Jersey, where he was born in Phillipsburg, January 4, 1897, was graduated from George Washington University with A. B. degree in 1921, and then studied law for a year in Georgetown University. He spent two years as private secretary to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in Washington, which position he left to become the French Line general agent in that city. He is married and has four children.

Mr. Nolan will be succeeded in the Washington post by Francis Harold Murphy, until now a member of the New York staff of the French Line passenger department. He was born in Ottawa, Canada, October 23, 1899, the son of a retired iron and steel manufacturer. He was graduated from Ottawa Separate Schools and the University of Ottawa.

POST MODEL HOME IS BUILT BY GRUVER

Decorations of Residence at 418 Ingraham St. Are by J. B. McSherry.

The Washington Post is opening the new year right with respect to its model home program. Inaugurating its 1933 model home schedule, it is sponsoring one of the finest exhibit dwellings of the long list of residential offerings, with which it has pleased a home-loving public for the past four years.

This one is a delightful residence built by that master builder, B. H. Gruver, furnished and decorated by Joseph B. McSherry. This outstanding value in houses will be open for public inspection today at 418 Ingraham street northwest and may be seen hereafter both daily and Sunday until 9 p. m. each night.

This offering is of great significance to the home buying public. Not only does the house fulfill and even surpass the requirements of a Washington Post model home, but the fact that it is "B. H. Gruver built" commends it to the serious consideration of those who desire all that is good in a home.

Mr. Gruver has been a leading builder of quality homes for more than a quarter of a century and has established entirely new standards of value. Taking advantage of lower building costs, he has produced substantial savings to the purchasers in these homes, surpassing the long established standards of his organization.

Early Sale Predicted.

The Washington Post model home is one of a group that will be sold rapidly and it will be well to visit it early. Thrifty purchasers will realize that they can not afford not to buy these houses when they see such a value on the local market.

The Washington Post model home and those of the neighboring group are typical of the high quality of every "B. H. Gruver-built" home. They are of solid brick construction, have everything that could be desired in an excellent dwelling and are built for permanence, convenience, beauty, comfort and the everlasting satisfaction of their purchasers.

The homes contain six and seven rooms, including a cozy recreation room, with stippled walls and special process waterproof floor, two ultra modern baths, a kitchen as good and complete as in a $20,000 home. They have screened porches and cedar closets, terraced front yards with brick retaining walls. They also are equipped with garages and are situated on 158-foot lots.

The living room is furnished with English motif sofa, upholstered in a beautiful shade of green tapestry. The chair that corresponds to this sofa is upholstered in rust. The Putnam chair embodies both rust and green shades. A General Electric radio completes one corner and a solid walnut chair another corner. The draperies are marquisette and the overhangings are in golden damask. On each side of the sofa are matched tables and lamps.

The dining room is furnished with the popular pedestal table, one arm and five shield back chairs, the serpentine front buffet is in beautiful crotch veneer. The china cabinet extends to the floor. The French doors leading to the porch are paneled with marquisette. The overdrapes are damask.

The dinette is furnished in maple, with the drop leaf table and the popular ladder back chairs.

The master bedroom is furnished in early American honey maple. The vanity, placed in the alcove with its attractive reproduced lamps, offers a practical make-up nook. The large dresser and chest supplies sufficient storage space.

The guest room is furnished with the popular poster bed, large dresser and chest in mahogany.

The den is furnished with a comfortable studio couch in rust. This popular piece can be easily changed from a comfortable living room to a twin or full-sized bed. The modernistic ends, with its lamps on each side, make this an ideal lounging or study room.

Office Will Be Opened By J. Garrett Beitzell

J. Garrett Beitzell, of Beitzell & Horning, Inc., announced last week the dissolution of that partnership and the fact that he is establishing his own real estate office in the Tower Building.

Born in Virginia, Mr. Beitzell has spent practically his entire life in Washington. He was in Government service as a motion picture photographer in France during the war, with the 102d Field Signal Battalion of the Twenty-seventh Division. After the war, he entered the stock brokerage business in New York City and three years later came to this city to engage in real estate. He was with the Cafritz organization for seven years, four of which were spent as sales manager. He has served as chairman of the sales managers' division of the Washington Real Estate Board.

Group of homes at 410-418 Ingraham street northwest, including The Washington Post model home at the latter address, being presented by B. H. Gruver, builder. The model home, furnished and decorated by Joseph B. McSherry, is open for public inspection beginning today, daily and on Sundays until 9 o'clock in the evening. Below are shown the basement, first and second floor plans of the model home.

DEPRESSION IS SEEN AID TO ARCHITECTURE

Ultramodernism Given Big Setback; Profession Unified.

An architectural renaissance during the next decade, which will introduce momentous changes in thought and lead to even greater progress than in the past, is predicted by Ernest John Russell, of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Architects, in his annual report of progress in the profession, issued yesterday.

Architecture as an art has benefited immeasurably by the depression, Mr. Russell believes, in that ultramodernism in construction has received a distinct setback and the architects have been forced to turn to more utilitarian tasks. Because of the economic crisis, he holds that the efforts of honest architectural modernists have stirred our imagination, with the result that buildings will be inherently sincere in design and expressive of modern materials, methods and uses. The same forces, he points out, have caused the "wild enthusiasts" to analyze their work with critical exactitude.

Mr. Russell assures the Nation's architects that efforts toward unification of the profession are beginning to show results and that the slow recession of the depression will provide them with more than enough to do. Recognition of private architects by the Federal Government is praised by the institute's president as an illustration of the effectiveness of concerted action in the profession to secure the assignment of public construction work.

Communities Are Benefited.

Designing of small homes, organization of new local building congresses, economy in site planning and housing and modernization of existing structures are among the many architectural activities which Mr. Russell discusses in his report. He declares that "as individuals we have turned our attention more and more to civic activities with the result that some of our time has been pleasantly occupied and we can feel that we are taking our logical place as citizens to the benefit of our communities."

"Those who lend money for buildings," he says, "are convinced that buildings well designed and of good construction are more valuable than ill-considered structures. Hence there arises the desire for the certification of buildings along the lines of design, construction, suitability for use and appropriateness of location. This trend, if carried to its logical conclusion, may result in still further use for the services of the trained architect and also may end ultimately in the practice of requiring certificates of necessity before granting permits for the erection of buildings.

"Individually and collectively we can face the future with the calm assurance that there will be plenty to do, and the deep conviction that we will be better prepared to serve our clients."

Architecture Live Subject.

The healthy condition of modern architectural work is evidenced by the printed and oral discussions regarding it that continue unabated, Mr. Russell declares, pointing out that it is a "live subject," animated by craftsmen with original ideas and high ideals.

"Architectural modernists," he asserts, "deserve praise for their efforts to stir our imaginations and this will result in buildings that are inherently honest in their design and expressive of modern materials, methods and uses. The wild enthusiasts have had opportunity to analyze more accurately. The result will be a reinforcement of the underlying principles of the splendid works of the past which are noted for their sincerity and beauty.

"The modernists have awakened in us the realization that too great stress has been laid on blindly following precedent and that the profession has

REALTY ASSOCIATES TO OPEN FINE HOME

Hemlock Street Residence, Shown Today, Overlooks Shepherd Park.

One of the most attractive residential offerings ever presented to the home buying public of the city is that announced today by Realty Associates, Inc., realtors, with offices at 1427 I street northwest. This presentation is that of a beautiful home at 1401 Hemlock street northwest, which today and during the period of inspection will evoke the admiration of hundreds of visitors.

Overlooking Shepherd Park, this home embodies the maximum in skill and craftsmanship, the utmost in beauty and convenience.

One will thoroughly enjoy an inspection of this beautiful center-hall brick home, located on a spacious corner lot, 65 by 150 feet, with high elevation and splendid outlook.

The dwelling has ten large rooms, three baths, furred walls, copper screens and gutters and quarter-sawed oak floors. The cozy library with first floor lavatory, the spacious model kitchen and the very large recreation room, floored with ceramic tile, are outstanding features.

Built by C. W. McKendrie, the entire house reflects character and atmosphere. It is handsomely furnished by Hutchisons, Inc.

The house, priced according to today's low market, is open and heated from 2 to 8 p. m., week days, and from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays.

Association Is Formed By Realtors in Oregon

Realtors of Oregon have just perfected the organization of a new State body, the Oregon Association of Real Estates Boards. The organization has been formed in order to make possible a new aggressiveness of Oregon real estate groups in projected State legislation of importance to real estate, particularly in reference to taxation. J. F. Ulrich, Salem, has been chosen president.

F. C. McGowan, Portland, is secretary and treasurer. State real estate organizations now exist in 33 States, with one regional, one Canadian provincial organization.

FOXALL COMMUNITY EXCELS IN LOCATION

City Convenience With Suburban Atmosphere Is Key to Its Charm.

In selecting a home, one of the most important essentials and one often overlooked in the overemphasis of some element of lesser importance is the general location and immediate environment, according to officials of Waverly Taylor, Inc. Regardless of the cost or style of home, such factors as accessibility, protective restrictions, convenience to shops, schools and churches, transportation, parks, altitude, neighbors, architectural harmony and permanence of present as well as future improvements, all add much to present enjoyment and future value.

In this respect Foxall, the group home community designed and built by Waverly Taylor, Inc., has been outstanding among the developments of recent years in Washington. Described as having "city convenience with suburban atmosphere," its first appeal is its accessibility, being only ten minutes by motor from the White House and served by both street cars and buses direct to the heart of the city.

Situated on a high plateau between Foundry Branch Valley Park and Georgetown University campus on the east, the Glover-Archbold Parkway and several of the finest estates in the city to the north, and the Potomac River valley, soon to become another extensive park, to the south and west, no section can look forward with greater security to a future of undiminishing charm.

Protective Covenants.

In the community itself the present attractive architecture and landscaping will be maintained by protective covenants which prohibit any additions or alterations to the fronts or hedges and fences in the yards. The residential zoning, provided by law, will exclude permanently any commercial or manufacturing encroachments, while the necessary shops in the vicinity will amply provide for every-day wants.

A graded public school, now being built on Foxall road, will accommodate the younger students beginning with the next school year. The new Gordon Junior High School and Western High School, only a short distance away, offer the city's fine educational facilities for older children. In nearby Georgetown there are churches of all denominations.

It is a well-known fact that in warm weather the higher levels and those contiguous to woods and water are always the coolest. Foxall, on a high elevation overlooking the Potomac with an unrestricted view for miles down the valley, is particularly fortunate in this respect. By deep setbacks and broad streets every house benefits from the prevailing southern and southwestern breezes, and the houses have been so designed as to permit an unobstructed current of air through the house. In addition, by the use of insulation under the roofs and roof ventilators, the discomfort of overheated top stories has been eliminated.

Park Improvements.

In public improvements, each year sees a new highway, park or building to give added desirability to this community. The acquisition of Foundry Branch Valley Park in 1929 meant not only preservation of a beautiful wooded valley for the enjoyment of present and future generations, but it will eventually be an important link in the chain of connecting parks between Rock Creek Park and the Potomac Park.

During the past summer, Reservoir road, from Thirty-fifth street to Foxall road, was widened, a new pavement, 36 feet wide and a new sidewalk laid. It is now an excellent example of the most approved practices in highway design. The widening of Conduit road, so far as the condemnation of necessary land for right of way is concerned, has been accomplished and this paving, including a roadway 40 feet wide from Foxall road to Reservoir road, and at least one of the two 30-foot roadways, with 19 feet center parking, from Reservoir road to the District line, has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget for the current year. The next widening will be Foxall road from Conduit road to Nebraska avenue. This case has been filed in court for future action by the condemnation jury. Eventually, Foxall road will be 120 feet wide with a roadway 40 feet wide, traversing one of the most beautiful residential sections of the city.

Pride of Ownership.

With all the foregoing advantages, this corporation reminds, there is the added intangible asset of a community of representative professional, business, service and official citizens of congenial tastes which makes for a happy community spirit. This is reflected in cooperative efforts toward local improvements, Boy Scout and Girl Scout Troops and Garden Clubs. The pride of ownership in such a community, too, they point out, offers an inducement to maintain the yards, shrubbery and gardens to preserve and even improve its new attractiveness.

With nearly 100 English-type group homes built and nearly all sold, they state, the Foxall development is being completed with every advance promise fulfilled. The architects Advisory Council and individual homes and groups have been sponsored by local newspapers, including the Washington Post's "Homes of Tomorrow" and, more recently, the "Budget Balancing Homes," because of their distinctive merit.

The model home at 4447 Volta place is open daily for public inspection. This modern brick home has eight rooms and two baths and is modernly equipped with gas heat, for quiet, clean and safe automatic winter comfort, storage type gas water heater and the newest table top gas range, fully insulated and with oven heat control. In addition to the entrance porch, there is a living porch on the first floor and a sleeping porch on the second floor, a maid's room in the basement and a garage, concealed from view by a brick garden wall at the rear.

There are other smaller homes available, with six rooms, maid's room and garage and the same equipment as in the larger houses. The model home is reached by driving out Q street and Reservoir road to Forty-fourth street, then turning left three blocks to Volta place and right to No. 4447 Volta place.

3 GOSS DWELLINGS TO BE OPENED TODAY

Residences Near Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern Are Arousing Interest.

Great interest will be centered in the announcement of the opening today for public inspection by Goss Realty Co. of three delightful dwellings in South Woodside Park, Md. They are located at 1, 3 and 5 Kingsbury drive, one block south of Colesville pike, one block west of Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern and about five blocks from the traffic light in Silver Spring.

These three new brick bungalows are part of a group of homes being built by Commander Franklin P. Williams in this popular new development.

The bungalows are of early colonial design, closely following the architecture of the period, and illustrate the American, English and French type of construction. A. F. Thelander is the architect.

The houses face the South, with a frontage of at least 50 feet each on Kingsbury drive and are located on lots 8, 9 and 10 in block A, the north side of which abuts the Colesville pike.

All of the bungalows contain five rooms and bath with a finished stairway to the second floor which is floored and can be converted into two additional rooms.

Other Features.

Electric refrigeration, electric clock, oxford cabinets and indirect lighting feature the kitchen equipment, which includes either a gas or electric range. Latest type plumbing has been installed, including modern sink, tile bath and shower with Pembroke tub and laundry tubs.

Bathroom and kitchen are painted in green and ivory, and the rooms are papered with colonial wall paper throughout. Added refinements include fireplace in the living room, oak floors throughout, slate roof and Armstrong linoleum on the kitchen floor.

All of the houses are thoroughly waterproofed and screened and all windows and doors are metal weather-stripped. Lawns have been attractively graded and sodded, and planted with shrubbery.

Plans Are Completed.

Plans for an immediate improvement of Kingsbury drive through the South Woodside Park development have been completed.

Commander Williams has taken an active part in Montgomery County building and real estate activities since his retirement from the United States naval service after the War.

For a number of years he carried on building activities in the Woodside and North Woodside sections and is now contemplating building several new homes in addition to his work on Kingsbury drive.

DISCUSSION LISTED AT REALTOR SESSION

Many Professional Matters to Occupy Mid-Winter Meeting in Capital.

Interesting discussions of various professional matters will feature the annual midwinter business meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at the Willard Hotel, January 24-28. The program of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers also meeting at this time, reveals that on Wednesday morning, January 25, there will be an appraisal of a two-story business building with a 100 per cent location, by Max Tieger, Elizabeth, N. J.

The round table discussion of this appraisal as to capitalization rate will be led by Ivan A. Thorson, Los Angeles, Calif.; George L. Schmutz, Los Angeles, Calif., and Cuthbert E. Reeves, Buffalo, N. Y.

Discussion as to the prophetic analysis of future benefits will be led by Burton Thompson, Elizabeth, N. J.; Frank D. Hall, New York City, and William H. Ballard, Boston, Mass.

The question, "Should the Land Value Be Made Residual to the Improvement or the Improvement Residual to the Land?" will be discussed by Stanley L. McMichael, Los Angeles, Calif.; Morris Goldfarb, Perth Amboy, N. J., and George H. Gray, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Value of Vacant Land.

Wednesday afternoon's subjects and speakers are: "How Should the Value of Vacant Land Be Determined Today?" Walter S. Schmidt, Cincinnati; James F. Matthews, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Walter R. Kuehnle, Chicago, Ill.

"Questions of Ethics.' Ralph C. Baker, Camden, N. J., discussion leader. These questions are: Is it ethical for a member of the American Institute to represent an owner in a tax appeal and have the amount of his fee contingent upon the amount of the reduction, or base a fee in condemnation upon the amount of the award? It is ethical for a member of the American Institute to represent an applicant for a loan and make representations to the mortgagee based upon owner's statements without investigation? Is it ethical for a member of the American Institute to make an appraisal wherein his fee is contingent upon the amount?

Discussion of questions of standard practice will be led by Joseph B. Hall, Cincinnati, from angles of definition of value, balancing the appraisal and determination of final value, and noninvestment property.

Percentage Leases.

On Friday there will be addresses on the following subjects: "Percentage Leases," by Henry Wolfson, vice president in charge of real estate, F. & W. Grand-Silver Stores, Inc., New York City, N. Y.; "What Are the Appraiser's Duties Today as to Values?" by Francis K. Stevens, vice president, Brown, Wheelock, Harris & Co., Inc., New York City, N. Y.; "Building for the Ages," by Harry G. C. Williams, president, Philadelphia Real Estate Board.

Those participating in discussion of the influence of taxes upon real estate values will be Charles B. Shattuck, Los Angeles, Calif.; W. S. Guilford, Sacramento, Calif.; C. W. Rex, Orlando, Fla.; William E. Ferguson, Baltimore, Md.; John K. Leeds, Elizabeth, N. J.; R. W. Walden, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. W. Graham, Nashville, Tenn.; Ralph V. Field, Galesburg, Ill., and Edward M. Ashton, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Cut in New First Mortgages.

Beginning with the new year, news dispatches state, all new and renewed first mortgages of New York City real estate placed by leading title and mortgage companies of the city will carry a rate of 5 per cent instead of the 5½ per cent rate hitherto the rule.

failed to recognize the revolution that has taken place in building materials and operations.

"We should analyze our problems in the spirit of the scientist. Our goal is far ahead, but there are evidences that a few strong men have grasped the fundamentals and are training themselves for work that will serve as a guide and an inspiration. By the next decade there should be a momentous change in our habits of architectural thinking and an indication of even greater progress."

League Is Outstanding.

The development of the Construction League, headed by Robert D. Kohn, of New York City, past president of the American Institute of Architects, is another of the outstanding developments of the year listed by Mr. Russell. Its meetings, he says, have increased the understanding of the internal problems of the construction industry and developed concerted action. Its principal activities during the past twelve months have been the organization of the National Committee for Trade Recovery, the support of national and State legislation to aid in the recovery of the building industry and general support of those cities and States engaged in the effort to secure adequate financing for self-liquidating projects.

"Its beneficent influence should increase year by year," Mr. Russell comments, "and should finally result in the recognition of construction, the second largest industry in the country, as a national unit, thus fulfilling the dreams of men who have been keen observers of the ineffectiveness of the industry in the past."

Little possibility of action on the Green bill, making mandatory the employment of private architects on Government work, is seen by Mr. Russell, since the measure is still in the hands of the congressional committee. It will be introduced again at the next session of Congress on March 4, perhaps with modifications that will make it more acceptable to the incoming administration.

Against U. S. Competition.

Other legislative activities in which the American Institute of Architects is aligned with many other organizations protesting against the Government's competition with private business are summarized by Mr. Russell. Chief among them is the work of Louis La Beaume, of St. Louis, chairman of the institute's committee on public works, who has appeared before Congress in behalf of the bill regarding the employment of private architects on Government projects and also before the Shannon House investigating committee, which is surveying the activities of the Government in relation to private business.

"The net results of the institute's activities in endeavoring to secure recognition of the profession by various agencies of the Government," Mr. Russell observes, "are disappointing as compared to the ambitions of the profession, while on the other hand they are encouraging, as they indicate the potentiality of a national organization working as a unit for the recognition it believes its due.

"In order to reinforce its efforts, particularly in national matters, the institute has encouraged an affiliation with existing State associations of architects. This possible solidarity of the profession will be of substantial assistance to the institute in its national legislation campaigns, while the State associations will be strengthened in their dealings with the State and municipal authorities by the institute, in all matters that pertain to the benefit of the entire profession."

Wide National Field.

The design of small homes and the need for modernization in existing structures, Mr. Russell believes, furnish the widest national field now for the talents and industry of the architects. The president of the institute feels that enough has not been done in these lines.

"The institute," he concludes, "is gratified to find that local building congresses are able to report substantial progress and that new congresses are being organized.

"The design of small homes presents a problem that has not been solved satisfactorily by the architectural profession. At the last convention a committee was appointed to consider one phase of this subject, but later it was agreed that it was better to cover, if possible, the entire field, even including small farm buildings. The institute readily acquiesced in this point of view and has hopes that the fundamental principles pertaining to this problem will be formulated in such a manner as to be satisfactory to the profession with the resultant benefits to the public.

Opportunity in Modernization.

"We have been stopped largely from creating designs for new buildings and are beginning to realize that existing structures offer possibilities undreamed of. A great majority of such structures are in need of repairs and many could be modernized to the advantage of the owners. This offers a comparatively untouched field to the architects and yet it is logical for them to till it vigorously.

"There is a growing conviction in the profession that they should serve as consultants to those who have building problems, no matter how small. Arrchitects would do well to let it be known that they may be consulted about minor matters and can give assurances that the fees for such consultation would be moderate enough to meet with approval from the clients."

HOME LOAN BANKS RETAIN DIRECTORS

Fort Announces Only Four Changes in Management of 12 Institutions.

Directorates of the twelve regional home loan banks, with but four exceptions, were reappointed for 1933, according to an announcement made January 4, by Franklin W. Fort, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Henry G. Zander, Chicago, former president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and previously vice chairman of the Seventh District Home Loan Bank, Evanston, Ill., has been appointed chairman of the Evanston bank board, succeeding S. F. Phillips, of Danville, Ill. Harry S. Kissell, Springfield, Ohio, also a past president of the association, was reappointed chairman of the Cincinnati bank. As previously announced Mr. Zander will talk on the relationship of the new home loan reserve system to future real estate financing in an address to be given before the mortgage and finance division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at its coming Washington meeting.

Applications for loans totaling $13,600,000 have been approved by the Home Loan Bank Board at the last public statement made by the chairman, December 23. He reported that 197 applications for lines of credit estimated to total approximately $34,000,000, had been received by the board, all these approved by the district banks, which sent them in. The average requested loan for a home financing institution is $150,000.

Joseph Horning to Open New Real Estate Office

Joseph F. Horning, former member of the real estate office of Beitzell & Horning, is going into business for himself with offices in the Tower Building.

Mr. Horning was born in Milwaukee and during the war served in the United States Merchant Marine, attaining the rank of first assistant engineer. Coming to this city at the close of the war, he became a real estate salesmen, serving with several large firms and having his ability recognized by promotion to sales manager for two prominent dealers. He later organized his own company known as the Horning Realty Co.

ELEMENTS OF VALUE IN HOUSE OUTLINED

Every Dwelling Compromise of Ideal and Practical, Engineer Says.

There are elements of value to be considered in every house. These are enumerated by Nelson S. Perkins, construction engineer, National Committee on Wood Utilization, whose booklet, "How to Judge a House," has been published by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

"Every house," Mr. Perkins reminds, "is a compromise between the practical and the ideal. The more perfectly these qualities complement each other, the greater will be the satisfaction in the home. The house in which as many desirable qualities are present as seem possible with the money available is one of the most satisfactory investments a family can make. Let us be practical, therefore, in our quest, and seek satisfaction rather than perfection.

"It will be assumed that you, the reader, have decided to buy a house and have fixed a limit on the price you can afford to pay for it—usually from one and one-half to two and one-half times your annual income. Keep in mind that the house must be furnished by you, even if only a small part at a time.

"Let us analyze a typical house for the following elements of value: Location, appearance, floor plan, structural features and mechanical installations. Of these, the item of structural features is probably the most important, and also the one most commonly overlooked.

Repairs Are Considered.

"The house that is well built in all details will have a minimum of repairs. It is worth more because in the long run it will save the owner money. Serious defects in appearance or arrangement will decrease the value of the property in case of resale, while an inferior location may result in daily annoyances and eventual resale at a sacrifice. A house designed in good taste with attractive plantings of shrubbery will often command a higher price than a better-built house that has no architectural merit. The house that is both well designed and well built is the one that will always prove to be the best investment.

"The mechanical installations such as heating plant plumbing, wiring and lighting are of vital importance. Defects in these systems usually can be remedied only at considerable expense.

"Take the house apart, figuratively, and see what is wrong or objectionable from the standpoint of your own special needs and desires. Note also the advantages and weigh them against the disadvantages. Because you will probably live there a number of years, you should exercise every reasonable precaution to be sure that you and your family will be satisfied after the purchase is made.

Is Neighborhood Desirable?

"You hear of a house for sale in a certain section advertised as desirable. You decide to visit it and see. Is the neighborhood attractive? Are the streets paved? Is it a new development? Are there any restrictions as to stores or apartments? For how long are the restrictions imposed? (This may have to be checked with the municipal authorities.) If no restrictions exist, are there vacant nearby-by lots which may attract commercial establishments objectionable to you?

"Observe the children you see playing about, and perhaps talk with some of your prospective neighbors. Find out how long the house has been built.

"Are the adjoining homes well maintained or have they a slovenly appearance? How far is it to the nearest car lines or bus lines? How frequently do the cars pass? Is the home convenient to a railroad station? Are there objectionable noises from cars or whistles?

"See if there are near-by stores, schools and churches. Is there adequate police protection? Are the streets well lighted after dark? Are there parks or playgrounds in the vicinity? Is there much through traffic to menace children? How near is the fire house? Any fire hydrant close enough to be of service? In new developments and in outlying subdivisions, check up on sewers, gas and electricity, and the water supply; if these utilities are in, find out if they are paid for or whether assessments stand against the property.

"A future assessment may be impending for alleys, sidewalks, gutters or sewers. Perhaps the street is to be widened by moving back the front property line. Find out the tax rate as well as the water rate and insurance rate.

"Some of this information need not be secured until you have decided that the house is in other respects what you want.

"By the time you have reached the 'House for sale' sign you will probably have a definite impression of the surrounding section.

About Property Lines.

"If the house is detached, walk around the lot and see where the property lines run. You may need a survey. Examine the fence. Does the gate swing properly? See if the posts are solidly placed. If of wood, is there evidence of decay at the ground line or at joints? If of metal, look for rust. Is a coat of paint required?

"Is the property graded so that surface water will not run into the cellar windows or the basement? Does the lot next door drain away from you? It is obviously better to have surface water flowing away from your house than to have it running toward the cellar; but, incidentally, you will not want water from your yard draining into your neighbor's cellar. There may be a masonry wall supporting a bank or terrace. It should have 'weep' holes at intervals, to let the ground water drain through the wall instead of backing up behind it. Examine the wall for cracks and bulges that may mean an early repair bill. If trees or shrubs are present, give a thought to their shade possibilities, and to their general appearance in relation to the house. Think also of the back yard as to play space for children and as to room for clotheslines.

"Is the lawn well planted and of healthy appearance?

"If the house is on a terrace, give some attention to the entrance steps. Are they dangerously steep? A handrail may be needed as a safety precaution.

"While you have been looking for the potential trouble makers around the yard, you probably have been giving a certain amount of attention to the house itself."

With an attendance of more than 50 members, the Washington Real Estate Board, at its weekly luncheon Tuesday at the Ambassador Hotel, was agreeably surprised by the visit of L. T. Stevenson, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and Herbert Nelson, secretary of that body.

Mr. Stevenson made a brief talk on the coming midwinter conference of the association, to be held in Washington on January 24 to 28.

After the luncheons, real estate deals were discussed generally and these conferences are led by Morton J. Luchs, the director.

Building Permits

Two new church projects are progressing. The Rev. Francis I. Cavanaugh applied at the Office of District Building Inspector Oehmann last week for a permit to erect the projected Church of the Assumption at 3411 Nichols avenue southeast. The building will be a one-story and basement structure of brick and cinder block and its estimated cost is placed at $20,000. Bahen & Wright are listed as the builders and Donald S. Johnson, the architect.

Arthur B. Heaton, the architect, will offer to bidders this week plans for a one-and-one-half-story and basement building for East Washington Heights Baptist Church at Alabama and Branch avenues southeast. Dimensions of the building will be 30 by 82 feet.

Permits to build issued by the Office of District Building Inspector Oehmann last week included those for the following structures:

Federal Construction Co., Inc., four two-story brick and concrete block residences at 501, 503, 505 and 507 Quackenbos street northwest; cost, $30,000.

Albert E. Wright, two-story brick dwelling at 4626 Forty-seventh street northwest; cost, $5,000.

CLEVELAND SPURS BUILDING REVIVAL

Hope for Employment Rise Expressed in Report of Architects Directors.

Cleveland has taken a leading part in the pursuit of housing studies to facilitate a revival in construction in the cities of the Great Lakes area, according to a report to the American Institute of Architects by Herbert E. Hewitt, of Peoria, Ill., director of the Great Lakes division of the institute, in which he reviews architectural and building progress in the region for 1932.

Although building activities in such large cities as Detroit and Chicago are somewhat slack, Mr. Hewitt asserts this seems not to be the general rule. He cites the case of Peoria, the largest city in the Central Illinois Chapter area, where there has been residence construction, with the result that employment is slowly increasing month by month.

"Results may be achieved during the coming year," he predicts. "With Ohio's State law, setting up a State housing board to control limited dividend corporations proposing low-income housing there is a possibility of using Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds, although no corporation yet has been formed in this district."

Decrease in Indiana.

While the volume of construction in Indiana fell from $18,720,431 in 1931 to $6,583,475 in 1932, Mr. Hewitt points out that any change in this region is likely to be for the better. The Government is expected to take a hand in building in the Indiana area.

Mr. Hewitt complains that there is considerable red tape and many technicalities in connection with borrowing from Home Loan Banks, so that the use of funds from this source "is a very long-drawn-out procedure." He recommends that the Home Loan processes be simplified in order to accrue greater benefits for prospective borrowers.

In Detroit, Mr. Hewitt finds that the institute chapter there is represented on the Michigan trade recovery committee by its president, B V. Gamber. The committee is interested primarily in submitting construction projects to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for approval, with a view to securing adequate building funds.

Hope in Cook County.

Of Chicago's manifold troubles, Mr. Hewitt asserts on investigation that the tax situation in Cook County is "so very serious that it is likely to prove a damper on the building indutry for some time to come." There is considerable hope, however, in the construction of buildings for the Century of Progress Exposition, which will open in Chicago next June.

"The fair undoubtedly will stimulate retail business because of the large number of visitors expected next year," he says.

Reports from the Grand Rapids Chapter give the following statement of construction for the first eleven months of 1932:

Grand Rapids, $1,520,000; Muskegon, $70,000; Lansing, $460,000; Iona and vicinity, $550,000; Holland and vicinity, $69,400.

Many Remodeling Jobs.

A hopeful sign is seen by Mr. Hewitt in Bloomington, Ill., where there has been a "considerable volume of remodeling jobs," although new construction projects have fallen off. Architectural leaders for months have been urging upon the Nation the necessity of modernization of old buildings, he points out.

Employment throughout the Great Lakes region, both in architecture and building, is in a precarious state at present, Mr. Hewitt asserts. Government work is expected to be small in volume throughout the area and he believes that what construction is planned for 1933 will be mainly in repairs and modernization.

Stocks Again Lose Battle To Traders' Profit-Taking

Two-Tenths Loss Recorded as Sales Volume Drops to 360,910 Shares.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Stock trading was of a routine nature today. Week-end profit-taking sent prices off for a time, but leaders met fresh buying after a moderate setback, and there was generally little change by closing time. Turnover totaled 360,910 shares.

The market appeared to be under the guidance of professional traders who, if they were unwilling to hazard many guesses as to future happenings, also found no immediate reason for changing their recent attitude of conservative optimism. Resistance of leading shares to realizing was evident, though frequently a Saturday session is hardly a good test. Bonds again eased and wheat weakened toward the close.

Tobacco shares made another favorable showing, net gains for the three leading members of that group running from a fraction to just over a point. Procter & Gamble slid off 1⅜ net on announcement of the dividend reduction to $1.50 annual basis from $2, but the stock had been anticipating the cut earlier in the week. McCrory Stores issues were firmer.

Automobile stocks tended to sag, but Chrysler's loss of a point was exceptionally large. Rails were little changed at the close, favoring the down side by a narrow margin. Small net losses appeared for such a miscellaneous list as American Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, United Corporation, United States Steel and Santa Fe, while National Biscuit, Consolidated Gas, Pacific Lighting, Drug and several others finished slightly higher. Eastman rallied more than a point and Homestake jumped about 3.

Procter & Gamble's earnings for the six months ended December 31 were equivalent to 64 cents a share on the common, or less than half the return for the same 1931 half-year. Soap prices have been reduced in the past few months, but the company said many of the adverse conditions affecting the industry had improved and that the management believed the "most difficult period" had passed.

Foreign exchange dealings were very quiet. Sterling, having recovered from the agitation incident to the Boots Drug transaction, held its own and French francs steadied after a minor early dip. This is the season when British currency usually improves as funds move to London. Changes this week, however, have been inconsequential.

Stocks.

Profit-taking again pushed stocks down. Trading was perfunctory. The average loss reached two-tenths of a point. Sales totaled 360,910 shares for the short session.

Bonds.

Little support developed, and loans sagged after a steady run of gains during the week. The average loss was one-tenth of a point. Sales declined to $5,450,000.

Curb.

Active leaders were steady, in spite of routine trading and wide fluctuations. The sales volume dropped to 70,000 shares. Utilities showed some firmness. Oils were quiet.

Wheat.

Concentrated selling sent wheat prices lower. Professional traders were blamed for the liquidation. Corn and oats followed the decline. May wheat sold at 47⅝ to 47¾ cents.

Cotton.

Prices rallied on week-end covering, and the market closed net unchanged to 2 points higher. March sold at 6.18. Liverpool reported a small market with offerings absorbed by trade calling.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was dull and featureless with the exception of home rails, which were weak on uncertainties regarding the wage situation of the railroads. German bonds were heavy, while international issues were steady. The closing was dull.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse moved irregularly. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Trading on the bourse was quiet and prices were slightly irregular under the influence of first half month liquidation.

CURB PRICES STEADY IN ROUTINE TRADING

Wider Fluctuations Mark Half-Day Session; Sales, 70,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The more active curb stocks were fairly steady in routine week-end transactions today, though some wide fluctuations appeared among less frequently traded issues. The market was quiet, sales approximating only 70,000 shares against 170,000 two weeks ago. The curb was closed last Saturday.

Utility leaders had a steady appearance. Bond & Share closed with a small net loss, but American Light & Traction, American Superpower, United Light "A" and American Gas, among others, were unchanged to a shade higher. Commonwealth Edison met profit-taking and lost 2⅝ net.

Specialties were mixed. Emerson Bromo-Seltzer "B," an inactive, dropped nearly 5 and Aluminum of America, Novadel Agene and Pan-American Airways lost a point or so. Swift Internacional was also heavy, but Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad, Safety Car Heating and Parker Rust proof firmed. Great Atlantic & Pacific was down 2. Consolidated Mining recovered 5 points of yesterday's 7-point break.

Oil shares were quiet. Standard of Indiana, the only issue to trade in any volume, closed unchanged.

Liverpool, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A shipment of £1,500,000 in gold bars was sent to New York in the steamer Laurentic today. It was understood this was part of Great Britain's war debt instalment.

CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House shows: Total surplus and undivided profits, $30,790,800 (decrease); total net demand deposits (average), $93,539,000 (increase); time deposits (average), $3,891,000 (increase); clearings week ending today, $2,871,182,320; clearings week ended January 7 (five days), $3,156,881,160.

Freight Loadings Increase 28,873 Cars During Week

(Associated Press.)

The American Railway Association announced yesterday that carloadings of revenue freight for the week ended January 7 were 435,652 cars, an increase of 28,873 over the preceding week, but a reduction of 136,026 under the corresponding week in 1932 and 277,476 under the same period in 1931.

The week of January 7 this year contained a holiday, but the corresponding weeks in the two previous years did not.

Miscellaneous freight loaded for the week of January 7 totaled 140,480 cars, an increase of 11,421 over the preceding week, but 43,723 under the corresponding week in 1932; less than carlot merchandise, 133,534, increase 6,263 over the preceding week but 49,936 under last year; grain and grain products, 24,106, increase 2,079 over the preceding week but 3,384 below last year; forest products, 12,242, increase 2,793 over the preceding week but 4,579 below last year; ore, 1,216, decrease, 239 cars and 1,978; coal, 103,086, increase 3,239 over the preceding week but 22,841 under last year; coke, 5,277, increase 958 over the preceding week but 728 below last year, and livestock, 15,709, increase 2,359 over the preceding week but 8,857 below last year.

Creosoting Plants Sold in Louisville

Six Gulf States Units Taken Over by American Company.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Jan. 14 (A.P.). Sale of the six plants and all inventories of the Gulf States Creosoting Co. of Mississippi to the American Creosoting Co. of Louisville, Ky., was announced here today.

Conveyance of the properties in Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi on or before March 1, 1933, is provided for in terms of the contract agreement, but operations of the Gulf States Co. plants are being conducted by the purchasing company as of January 1 this year, the announcement said. The Gulf States plants are located at Brunswick, Ga., Birmingham, Ala.; Meridian, Miss., Jackson, and Hattiesburg, Miss., and Slidell, La. Headquarters are in Hattiesburg. A. L. Juegn, of Louisville, is president of the American company which now owns 25 creosoting plants in the United States. The consideration involved in the purchase was not made public.

S. L. Kone, of San Antonio, Tex., chairman of the board of directors of the Gulf States Creosoting Co., said the company will be liquidated at a later date.

English Railway Opens First Electrified Service

The new year saw the opening of the Southern Railway of England's new electrified service from London to Brighton and Worthing. The electrification of this line, the first main line electrification in the country, was completed at a cost of £3,000,000 but it clips many minutes off the running time between London and the famous South Coast resorts.

Trains consisting of six parlor cars now leave London for Brighton every hour of the day, and this new schedule will be of particular interest to tourists in England who wish to visit not only Brighton and Worthing, but the many historic towns along this famous route.

Hop Prices Quiet.

GOODS MARKETS.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were strengthened today by issuance of year-end statistics showing sales and shipments in excess of production and stocks the lowest reported. Finished goods demand was fair. Several rayon companies have sold up the larger part of their March output. Men's clothing is in demand. Dress goods demand is developing slowly. Burlaps are steady.

Bankruptcy Filed By McCrory Chain

Petition Admits Company Is Unable to Pay Debts; Owns 250 Stores.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court today by the McCrory Stores Corporation of Delaware, a holding company with offices at 1107 Broadway. Judge Robert P. Patterson, of the United States District Court, appointed the Irving Trust Co. receivers.

The petition was signed by Leon Birck, vice president, and attached to it was a copy of resolutions adopted yesterday by the board of directors. These set forth that the corporation is unable to pay its debts in full and directed the officers to file a petition in bankruptcy. No schedules were filed with the petition.

McCrory Stores, Corporation, according to the latest available data, operates about 250 stores, many of which are in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Florida. There are also some in the South and in Northern and Midwestern States. John G. McCrory, founder of the chain, is chairman of the board.

Railroad Officials Plan Trip as Trade Survey

Philadelphia, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—President W. W. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with three other officials of the company will leave in about 10 days on a business trip which will take them to Mexico City and Los Angeles. They will visit many of the company's off-line agencies.

Atterbury will be accompanied by Elisha Lee, vice president; J. L. Eysmans, vice president in charge of traffic, and J. E. Weller, traffic manager with headquarters in Chicago. Cities to be visited include: St. Louis, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Brownsville, Mexico City, San Antonio, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver and Chicago.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Steel prices unchanged.

FLOUR MARKETS.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—FLOUR—Barely steady; spring patents, 3.65@3.90; soft winter straights, 3.00@3.25; hard winter straights, 3.35@3.65.

RYE FLOUR—Barely steady; fancy patents, 3.45@3.65.

Minneapolis, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—FLOUR—15c lower; carload lots, family patents, 4.05@4.15 a barrel in 98-pound cotton sacks. Shipments, 19,726.

PURE BRAN—8.50@9.00.

BOND MARKET SAGS AFTER WEEK'S GAINS

Indifferent Trading Blamed as Turnover Slumps to $5,450,000.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Little support appeared in the bond market today following yesterday's reaction and prices drifted somewhat lower in rather indifferent trading.

Sales totaled $5,450,000, par value, and the Associated Press Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate loans declined one-tenth of a point. This average showed a gain of one point for the week, closing at 71.6.

Only moderate pressure was exerted against the secondary groups which recorded losses of fractions to around a point. The highest grade investment issues followed an extremely narrow range not far from their recent high levels.

U. S. Issues Quiet.

While United States Government bonds were rather quiet, Liberty loans improved slightly with the fourth 4¼s experiencing the heaviest turnover. The Treasuries were inclined to ease, especially the 3s and 3⅛s. Uncertainty regarding new Government financing, which may involve new long-term bond issues, was a factor in the hesitation of the Federals.

Freight car loadings for the week ended January 7 showed an increase over the previous week, but the New Year's holiday made the comparison difficult. Rail liens that dropped a point or more included some of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, New York Central and Southern Pacific.

Iron Mountain 4s Up.

St. Louis Iron Mountain 4s, an obligation of the Missouri Pacific due next May, jumped 3½ points on reports that refunding plans for the issue might bring a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The utilities and industrials did little. New York Traction maturities advanced. American International 5½s lost a point, as did Dodge Bros. 6s, North American 5s, Shell Pipe Line 5s and U. S. Rubber 5s. United Drug 5s lost more than 3 points at one time, but rallied around a point. McCrory Stores 5½s were again soft.

The foreign list was dull and mixed. German government loans firmed, but corporate, state and municipal issues of the Reich were heavy.

Banks' Loss of Deposits Is Slight for Past Year

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The larger commercial banks of the country suffered comparatively small loss in deposits last year in spite of the periodic banking scares during the period, the Financial Age reported today.

Deposits of 195 important commercial banks carrying 47 per cent of the total deposits of the country showed a drop of $311,760,000, or 1½ per cent, against a total reduction in the deposits of all banks of more than 20 per cent.

A still better showing was made by the 42 leading commercial banks with individual deposit liabilities of $100,000,000 or more. The decline of this group was $114,563,000 and many of the banks experienced a substantial gain in deposits during the year.

PROCTER & GAMBLE DIVIDENDS REDUCED

Company to Pay Return of 37½ Cents; Business Improvement Seen.

Cincinnati, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Directors of the Procter & Gamble Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents on common stock of the company, as against 50 cents three months ago. The action was accompanied by a statement from Col. William G. Procter that business revival seems at hand.

"Many of the conditions which have adversely affected the company are improved and it is the belief of the management that the company has gone through its most difficult period," he said.

The dividend was declared payable February 15 to stockholders of record January 5. Earnings of the company in the six months ended December 31 were announced as $4,621,700.78, as against $9,299,156 in the corresponding period of 1931.

Minneapolis, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Net operating earnings of $2.75 a share in 1932 compared with $3.48 in the previous year were announced today by the Northwest Bancorporation. Net earnings were $4,448,363 for 1932, compared with $4,741,625 the previous year.

E. W. Decker, of Minneapolis, was reelected president.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Per share earnings of corporations reporting last week with 1931 comparisons included the following:

WHEAT VALUES DROP ON SELLING DRIVES

Professional Traders Given Blame; Corn and Oats Also Decline.

Chicago, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—An outbreak of concentrated selling pitched wheat values backward late today, and more than offset earlier gains.

Much of the selling which accompanied the break in wheat was attributed to sudden liquidation of holdings by a large professional trader. Stop-loss orders from other sources were automatically thrown on the market as a result of the quick fall of prices. Recent broad general speculative buying support had evaporated.

After a tumble of more than a cent a bushel, wheat closed unsettled, ⅜ to ¾ under yesterday's finish; corn, ¼ to ½ down; oats, unchanged to ⅛ to ¼ off, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents advance.

Early Prices Up.

Until the late selling flurry upset the wheat pit, prices had an upward trend except for a brief interval at the start when the market here made some slight response to reports of increased pressure of Argentine and Canadian wheat abroad. Relative weakness of the Liverpool market, however, was not fully reflected in Chicago. One reason given was that 160,000 bushels of United States hard winter wheat had been taken for export, presumably representing an exchange for wheat in a more desirable position than at the seaboard.

Contributing to the transient appearance of strength in the Chicago wheat market were authoritative reports that domestic drought areas showed extension and that big abandonment of winter wheat was probable. Forecasts indicated no moisture relief was in sight where most needed. It was also emphasized that domestic primary receipts of wheat were but little more than half of the totals a year ago.

Corn and oats receded with wheat, despite word that some corn from the United States had been bought for April-May shipment to Scandinavia. Country offerings of corn were larger.

Packers' buying strengthened provisions.

COTTON PRICES RISE ON TRADE'S BUYING

March Closes at 6.18 as Market Is Unchanged to 2 Points Higher.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Trading in cotton was quiet today with slight early declines under further liquidation on Southern selling followed by rallies on week-end covering and trade buying.

Business was restricted by a disposition to await the further progress of the farm relief bill, and the narrow fluctuations reflected the influence of comparatively small orders either way. March contracts, after selling at 6.13 during the early trading, advanced to 6.20 and closed at 6.18, with the general market closing very steady, unchanged to 2 points higher.

The opening was unchanged to 2 points lower and the active months sold about 3 to 5 points net lower during the early trading with July declining to 6.38 or about 31 points below the high of last Wednesday.

Offerings are Taken.

Offerings were absorbed by continued trade buying, which seemed to be coming partly through houses with foreign connections, and the market was steadier late in the morning. Trading became more active near the close when trade demand was supplemented by week-end covering. July sold up to 6.44, with active months generally showing rallies of about 5 to 7 points from the low levels. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the best.

It was reported that the uncertainties of farm relief legislation was checking the forward demand for goods in the primary markets here. Liverpool cables reported a small market with narrow fluctuations and small offerings absorbed by trade calling. The report of the Census Bureau placed consumption in this country for December at 440,062 bales against 415,501 last year was about in line with expectations.

NEW YORK.

SUGAR—Raw was quiet today and spot prices were unchanged at 2.73. Buyers as a rule showed no interest above 2.70, with holders asking 2.73 for nearby. The only sale confirmed was 54,000 bags of Philippines for January-February shipment to an outport refiner at 2.70, concluded on Friday.

Early steadiness in futures failed to attract an increased demand and prices reacted later, with the market closing net unchanged to 2 points lower, with some positions making new low ground for the season.

A little covering and trade buying early gave the market a steady tone with initial prices unchanged to 1 point higher. May contracts which sold early at .74, eased off to .72, while July reacted from .78 to .76 with final prices at the lowest of the session. Sales were 10,050 tons. January closed .69; March, .68; May, .72; July, .76; September, .80; December, .84.

Refined sugar was unchanged at 3.95 for fine granulated. A fair inquiry was reported, but it was no more than seasonal and limited to nearby requirements only.

SPOT COTTON PRICES STILL HOLD STEADY

Fluctuations Record 6.22 as High on January 10; Goods Are Weak.

(Associated Press.)

In a market very sensitive to political news spot cotton prices have remained steady with a week ago at 6.03 cents a pound although daily fluctuations carried it as high as 6.22 on January 10. In comparison, the high for December was 5.94; for November, 6.33 and for October 6.93.

The January future contract at New York declined 1 point to 6.10 cents, advanced 2 points to 6.07 at New Orleans and remained unchanged at 6.24 at Chicago.

Buying interest centered largely on cotton for prompt shipment. Since the recent advance in the market it was said some holders of spot cotton were more inclined to sell, with a result that an easier basis was reported from some sections. Both cash sales and exports showed a material decline from a week ago. About the only bright spot was anticipated extension of mill operations in the next few weeks when, it was said, additional supplies of raw material will be needed.

Purchases on Declines.

In a general way the trade favored the constructive side, but as a matter of ordinary good business judgment, confined its purchases to declines. The pressure of manufactured goods reflected an unsatisfactory volume of business so far in January following a period last month during which considerable hope and optimism had been built up.

Reports from abroad were not very favorable. Indicating agitation in England to promote greater use of India cotton in Lancashire. Owing to pronounced uncertainty hovering over trade and legislative developments a decided move in either direction appeared doubtful for the present.

The response of the market to passage of the domestic allotment bill in the House was negligible, fluctuations staying within a 10-point range. At times there was scattered Southern selling, but it was not persistent and prices easily recovered from the dips.

Farm Relief Doubted.

Few in the trade seemed to expect a farm relief bill to be enacted at this session of Congress, but the uncertainty of it was said to have restricted capital investment in both raw materials and goods.

Speculative sentiment was very mixed, but it seemed professionals were against the market, at least temporarily, on the theory that with low prices abroad an excise tax on domestic manufactures would open the American market to foreign competition unless import duties were instantly elevated to unknown heights.

While cotton shared only to a moderate extent in the general easiness of all markets, cotton goods began to show more weakness and many feared another period of apathy. Talk of a decline in the domestic consumption of cotton goods in event of an excise tax increasing the cost to the consumer took root quickly and textile interest began estimating the effect on employment.

Textile Operatives Drop.

Whereas operatives in the iron and steel industry dropped in number from 880,000 in 1929 to 508,000 in 1931 textile operatives decreased from 1,707,000 to 1,406,000—leaving the latter industry in the first rank of those maintaining an average number of wage earners.

American cotton is this country's greatest export commodity, 8,754,000 bales of it going to foreigners last season, compared with 4,744,000 entering domestic use.

Already the rate of increase in foreign acreage and world consumption of foreign growths is greater than the American and some profess to see in legislation curtailing domestic production and increasing domestic prices the possibility of the American cotton farmer losing his export business altogether.

Britain in Dilemma In Boots Drug Deal

Embargo on Purchase Is Criticized at Home; Debts Involved.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The British treasury, which is now being criticized in that country for holding up a $25,000,000 transaction whereby English capital would again gain control of the Boots Pure Drug Co., of England, is said by some international bankers to face an unusual dilemma.

British financial interests are reported eager to regain control of the company, which operates an important chain of stores in that country.

The original purchase by American capital drew considerable resentment against what was termed a new invasion by American industry.

But if the treasury should rescind its ruling in order to gratify the patriotic desires of a public which is said to be sympathetic to the restoration of the chain to British control, it is contended by some bankers that it would materially weaken Britain's argument for relief in her war debt payments to the United States.

The British treasury held up the repurchase because, it ruled, the action violates the recently imposed ban on export of British capital. Refusal was based on the fear that the physical transfer of $25,000,000, which would be required to pay off the American company which now owns Boots Pure Drug, would jeopardize the British pound sterling in the foreign exchange market.

By adhering to this position, in the face of censure at home, it is reasoned in some quarters, the argument of the British government for easing its war debt payments would be considerably strengthened.

But, it is contended, the granting of a concession to private capital in this case, would weaken the British government's position on the larger question of war debt payments.

SECURITIES HALTED IN BUOYANT UPTURN

Another Watchful Waiting Period Begins as Week of Gains Ends.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The principal financial markets moved forward in unison for a time this week, but the advance came to a halt as the week wore on, and another watchful waiting period was entered.

Bonds gave the best performance of the lot, rising briskly until Thursday, and retaining most of their gains for the rest of the week. Stocks, wheat and cotton, however, failed to make sustained progress, closing with negligible changes from the levels of the end of the previous week.

The expected quickening of industrial activity during the first half of January has appeared in spots, but thus far, the acceleration after the year-end shutdowns has not been particularly impressive, and political uncertainties have begun to receive considerable attention in financial and business quarters, particularly legislative squabbles over farm relief, banking reform and taxation.

Earnings Reports Start.

Forthcoming dividend actions and earnings reports have also started to inspire caution in stock market quarters. U. S. Steel directors meet to consider continuance from surplus of preferred dividends, toward the end of the month. Next Month, American Telephone directors will again take up the matter of maintaining the $9 annual rate of disbursements to stockholders, partly from surplus.

Wall street is well informed that a liberal quantity of red ink will appear in the numerous fourth-quarter earnings statements, soon to come out. The first major company to report for 1932 was R. J. Reynolds, showing $3.36 earned for common and Class B shares, as against $3.63 in the previous year. Wall street wishes that report could be accepted as a fair sample of those to come.

The advance in bonds for five successive sessions ended with Wednesday was the most striking since last August. Evidently it reflected reinvestment of January 1 interest and dividend payments and the continued piling up of idle bank funds as result of a heavy return of cash to the banks after the holidays and a continued inflow of gold.

Bank Reserves Lifted.

These factors resulted in lifting excess bank reserves to the unprecedented total of about $650,000,000, mostly at New York and Chicago, although the Federal Reserve let its portfolio of government securities run down $38,522,000 through failing to replace maturing certificates, the first substantial reduction since it started its credit expansion program nearly a year ago.

Partly as a natural reaction to recent buoyancy, and also perhaps partly in response to vague talk of currency inflation and refunding a part of the Government debt, gilt-edged bonds softened a little toward the end of the week. But the price index of 60 corporate issues ended the week at 71.6, up 1.8 from a week previously, and only 4.5 points under the 1932 peak, reached in September.

In shares, the price index of 90 representative issues pushed up on Tuesday to within striking distance of the peak of the post-election rally reached in the second week of November, then lost its gain, closing at 57.4, unchanged from the end of last week. It was notable, however, that at the week's best price, the index was within less than two points of the low level of early January of last year.

Cotton Consumed Cut in November

December Imports Gain; Exports Up; Spindles on Decline.

(Associated Press.)

Cotton consumed during December was reported today by the Census Bureau to have totaled 440,062 bales of lint and 44,275 of linters, compared with 503,722 of lint and 52,325 of linters in November last year, and 415,401 of lint and 45,911 of linters in December, 1931.

Cotton on hand December 31 was held as follows: In consuming establishments, 1,530,110 bales of lint and 280,795 of linters, compared with 1,456,913 and 278,454 on November 30 last year, and 1,630,719 and 253,049 on December 31, 1931.

In public storage and at compresses, 10,349,808 bales of lint and 59,874 of linters, compared with 10,677,362 and 64,096 on November 30 last year, and 10,414,412 and 50,393 on December 31, 1931. Imports for December totaled 10,742, compared with 8,974 in November last year and 12,705 in December, 1931. Exports totaled 1,039,795 bales of lint and 19,129 of linters, compared with 1,012,411 of lint and 7,057 of linters in November last year, and 1,183,121 of lint and 14,845 of linters In December, 1931.

Steel Ingot Output Up to 15 Per Cent

Demand Fails to Improve; Pig Iron Is Unchanged; Copper Quiet.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Demand for steel has failed to show seasonal improvement, it is reported, but production schedules have expanded moderately to an estimated 15 per cent of ingot capacity on sustained buying by automobile manufacturers and some gain in tin plate specifications.

Reports of concessions for sheets created uncertainty in the price situation. Demand for pig iron remained small at unchanged prices.

Copper remained quiet this week with domestic quotations nominally unchanged at the basis of 5 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Producers refrained from pressing the market in absence of buying interest, which was restricted to carload lots. However, a little more inquiry for second quarter delivery was said to be developing.

Demand for abroad, which had become moderately active during the middle of the week, tapered off later. However, rather steady buying for prompt shipment was said to reflect need for metal by foreign consumers.

Firmness of tin early in the week failed to attract improved consumer demand and reactions followed, reflecting partly easiness at London. Buying was generally restricted to small prompt lots. There was said to have been some increase in selling pressure when demand from tin plate manufacturers failed to broaden following reports of improved specifications from canners.

Although moderate buying of lead developed at times, demand during the week was somewhat less active than in the previous period. Prices, however, remained unchanged from the levels prevailing for more than a month. What demand there was continued to be restricted to January shipments.

C. E. SPEAKS CHOSEN COMPANY PRESIDENT

Former Washington Resident Made Head of Firestone Footwear Concern.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Charles E. Speaks, native Washingtonian and former local business man, now living in Boston, has been elected president of Firestone Footwear Co., a subsidiary of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. Born in 1887, after graduation from the local grade and high schools, he entered the factory school of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. at Akron, Ohio, in 1912, and the next year became manager of its cycle tire department.

Three years later he was appointed manager of the truck tire department, which he organized and which sold the first motor and bicycle tires manufactured by that company. After military service in the World War, during which he was promoted to a lieutenant colonelcy and received the Distinguished Service Medal, Mr. Speaks returned to the Firestone organization as manager of the Government department.

In February, 1920, he was transferred to the London office of the company, where he remained six years as its European manager. Returning to the Akron factory of Firestone, he assumed management of the truck and bus tire department. In 1927 he was appointed a director, vice president and general manager of the company he now heads.

At a recent meeting of the Life Insurance Club of Washington, Frank Halliday, actuary of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., gave a most interesting talk on the subject, "Quality of Life Insurance Risks in the Future."

Mr. Halliday pointed out that the trend is toward specialized examiners, standardization of occupational risks, better trained inspectors, and a much closer bond between the home office and the field forces. After his talk, Mr. Halliday answered numerous questions relative to financial statements, chronic lapsers, and a more rigid selection of agents, with special emphasis on "floaters."

John P. Lynch, president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, gave a brief resume of the joint sales congress to be held in this city January 26. He stated that a number of distinguished speakers will be on the program. He also requested each member to assist J. E. McCombs, chairman of the membership committee of the underwriters' association, in his efforts to assure the maximum attendance at the sales congress.

George B. Farquhar told what was being done relative to the incorporation of the club, and it is expected to be completed at the next meeting.

All members of the club are looking forward with much enthusiasm to a record production in 1933.

Officers of Riggs Bank Club, social organization of employes of Riggs National Bank, are Peyton B. Fletcher, jr., president; Robert M. Poole and Jane Kennedy, vice presidents; Virginia Mackintosh, secretary; George M. Irelan, secretary. P. M. Garnett, E. Wiley Stearns, Elsie Boteler, Esther Lau and Emory Shanks form the executive committee.

Neil C. Linger has been elected president of the Federal-American Club, similar organization of employes of Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. Percy Brothers was elected vice president; Ruth Laubinger, secretary, and R. Hewitt Nichols, treasurer.

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Reflecting year-end adjustments, member banks of the New York Clearing House Association reported a decrease of $30,791,000 in the aggregate of their surplus and undivided profits as of January 14. The combined total is now $871,831,300, compared with $902,622,000 previously. Individual writedowns are small and supposedly represent the setting up of reserves against doubtful items for the last half of 1932.

The principal dividend meetings scheduled for next week include those of National Biscuit on Tuesday and Liggett & Myers Tobacco on Wednesday. Action will also be taken on Ingersoll Rand, United Biscuit and Louisville Gas & Electric common stocks.

The price of copper in the export market slipped back a little further today, being quoted at 5.05 cents a pound, against 5.10 yesterday and the recent high of 5.25 cents. The domestic market was unchanged at 5 cents.

A banking syndicate which recently offered $3,200,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bonds of the Louisiana Steam Generating Corporation, due November 1, 1939, today announced that the offering had been fully subscribed.

The Western Dairy Products Co. has reduced capital represented by outstanding class "A" shares to $1,313,120 from $4,494,005. Capital represented by class "B" stock has been cut to $294,418 from $3,423,581.

Thirty-nine banks, with deposits of $11,624,000, closed in the week ended Thursday, compared with 52 in the previous week, The American Banker reports. Suspensions for the new year now total 73, with deposits of $24,305,000.

Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States last month totaled $16,990 long tons, compared with $21,910 tons in November and 21,409 in December, 1931, the Rubber Manufacturers Association estimates. Consumption for 1932 was 313,122 long tons, against 348,986 in 1931.

Standard Statistics Co. reports 28 unfavorable dividend changes in the past week, an increase of eight over the previous week. There were eight favorable changes compared with fourteen.

Press in Bulgaria Protests New Law

Fines and Imprisonment Among Features of Its Provisions.

Sofia, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Newspaper circles in Bulgaria are perturbed over the provisions of a new censorship law and the Association of Journalists has protested against its enactment.

One of the features of the law as drafted by the minister of justice provides that "whoever spreads abroad through the press false, or even true, information" arousing public unrest or injuring the prestige of the government shall be liable to fine and imprisonment.

Other offenses, punishable by fines up to $700 and imprisonment up to five years, include the writing or publishing of news tending to discredit the national currency or government securities, inciting to crime, attacking religion, exposing professional or private secrets or giving data on the national defenses. Veiled attacks on unspecified individuals or institutions are to be considered as "aimed at any person or institution to which the offending article might be construed as referring."

Rhode Island Party Tomorrow.

The Rhode Island State Society will hold a card party and dance at the Arlington Hotel, 8 p. m., tomorrow. Joseph H. Trainor is chairman arranging the dance. Col. Davis G. Arnold, president of the organization, will preside.

CAN YOU QUALIFY?

Are you capable of earning $3,000 to $5,000 annually?

Do you want permanent and pleasant work that will develop you mentally, socially and financially? A career instead of a job?

Are you a married man, 28 to 40 years old, out of debt, high school education, neat appearance, and an established resident?

Are you willing to receive special training and study hard?

Can you prove that you are thrifty and live within your means by showing that you have a bank account?

If you can qualify, a 500 million dollar National corporation, 88 years old, will consider you for special work out of its Washington office.

The right man will make money and have excellent opportunities for advancement.

Apply by letter only to sales manager.

Where's that "COLD BUG"?

While the Nation Sneezes and Sniffles, Laboratory Workers Search for the Cause of All This Discomfiture

By George Beck

Scientists Argue That:

WE DO not catch colds from sudden temperature changes, but only from other people who have colds and got them from others, and so on.

Fresh air does help to cure a cold.

Fresh air does not help to cure a cold.

Some people catch more colds than others.

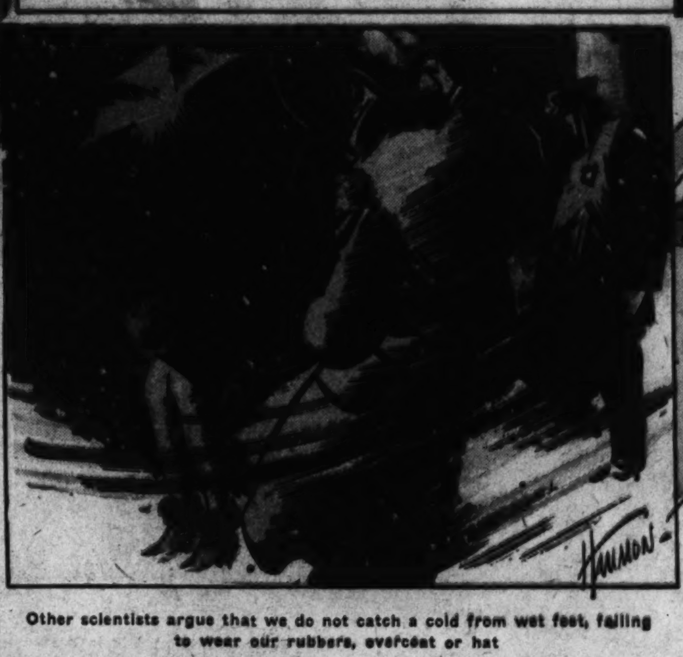
Sleeping eight hours a day, smoking, cold baths, breathing through the nose, all have no effect on our colds, one way or another.

Exercise and woolen underwear help us in the care of colds.

There is practically no precaution against a cold.

There are a few simple aids in the care of a cold.

Some scientists say we do not catch colds from sitting in drafts



Other scientists argue that we do not catch a cold from wet feet, failing to wear our rubbers, overcoat or hat

The U. S. worker loses from one to three days a year because of colds. Only men and apes catch colds

CONSIDERING all things, the Temperate Zone is generally agreed upon as the most ideal, climatically, in which to live. We find the major portion of civilization located in this vast area where there are four seasons every year. There is variety in the march of spring, summer, fall and winter which natives of the Torrid or Arctic Zones never know and which is supposed to provide quite a superior place of habitation. But it is not without penalties.

The time of the year is at hand when an unknown, unseen disease one which has never been seen under the most powerful microscope, grips an entire nation whose luck it is to be located in the Temperate Zone. The season of colds—grip—the "flu"—has already hit the first crop of victims in such crowded metropolises as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, and these victims are beginning to pay the $2,000,000,000 bill spent every year in the United States in an effort to ward off or recover from the annual siege.

THE cold situation lies before the most astute scientists today as "caused by a virus so minute that no one has ever seen, heard, felt or tasted it." And while they study and ponder, the common people of the Temperate Zone, as well as the scientists themselves, are assured of at least three visitations by this minute creature every year.

While the common cold is not without certain simple cures in a measure effective, still the extent of scientific success is indicated by one doctor who replied, when asked what he did for a cold: "I use two dozen soft linen handkerchiefs," and went sniffling about his business.

However, science, broadly surveying the annual cold season, more or less agrees that change in temperature so common in the Temperate Zone offers the most fertile medium for the little cold virus to get busy in. To support this, polar explorers will tell you that the Eskimo goes through the bleakeast Arctic winter without a cold, only to start sneezing when spring sets in and the frozen North begins to thaw. In the middle of the summer in the temperate belt there may be a sudden and unseasonal change in temperature, and promptly whole communities go heavy on the supply of handkerchiefs.

Scientists advance as the explanation for the greater percentage of colds during the winter the fact that temperatures are far more irregular during the cold season than during the summer months. Zero weather does not give us a cold, therefore, but when the mercury takes a sudden climb up the thermometer, we are at the mercy of the tiny cold bugs—if such exist at all. Certain schools of scientists do not agree with the "cold bug" idea. They maintain that colds are caused by chemical reactions within the body, and that some day a diet may be evolved which will immunize us from all our troubles.

The variety of scientific information is amusing—or is it?—when we sit snugly by the fire nursing a cold and read the latest bulletins from one learned society after another. They have been busy for years trying to isolate the "cold bug" and devious ways and means to prevent his coming or how to get rid of him, once he arrives and starts his nefarious work that not only causes the discomfiture of ordinary colds, but also leads to the various serious ramifications of tonsillitis, influenza, pneumonia, diphtheria and so forth.

NO LESS an authority than Assistant Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service W. C. Rucker offers timely, valuable information on the subject of colds.

"It is not necessary to describe a cold. Everybody is familiar with it in all its variations, from the simple, ordinary coryza, which is a polite running at the nose, to the sore throat, the aching chest, fever and generally 'knocked-out' feeling. The cough, the sneeze, the headache and the varying degrees of inefficiency which a cold produces are, alas, only too well known.

"Common colds occur in epidemics and are distinctly contagious. They sweep through an entire household, an entire State, attacking the young, the adolescent, the middle-aged, and frequently carrying off the aged, the weak and the debilitated. Schools, factories, stores are suddenly crippled by epidemics of this sort, and the complications and serious disorders following the disease add to the great economic loss produced in this way.

"To prevent a cold," Dr. Rucker advises, "it is necessary, first of all, to keep the body resistance at a high point of efficiency. This means that the body machinery should be kept in good order at all times. Good, wholesome food in proper amount, plenty of sleep, the careful attendance to the voiding of the body wastes, the taking of regular exercise in the open air, keeping the body clean, keeping the mouth and nose clean, the avoidance of exposure to sudden changes of temperature, the prevention of the chilling of the body by cold or wet, are all protective measures.

"It should be borne in mind, however, that even robust persons may contract colds from people who have them or who are carriers of the infection. This is particularly the case when large numbers of people from various parts of the country meet in conventions and other large gatherings, bringing with them their own peculiar germs. As a result of the sputum commerce which almost inevitably occurs, large numbers of colds are produced; and upon the breaking up of the meeting, they may be widely distributed throughout the Nation.

"THE germs of colds leave the body," the doctor explains, "in the secretions of the mouth and nose. They enter the body through the same route. Thus a careless sneezer and the person who does not cover his mouth and nose when he coughs are breeders of these infections. More direct contact, such as by kissing, the common drinking cup, improperly washed eating utensils, the common roller towel, by pipes, toys, pencils, fingers, food and other things which have been contaminated by the mouth and nose secretions of a person having a cold may also carry the disease. Antiseptic nasal douches and throat gargles do not ward off colds; and instead of doing good they may actually harm the tissues of the upper air passages or perhaps carry the infection into the sinuses of the skull.

"A good deal has been said about hardening people so that they will not contract colds," Dr. Rucker continues. "There is an element of danger in this, since to expose a weak person to the rigors of cold baths and cold drafts is apt to lower resistance, thus favoring the very condition which it is desired to avoid. At the same time, it should not be forgotten that the Arctic explorer does not ordinarily have colds so long as he stays out in the open, and that it is not the engineer and fireman in the cold, drafty cab who have colds, but those who ride in the close, dusty, overheated coaches behind. When all is said, it must be admitted that dusty, unventilated rooms perhaps play the greatest role in producing colds.

"Since colds are a serious condition they should be treated as such. A great many people think that they have an infallible remedy for breaking up a cold. This may be harmless in itself, but usually it is not and consists of a combination of harmful drugs and alcohol, the latter usually preponderating. The sufferer takes these preparations in large quantities, and if he is strong enough he may survive them and eventually get the best of his cold.

"Self-medication or medication by untrained persons is always dangerous," he warns. "The sick man who treats himself frequently has a fool for a patient. It is especially dangerous to those having colds and should always be scrupulously avoided. As a rule, much time, inconvenience and suffering will be obviated by consulting an intelligent physician promptly. If this is not practicable, a brisk saline may be taken and the patient put to bed. This gives his body an opportunity to regain its vitality and at the same time isolates him from other people. If improvement does not follow quite promptly, a well-qualified physician should be called."

While the common cold is becoming more and more prevalent, still it is not without ancient background. Hippocrates, a medical practitioner 400 years before Christ and an authority on diet, colds and other such subjects which we call modern, believed head colds were caused by impurities in the fluids of the brain. While that is not exactly believed today, no one can flatly deny the theory.

Pliny, one of the most celebrated writers of Rome, announced with the finality and conviction born of acknowledged authority, "I find that a cold is checked by any one who will kiss a mule."

THE subject of "catching a cold" was one which gave Benjamin Franklin much reason for thought and he wrote upon it considerably. Among his more or less quaint ideas there were some which were considered "radical" then and have been substantiated only in the present day. In a booklet he outlined that one did not catch a cold by "going into the river and staying there an hour"—or "by wetting all the clothes through to the body and wearing them a whole day." On the other hand, Franklin advised a man not to eat oysters, pork or duck, if he were to avoid the dizziness of a cold.

During those same early years of the American Colonies, when the Indians roamed the hills lightly clad, slept on the ground and were rarely the victims of a cold, on a bitter December day George Washington mounted his horse and rode out over his estate. Returning in the evening, his clothes were wet and the Nation's First President developed a cold. But it was his custom, he stoutly told a servant, never to "take anything for a cold. Let it go as it came." The following day George Washington's cold had developed into acute laryngitis, which brought him death the same night. First-class medical treatment for Washington consisted chiefly of bleeding him at the wrists. This was done at first by a servant at Washington's own request. When physicians arrived the same procedure was continued. This was considered essential treatment for all serious illnesses in Colonial times.

Today such institutions as Cornell University, Columbia, Johns Hopkins University and Hospital, the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, city and State health departments of this country and famous European clinics, are all waging modern scientific warfare against the common cold. Probably the three most important methods of treatment today are vaccine immunization, ultra-violet ray and chlorine treatment.

Following the same principle as any vaccination, the "shot" in the arm to prevent a cold consists of injecting a small quantity of the "cold bugs" into the body. Immediately the body musters forth its natural enemies against the cold visus and as a result builds up resistance against colds. This is repeated several times to create strong enough resistance to last an entire winter or longer. While vaccination is becoming a popular fad of the day, success in this form of treatment has been far from complete. The ultra-violet ray treatment is even less successful, according to authorities. Still, the modern sun lamp has come into vogue, and is not without its merits.

Former President Calvin Coolidge once gave chlorine a trial. Choking and gasping as he made his exit from the chamber where the gas fumes had been administered, he vowed (silently) never to try it again.

Following the war "chlorine parlors" sprang up in this country, some directed by hospitals and responsible authorities, others by amateurs. The latter establishments were considered dangerous and were abolished. Today chlorine treatment may be had under expert hands and success has been moderate.

No cause in behalf of the welfare of the physical body can come up without the "diet experts" jumping in with special offers. As much as we all dislike cod-liver oil, still it is recommended to those particularly susceptible to colds. A diet including whole cereals, fruits, nuts and vegetables, and with very little candy and sweetstuffs, is advised.

But grandmother's warm smile and advice and the most expensive doctor's prescription are the same today on the one method which comes closer than any other to curing a cold. At the first sniffle and sneeze, hop into bed and stay there, and within a few days you will be smiling happily upon the world again.

PIGS and COWS Pay COLLEGE FEES

Campus Life Has Materially Changed in Two Years, According to Surveys by Student Body Federation and University Association Officials

By Carol Bird

LIFE on the American college campus is changing these days from a gay interlude in the business of living to a serious educational proposition. Students are now actually aiming to secure an education instead of wanting to make a lot of whoopee away from the parental eye.

Love affairs, social festivities, the gay week-end parties are no longer occupying the attention of college lads and lassies. Eyes are on blackboards and textbooks—second-hand books at that—ears are attuned to catch what the "prof" is saying; gleaming roadsters are replaced by co-operatively owned autos of ancient vintage; raccoon coats, unless of three or four years' standing, are out, and the less showy variety of clothes are being worn by the college student.

WHY all the sackcloth and ashes for the hitherto carefree boys and girls who have long been known to set the standards of style, fun and general cut-up capers for the country?

Well, when students drive up to the door of alma mater with some of dad's finest Holsteins or a batch of mother's best duck feathers, or a dozen crates of Uncle John's chickens or Aunt Susie's finest red hens, and turn them in in lieu of tuition fees, going to college can no longer be considered all beer and skittles by the young folks. As frosty-faced Old Man Economics sticks his nose inside the cloistered walls of the country's colleges, much of the jolly rah-rah business floats out the windows.

Bartering of farm produce for tuition, dormitory, laboratory or other fees has become a practice in some of the smaller Middle Western and Southern colleges this year. The old trading system has been in vogue, with farm products and even livestock used as mediums of exchange. "Cattle instead of cash" for college matriculation is now the slogan in the farm belt, where money is scarce, produce plentiful and young folks eager to secure an education. Some of the colleges are accepting potatoes, eggs, honey or sirup in place of cash for board and room.

It was Illinois Wesleyan University, of Bloomington, which set the pace in the unique revival of the old barter system as an economic expedient. Everything from cows to rice has been acceptable at that institution of learning this year. As soon as the college announced that it would accept livestock and farm produce in lieu of tuition and other fees, so that the young people of the community might not lack for education, youthful seekers after knowledge began to farm their way through college.

Miss Ruth Keis, daughter of an Illinois farmer residing near the college town, arrived at the university with a load of sheep. Phyllis Crawford, of Danville, Ill., was cheered wildly by students when she made her dramatic appearance before the main building of the university with a plow and team. She offered to pay her tuition by working on the university's farms, since she had no produce, and soon brought Manager Crabtree around to her way of thinking. John Dickinson, who lives at Abington, Ill., arrived soon afterward and delivered forty bushels of his father's potatoes as payment of college fees. Other students followed with pelts from fox farms, hogs, duck feathers, hens, eggs, honey, rice, wheat, oats, cabbage, turnips, beets, cows, corn and horses.

THE president of the Louisiana State University greeted a student who arrived driving a herd of cattle before him. Elena Percy, 17-year-old daughter of a Louisiana plantation owner, drove a herd of nine cows forty miles to the office door of Dr. James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State University. She was a picturesque, smiling, but at the same time earnest, young figure as she sat mounted on Satan, a big black horse which she rode to the college with her herd of cows.

Her offering was accepted in full payment of one year's tuition, dormitory and meals. The nine Herefords were driven off to the agricultural department, and they are providing milk for the college cafeteria, possibly beef later for its dinners, for in this new business of bartering produce and livestock for a college education, the students, in many cases, will eat the fees. The colleges appraise the offerings at the market price or a little above it, and rather than store the produce in elevators and warehouses and graze the cattle on their grounds indefinitely, those in charge will get rid of some of the "white elephants" by serving them up on the tables of the students in one form or another.

Pigs, chickens, rabbits, wheat and even foxes find their way to school treasuries these days. At Westminster College, in Missouri, the president permitted a student to pasture two cows on the campus and to sell the milk at prevailing prices. The lad made $110 the first two months.

Weber College, in Utah, is another institution of learning that is accepting farm products in lieu of money, since money is scarcer than hen's eggs — or hens.

Thus it is that when these Middle Western, Southern and Western boys and girls drive up to the gates of their colleges with sacks of potatoes and loads of wheat from their fathers' farms, cows and horses from their stalls and barns, pigs from the stys, hens from the barnyard, they gain a new appreciation of education and its value because of the price that must be paid to secure it—the sacrifices which must be made to gain it. They have come to realize in the last few years that the loan funds and scholarships of colleges are taxed to the limit, and that their parents' banks, incomes, investments have been affected in one way or another; that since their tuition and other college expenses must be paid through produce and livestock, their parents' last resources, it behooves them to take a college education seriously, if they are lucky enough to get it at all.

So it is that while the old maxim, "Every cloud has a silver lining," has somewhat lost its luster through age and too glib usage, it can be taken out of mothballs now, brushed up and quoted occasionally. It surely is apropos right now, for it seems reasonable to hope that worry will be banished from the minds of students' parents, now that they know the boys and girls are doing less racing around in motorcars, dancing, drinking and card-playing, and more settling down to concentrated study and the real business of getting an education. The hip-flask-high-powered-roadster era is over, and the study-hard-and-farm-your-own-way one is here, which works out fine, in the last analysis, for students, parents and the colleges.

THE transition actually began some time ago. Colleges have been struggling quite a while now to weather the depression. When a questionnaire was sent out by the American Council of Education not long ago to 250 educational institutions, 168 reported a combined expected decrease of $9,000,000 in revenue for 1932-33 over their total income in 1930-31. And, according to a survey, the average attendance in private boarding schools and colleges throughout the country is 5.3 per cent less than the previous year. The analysis, based on the enrollment of 73,193 students, shows that the average school is 84 per cent filled, as compared with 89 per cent a year ago. Figures gathered by other agencies show that city colleges have declined between 4 and 5 per cent over the previous year.

A recent Yale report shows that seventy undergraduates, more than 2 per cent of the student body, had to discontinue their studies because of the economic situation. The university made awards of scholarships, loans and fellowships amounting to $683,378.97 to 1493 students, and the students themselves earned $553,701.47 during the year.

With these conditions existing as far as American colleges are concerned, it is easily understandable that schools and parents must co-operate to an unusual degree in order to give young folks a college education these days. And they are co-operating, as witness the raids on the farm, the barn, the chicken yard! Boarding schools, in many cases, have cut their rates, others have offered scholarships or have taken students in on the credit system. Meals are cheaper, dormitory rooms are less high priced.

And as for the students themselves, naturally the seriousness of the situation has come home to them forcibly. They realize that they must do their share if they are to continue their education. They count their pennies carefully now, and are quite willing to relinquish many of the gayeties and luxuries which have been associated with undergraduate life in the past. Frat parties, the jolly week-end jaunts, smart clothes, a lavish supply of spending money, speedy cars, fur coats, orchids and gardenias for 'the heart throb" at college dances are now long-forgotten frivolities numbered among the things that "do not count."

Students now have co-operatively owned flivvers, if they have any cars at all, instead of the gleaming, high-powered, expensive ones they used to drive when a college education came too easy and dad's purse-strings were loose. Mostly the boys and girls get around by leg-power. While hard times have swept from the campus much of its hitherto carefree gayety and joyous play, they have replaced these nonessentials with serious study and a more firmly implanted determination to "make the grade" and graduate with honors. There is less flunking and consequently fewer broken hearts at graduation time—another flash from that silver lining.

Clothes are bought for service today, not to give the other fellow a jolt and a dazzled eye. Second-hand books, second-hand cars and frugal luncheons are quite the thing around the college campus. The college student is not out for deviltry today, but for everything he can get in the way of education just as long as it is cheap. He is seeking scholarships, which are scarce as canary eggs; asking for low-priced dormitory rooms, cheaper meals and a chance to work his way through college. Despite unemployment, it is still possible for the college student to get a job, but he cannot be particular about the kind offered to him.

A survey was made by the National Student Federation, which found that college students have accepted in the last year or two many odd jobs which would have been turned down by collegians a decade ago. And they have accepted these menial positions eagerly, gladly. Some years ago college students would have felt that stigma was attached to such lowly work as washing and greasing cars, dishwashing, housecleaning, baby-tending, laundering and mending.

A number of students capitalize the widespread popularity of varied sports by giving lessons in golf, tennis, swimming and cash in on the craze for games by teaching bridge, chess or ping-pong. Some serve as masters of ceremonies at parties, dinners and dances, thus earning their fun through labor; others with musical talent make it pay by getting in dance bands, theatre orchestras, concert and symphony orchestras in their spare time and during vacation periods.

Still other students pay their way by driving taxis, tutoring children, holding down part-time office jobs, doing specialty selling, entering printing and publishing fields, doing public service or employment agency work, handling hotel jobs, waiting on tables, running errands for busy housewives. The federation which made the survey of students' work activities discovered that the employment records of 763 colleges and universities in this country revealed that 46 per cent of the men and 23 per cent of the women were earning all or part of their expenses. More than 200 types of employment were listed by the investigators, who found that $26,000,000 was earned by students of both sexes in a period of one year.

BUT a bright spot in the college situation was brought to light in the survey made at Purdue University recently. It was found that student worries over love, social affairs and religion had dropped appreciably during the last year or two. The survey compared the things which worried students enough to interfere with their studies in 1929 and 1932. Both times the worry that loomed largest was "school work" and the percentage of those doing the worrying for both years was fifty-six for both years. Financial affairs have caused the only increase in worry, from 40 per cent in 1929 to 55 per cent in 1932.

Every one must concede, particularly parents, that it is far better for college boys to worry about their studies and their financial situation than over the "plenty pretty baby," and for college girls to do the same, instead of losing their night's sleep and probably flunking because of too many parties and too much planning of lavish wardrobes. So, turning to clouds inside out, most people, unless their eyesight is bad and their general outlook on life jaundiced must see the silver lining as it applies to future American college life.

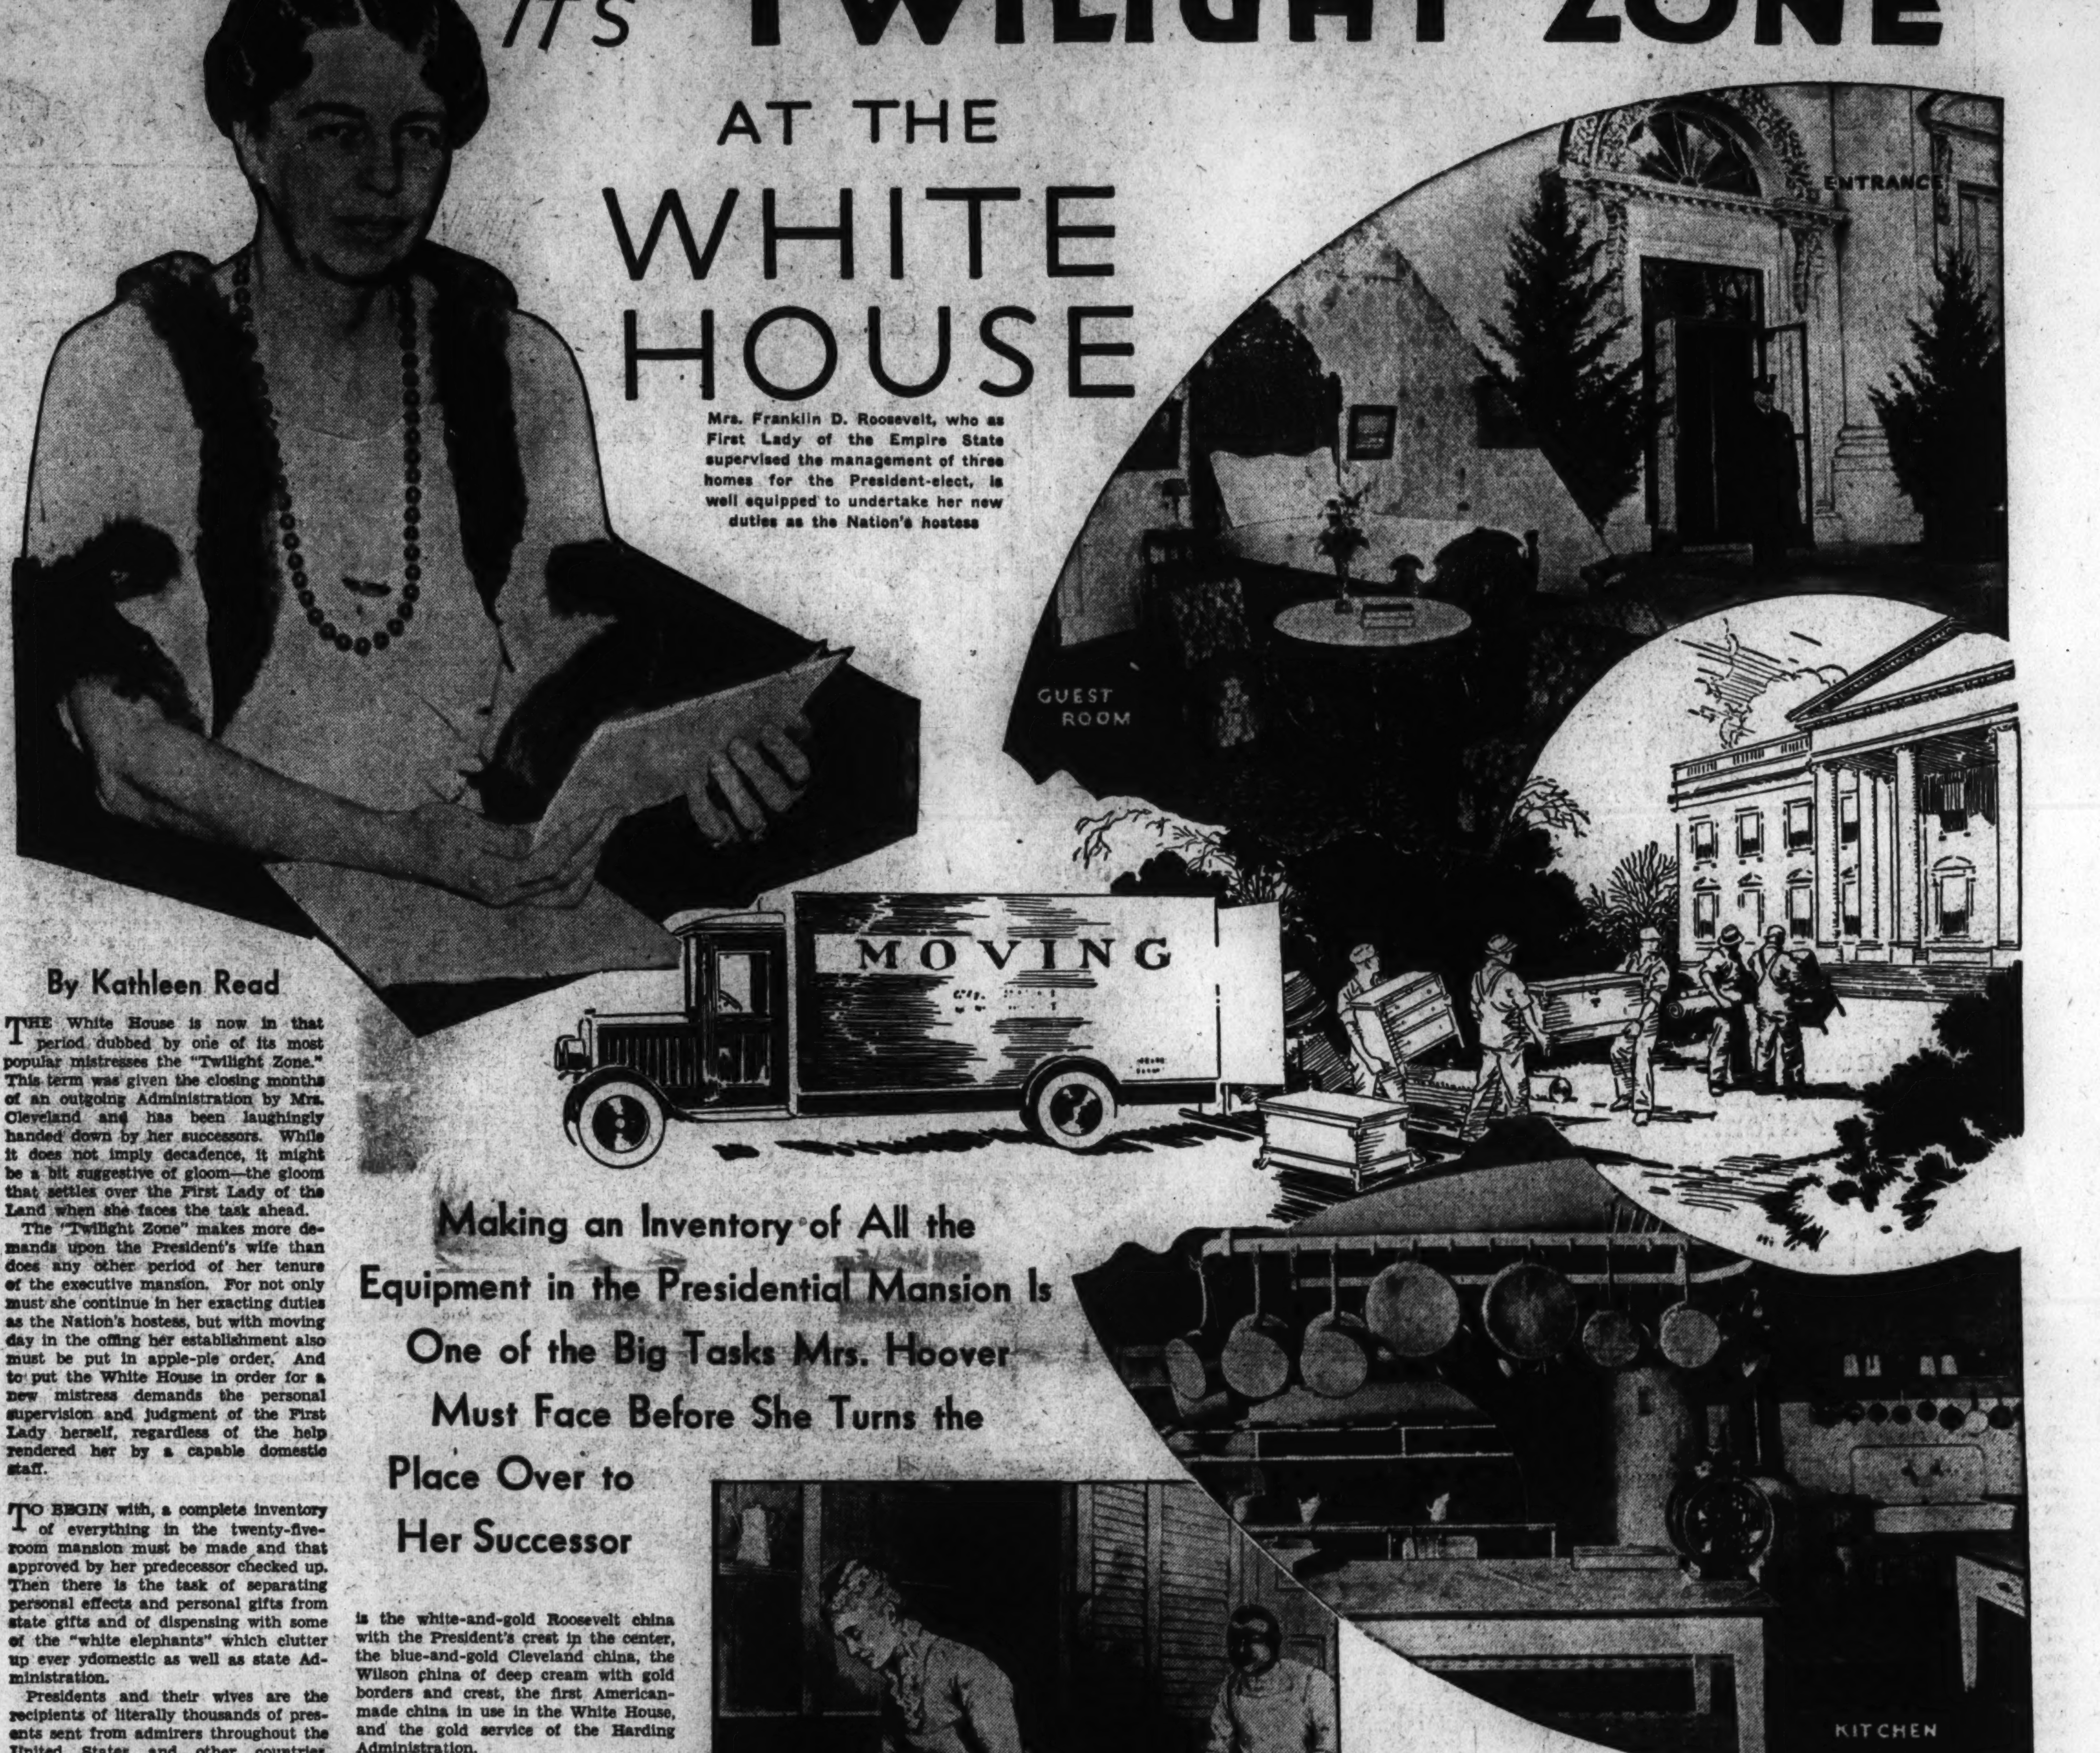
It's "TWILIGHT ZONE" AT THE WHITE HOUSE



Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who as First Lady of the Empire State supervised the management of three homes for the President-elect, is well equipped to undertake her new duties as the Nation's hostess

Making an Inventory of All the Equipment in the Presidential Mansion Is One of the Big Tasks Mrs. Hoover Must Face Before She Turns the Place Over to Her Successor

By Kathleen Read

THE White House is now in that period dubbed by one of its most popular mistresses the "Twilight Zone." This term was given the closing months of an outgoing Administration by Mrs. Cleveland and has been laughingly handed down by her successors. While it does not imply decadence, it might be a bit suggestive of gloom—the gloom that settles over the First Lady of the Land when she faces the task ahead.

The "Twilight Zone" makes more demands upon the President's wife than does any other period of her tenure of the executive mansion. For not only must she continue in her exacting duties as the Nation's hostess, but with moving day in the offing her establishment also must be put in apple-pie order. And to put the White House in order for a new mistress demands the personal supervision and judgment of the First Lady herself, regardless of the help rendered her by a capable domestic staff.

TO BEGIN with, a complete inventory of everything in the twenty-five-room mansion must be made and that approved by her predecessor checked up. Then there is the task of separating personal effects and personal gifts from state gifts and of dispensing with some of the "white elephants" which clutter up ever ydomestic as well as state Administration.

Presidents and their wives are the recipients of literally thousands of presents sent from admirers throughout the United States and other countries. They range all the way from suspenders—of which President Theodore Roosevelt was tendered forty dozen—and shoestrings to gifts of great value. Most of these are bundled up and returned to their donors with a polite note of thanks, as the Presidents of our latter-day Administration are loath to accept gifts that imply obligations of any sort.

But occasionally there is a reason why the gift is not returned. Many are sent anonymously. There is an established ruling that these gifts cannot be given away. Mrs. Hoover has been showered with handicraft of every description from mountaineers and outdoor organizations. Many of these things are unsuited to the White House, she cannot give them away nor may she care to take them to her next home. Each First Lady is faced with the task of clearing out the undesirable "white elephants" for which her Administration is responsible.

Then there are the inventories of the kitchen cabinets, which are as important in the domestic scheme of things at the White House as are presidential Cabinets to the Government. It is an unwritten law that each White House hostess must leave a complete set of china for her successor to start presidential housekeeping on. A complete set of presidential china consists of more than a thousand pieces. What a joy to souvenir collectors would be the dozens of slightly chipped or cracked china which is culled out and destroyed during the "Twilight Zone" inventory, if they were only available. But, alas! nothing that is Government property can be either sold or given away, so these discarded pieces are smashed into bits and dumped into the old Potomac flowing lazily along almost at the White House doorstep.

Perhaps the new First Lady will decide to adopt an entirely different set of china for formal state occasions than that used by her predecessor, and it is entirely within her right to have a new one. At the White House today there are about half a dozen different sets for use upon various occasions when a full state set is not required. There is the white-and-gold Roosevelt china with the President's crest in the center, the blue-and-gold Cleveland china, the Wilson china of deep cream with gold borders and crest, the first American-made china in use in the White House, and the gold service of the Harding Administration.

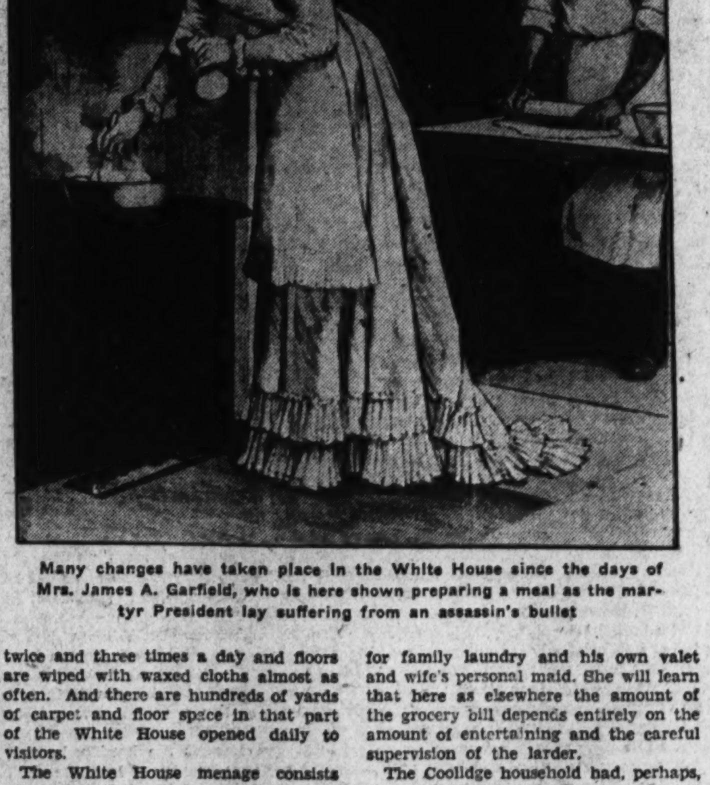
When sets are entirely discarded, several pieces are kept and added to the china museum in the lower corridor, which is visited each year by thousands of tourists. There one may compare the china chosen by every First Lady since Dolly Madison as an interesting indication of her domestic taste.

THERE is one unique event which always characterizes a White House "Twilight Zone." Although entirely unheralded, or indeed unknown outside of the intimacy of the executive mansion, it is an event of great importance to two housekeepers at least. This event is the visit to which the outgoing First Lady invites the incoming First Lady for the express purpose of acquainting her with her new establishment and explaining the intricacies of her approaching domestic problems. Quite as though they were any of the million and one American housewives discussing the accommodations and responsibilities of a furnished residence which one was leaving and the other making ready to occupy—will Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Roosevelt discuss the business of White House housekeeping.

Just what does it mean to become mistress of the most important home in the land? What are its problems? Who pays what bills and how much are they? Where does the family laundry go? Who pays for personal service? For friends visiting over the week-end? Here are some of the findings that will undoubtedly interest American housewives and taxpayers as they do Mrs. Roosevelt.

It takes a staff of 177 people, exclusive of military and naval aides, police and Secret Service, to man the White House. The maintenance of the mansion costs about $135,000 a year. The light bills run between $8500 and $9000 yearly.

It costs $50,000 to keep the White House clean. The tourist who walks along the shining marble corridors probably doesn't stop to think that he is one of an average of a thousand a day doing this same thing, winter and summer. In order to wage a successful battle against the dirt and dust of these feet, all rugs and carpets are gone over twice and three times a day and floors are wiped with waxed cloths almost as often. And there are hundreds of yards of carpet and floor space in that part of the White House opened daily to visitors.



Many changes have taken place in the White House since the days of Mrs. James A. Garfield, who is here shown preparing a meal as the martyr President lay suffering from an assassin's bullet

The White House menage consists of ushers, three cooks, several maids, a head butler, a second man, a pantry man, several chambermaids, house men and cleaners, dishwashers, window-wipers and potato-peelers, gardeners, four chauffeurs and a housekeeper. The first chef draws $1920 a year and his two assistants less.

AS WITH any thrifty housewife, the President's personal housekeeping expenses will doubtless interest Mrs. Roosevelt even more than the above. She will learn that while Uncle Sam pays for all state dinners the President must feed his own family out of his salary. He must also foot the bills for family laundry and his own valet and wife's personal maid. She will learn that here as elsewhere the amount of the grocery bill depends entirely on the amount of entertaining and the careful supervision of the larder.

The Coolidge household had, perhaps, the smallest personal bills of any recent Administration and the Hoovers the largest. From his own personal account Mr. Hoover has employed and provisioned an added coterie of servants as well as done much extensive entertaining. Not since President Roosevelt's time have so many Washingtonians and outside visitors been feted. Mrs. Hoover will doubtless confide in Mrs. Roosevelt, as she has to others, that she seldom knew just how many to expect for luncheon until it was nearly ready to be served, a program which demanded a rather elastic—and expensive—kitchen schedule.

The sum of $2000 a month is considered a very conservative bill for family groceries and entertaining, the incoming First Lady will learn. And also that her four immediate successors had less intricate figuring to struggle with than did Mrs. Taft, whose husband had to include official receptions and state dinners in his personal budget. These expenses are now taken care of out of the President's annual traveling allowance of $25,000.

The Coolidges did away with supper formerly served at receptions and inaugurated the 8 o'clock breakfast of buckwheat cakes, sausage and maple sirup for informal entertaining. Four o'clock tea, "always with chocolate cake," is a cherished custom in the home of the President-elect and doubtless will be transferred to the White House.

Mrs. Taft was the first lady to employ a housekeeper to assist her in the intricate details of domestic management. Prior to this Administration these duties fell to a steward, who called in caterers and outside help for state functions. This gave the White House a more formal and austere atmosphere, besides being more expensive.

THAT the First Lady of the Land may have her accustomed share in catering to the gastronomic favorites of her family, the family chef sends several menus to her room each morning so she may make her choice and offer any suggestion she feels inclined to pass on. The housekeeper confers with her on all occasions and holds a most friendly relation with the White House mistress.

Having been a Governor's lady, the incoming First Lady of the Land will doubtless know that the White House help is fed much the same as servants in any other large home, receiving on their table the staples and vegetables which appear on the family table, but not the same meats and luxuries. It is an invariable rule in White House kitchens that chicken be served the servants every Thursday.

After all of these homy details have been discussed, doubtless with many an amusing little incident that will never reach the light of print thrown in, these two housewives who were friends and shared together many a gay little Sunday night supper during the Wilson Administration will start upon a tour of inspection of the establishment in which they have a common interest.

The White House is officially a twenty-five-room mansion, but if one counts all of the anterooms, room-size closets and corridors, it numbers nearly fifty. It is four stories high, the first floor containing the museums and the second or main floor the state apartments. The family quarters are on the next floor, and what was formerly the attic was converted, during the Coolidge Administration, into additional bedroom and baths.

Everything that the most exacting housekeeper might desire has been installed in the mansion where Abigail Adams complained of the drafts in 1801. The kitchen, for a long time laboring under old-fashioned equipment, is now provided with every electrical labor-saving device, and yet it requires the services of three times the number of servants employed fifty years ago.

Yet in spite of its changing tenantry and personalities directing its destiny, the White House maintains a peculiarly homelike aspect. When Mrs. Roosevelt makes this visit she will find the presidential family quarters more attractive than they have been for a long time. In their varied travels the Hoovers have picked up many beautiful furnishings and ornaments, and many of these were brought to the White House from the S street home four years ago.

It is upon this visit that the incoming First Lady will decide just what is needed from her personal belongings to make the big rooms seem like home to her family. No doubt she will receive the same admonitions from her husband that all housewives receive when moving into a furnished home. "There's no need to haul a lot of stuff around; there is everything here that you need."

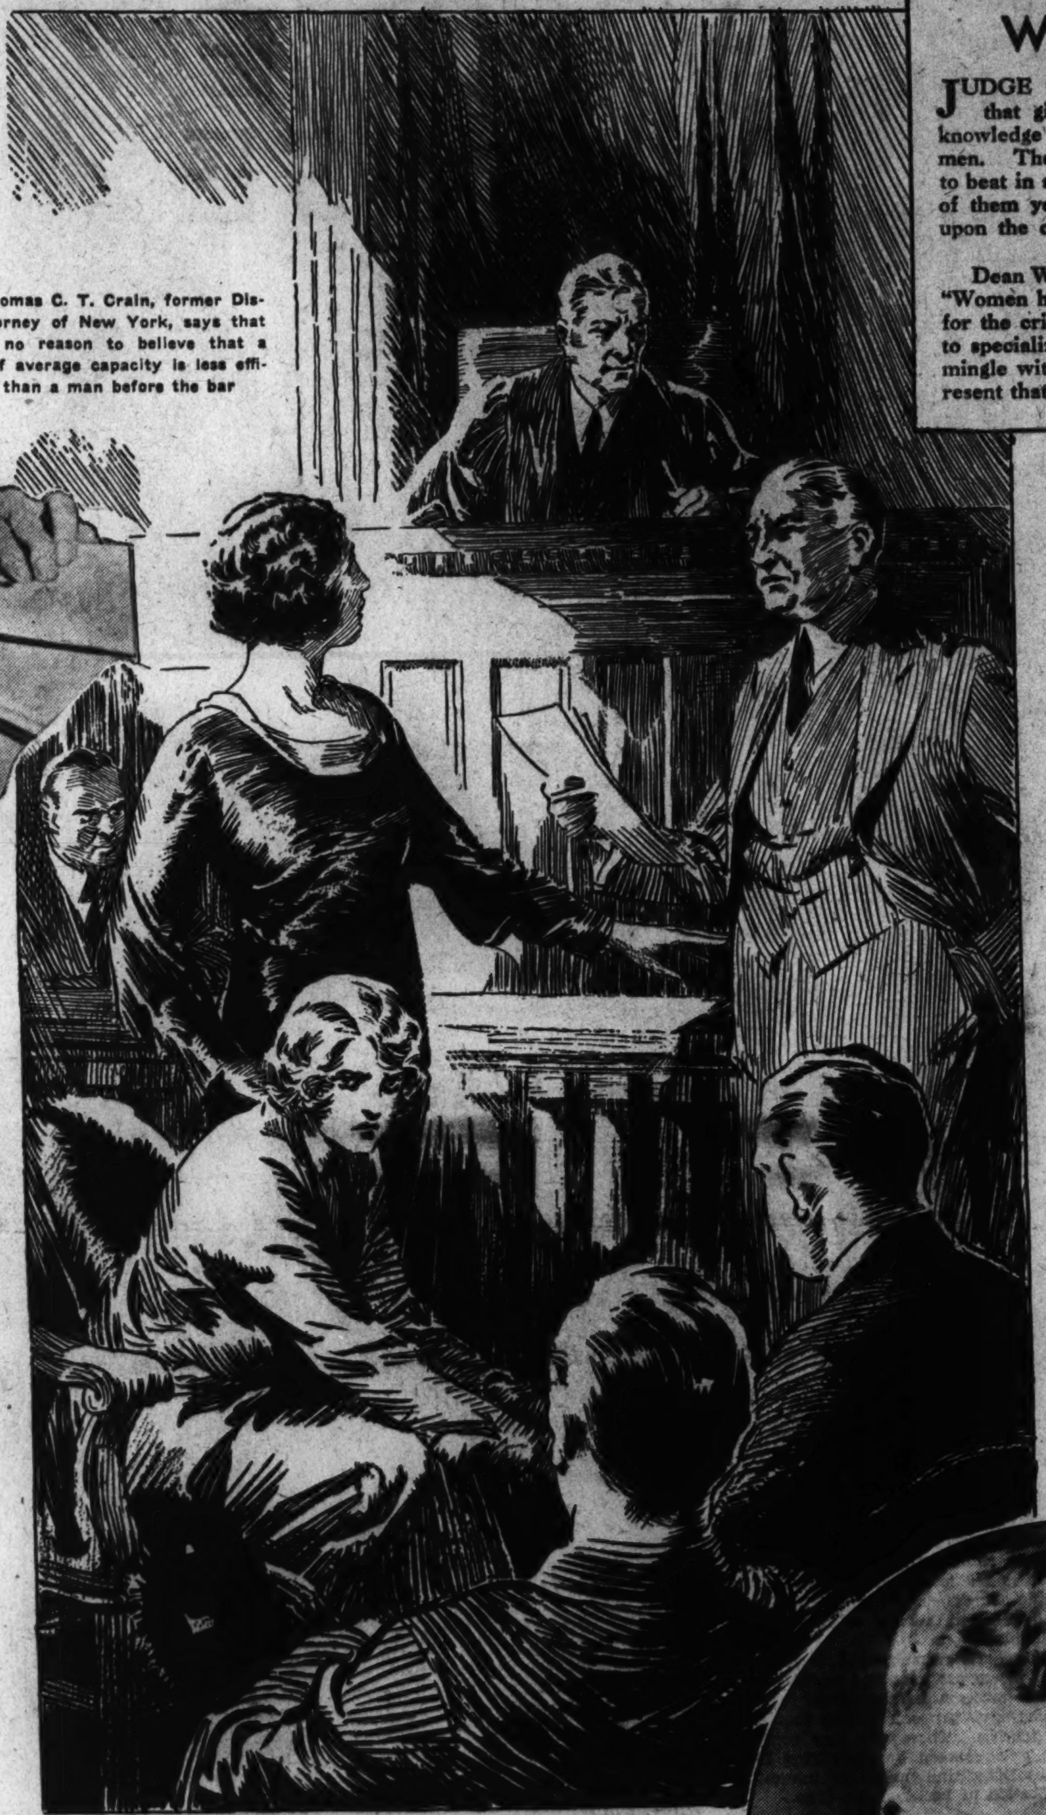
Have "PORTIAS" any effect on CRIMINOLOGY ?

Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, former District Attorney of New York, says that there is no reason to believe that a woman of average capacity is less efficient than a man before the bar



The day is not far off when it will be no unusual sight to see women addressing juries, says Judge Crain, and sitting upon the bench arguing questions of law and fact

Women in Law

JUDGE CRAIN says: "We all know that girl and woman students attain knowledge just as rapidly as do boys and men. They make good lawyers, hard to beat in a trial, but there are not enough of them yet to determine their influence upon the criminal world."

Dean William Payson Richardson says: "Women have not the hardened character for the criminal branch of law. In order to specialize in criminology, women must mingle with the underworld. But women resent that contact."

Well-Known Law School Dean Says Women Attorneys Are Needed, Especially to Help First Offenders Among Her Sex—New York Jurist Holds Her Influence Is Negligible

By Hannah Stein

A YOUNG girl shot her lover in the Bronx of New York several years ago. She was slender, pale and pretty, of the vapid blonde variety; he was large and coarse, and a man of brute force. The evidence proved premeditation. The defendant engaged a woman lawyer to plead her case.

On arrest, the defendant stated that she had shot her lover because he beat her almost every time he came home. He drank, gambled away his money, and then was infuriated with her. The night before the tragedy he beat her so hard that he broke her will and she threatened she would kill him if he struck her again. The following morning she went out and bought a gun and hid it on her person to resort to it if he should use brute force again.

Apparently he didn't take her threat seriously. She might have threatened before. So with complete nonchalance he approached her savagely again. But before he realized what she was doing, she had drawn her gun and fired several successive shots. He died instantly.

By her own allegation, she proved premeditation, didn't she? Premeditation is punishable by the penalty of death in New York. But a frail young girl in the clutches of a brutal man furnished excellent material for a dramatic appeal. She looked so pale and helpless in the courtroom that there was an opportunity for a good lawyer to convince a Judge and jury that she had been held captive by a force more powerful than her own.

True, the evidence showed forethought and design. That had to be overcome by a sequence of dramatic material preceding the crime. The woman lawyer had force of diction, and she did not display any confusion at this almost complete masculine scene: A man in the Judge's chair, twelve men in the jury box, a man prosecuting her client, and nearly all men among the spectators and witnesses.

The woman lawyer kept her poise. She objected to immaterial questions and called upon her best witnesses. She held her nerve. She pleaded for a fair chance. The defendant was acquitted.

Which proves the axiom that a good lawyer can be instrumental in bringing about the acquittal of a guilty person, while a bad one can put an innocent person in jail.

IN RECENT years a comparatively large number of women have gone into the legal profession. However, the proportion of women against men graduating these last few years has been about one-tenth.

But is this type of woman lawyer who keeps her nerve typical? Has a woman of today professional poise? Though a woman's freedom is only a new thing, has she already overcome the shyness of the sheltered woman?

Her male contemporary by and large, on jesting about it, says that there are some professions not suited for women and law is one of them. He says that women are too sentimental and emotional to make good trial lawyers, and they easily are overwhelmed in a mental fight.

He goes on to say: "But we want our women to be sentimental and emotional. That keeps them womanly. A woman's ultimate goal is the career of marriage and the home, anyway; and if she must please us toward that end, she should not despair if she lacks force in her efforts on criminology. If she has any power, he says, let her exercise it in holding down the number of criminals. And the way for her to do it is through her influence over children in motherhood.

BUT Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, District Attorney of New York, who has had considerable occasion to observe women lawyers, first as an attorney himself and then as a Judge, says that there is no reason to believe that a woman of average capacity is less efficient and successful than the average man.

"Primarily, a good lawyer—man or woman—is one who knows law," Judge Crain said. "This knowledge is acquired by study and by reflection of what he studied, and by a well-developed faculty of recollection. And so equipped, the lawyer is in a position to act upon the particular case whether the case be criminal or civil.

"The capable lawyer—man or woman—listens attentively to the facts as communicated, probes all directed and pointed questions and aims in part to make plainer the particulars disclosed, to determine the truth of the statements as made, and in part to ascertain what may be material and yet undisclosed by the client's statement.

"Every competent teacher knows that the capacity of girls and women who study with concentration and perseverance and master the subject studied is equal to that of youth and man. While law schools are attended by a relatively small number of women as compared with men, the ratings obtained by female students are as good as those of the men. And after a patient and careful investigation of these facts there is no reason to believe that the woman of average capacity is less efficient and successful than the average man."

Judge Crain, who is a slender man with an appearance of extreme refinement and reserve, sat at an imposing mahogany desk and gave the subject considerable thought and weighed his opinions carefully in his mind before he uttered these statements.

Reserve is his heritage. From his mother's ancestors he inherits the quiet and reserve of the Pilgrims who came to America in the Mayflower; his father's ancestors were Revolutionary men, and through generations of legal practice in the family beginning with his great-grandfather, Dr. Rufus Crain, who served as Lay Judge of the old Court of Common Pleas in Herkimer County, New York, Judge Thomas C. T. Crain comes by his sense of quiet force naturally.

"A gracious, womanly woman," he continued, "one who is courteous, self-assured, with a pleasing manner and forceful diction, is invariably a formidable opponent. The real handicap under which she labors today springs from the relatively small number of women who practice law. But the day undoubtedly will come when it will be no unusual sight not only to see women addressing juries and arguing appeals, but also sitting upon a bench and arguing questions of law and fact. That day is not far off."

Whether numbers will have a salient effect upon the legal profession, Judge Crain would not say. He only smiled significantly and implied that that was about as much as he would say about a woman's influence on criminology. In his opinion, the average woman was as good as the average man. But on the question whether better men lawyers had formidable opponents in equally capable women lawyers, he acknowledged the query by adjusting his pince-nez glasses and smiling again.

In the consensus of popular opinion there is need of a good criminal woman lawyer. She may be a good influence among women criminals, especially first offenders. She knows the psychology of women, and she can get closer to the defendant and appeal for a confession the details of which may have much to do with the case.

The woman criminal may be self-conscious before a man, even if he be her own attorney, and withhold information which a woman can only tell to another woman. A man may not even understand.

THEN why do not more women out of the 10 per cent who come out of law schools every year specialize in criminology?

In the opinion of Dr. William Payson Richardson, dean of the Brooklyn Law School of the St. Lawrence University, a woman of respectability will find it revolting to her sensibilities to mingle freely with criminals.

"Women haven't the hardened character for that branch of law," he said. "In order to specialize in criminology, the lawyer, be it man or woman, must mingle with the underworld, become their adviser and friend, and delve into the operations of the criminal mind.

"But women, as a rule, haven't that contact, from choice, with that low stratum. They resent contact with the underworld. Those at the bar have high ideals. They are honest for the most part and they aim to retain their standards of refinement.

"Consequently, a woman's influence on criminology is negligible. And it all resolves itself to an objection for one of refined taste to mingle with hardened criminals. A woman, no matter what she sets out to do professionally, is essentially a woman, and no type of work can alter that state of mind."

Dean Richardson also is of the opinion that a woman may have some sway over another woman, particularly if the defendant is only a newcomer in vice.

But if there be one who will overlook her own tastes for refinement and steel herself for the benefit of humanity, what opportunity has she for a hearing, since men have covered that field almost exclusively?

"Her opportunity comes through a single case," he said, "and she may find it not by soliciting a client through her office, but by submitting her name to the presiding Judge with the information that she holds herself available to defend a criminal if he should explain in court that he or she was too poor to engage an attorney of his or her own.

"Many a lawyer had his lucky break that way. He might not have earned any money by it; yet, if he succeeded in an acquittal, friends and relatives might have got together and collected a purse to give him a fee. If he didn't get any money, it was good investment anyway. An opportunity to appear as a trial lawyer and win a case is excellent publicity."

ANOTHER factor occurred to the mind: Is a woman lawyer's appearance of material importance in the courtroom, and has it any emotional effect upon criminology?

That a woman's appearance can sway a Judge and jury has been proved from time to time. That is, it has been proved through the defendant herself.

One of the most notorious cases where a woman swayed a jury through sex appeal was the much-talked-of Betty Inch murder trial about a dozen years ago.

Betty Inch's lawyer, William B. Fallen, was still an obscure counselor-at-law. But he was bright and keen and alert. He was determined to exercise every effort in behalf of his client's acquittal.

On making a careful study of his case he noticed that Betty had a pair of very shapely legs, Ah, that would be excellent material to capitalize. He would have his client exhibit them.

She wore stockings which were neither too heavy nor too sheer. Just sufficiently closely woven to look refined. And at no time and in no manner or gesture should she indicate consciousness of her legs. The idea was to veil his scheme as cautiously as he could.

But the newspapermen, with their keen news sense, detected a few veiled glances from the jury box. The headlines in the next issue glared with references to Betty's appearance, and with insinuations about a jury which was more attentive to that than to the evidence in the case.

The presiding Judge realized what was happening through the newspaper, and he took cognizance of the fact by building up a fence between the witness chair and the jury box. But by that time Betty Inch already had won the hearts and the sympathy of the men. The jury acquitted her. And William B. Fallen, with his trick which he frankly disclosed later on, sprang into fame overnight. This is the effect of a woman's appearance in the courtroom.

All of which leads to a conclusion that you can answer the question, "Have 'Portias' any effect on criminology?" as you best determine after you have digested the opinions of Judge Crain and Dean Richardson.

"They Are Like Highballs; Some Men Can Hold Them and Some Cannot"—But After All, She Cannot Put an Athlete Over if He Does Not Have the Stuff

The domesticated Jack Sharkey, present heavyweight champion, and his wife spend a quiet moment at Miami Beach

By Jack Kofoed

IT HAS become a habit in this sentimental age for successful men to indicate that they would have fallen short of success had it not been for the help and inspiration of their wives. A few inconoclasts have refused to subscribe to this tradition, but they are regarded with a jaundiced gaze. It has become almost sacrilegious for the married male to admit that he can take a step forward without the assistance of a helpmate.

This is quite as untrue as it would be to say that the advance woman has made in commerce and the arts is due to the help of man. Mostly we stand on our own feet. If we can't, there is little hope of winning through.

THE question as to whether a wife is a help or a hindrance to the athlete is no small one to those who have their hundreds of thousands invested in professional sport.

John McGraw, former manager of the New York Giants, who had mostly married men on his payroll, is inclined to shy away from too detailed an explanation of his feelings on the subject.

"It's a good idea for the harum-scarum kid to get married," said McGraw, "but he ought to do it right after the season ends. That gives him five or six months to get back to normal. I've had these honeymooners with me before, and half the time they don't know who we're playing. About taking wives on road trips with a baseball team—no and no! They get squabbling between themselves and the first thing you know drag John and Pete and Harry into it—and the foundations for a nice little civil war are laid then and there."

Wives! Ask the man who owns one!

Now * * * when I was in Scotland two years ago I saw another example.

Dr. Stout teed up his ball. Behind his back loomed the gray stone house of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club. Before him stretched the lush green fairways, bordered on the right by yellow gorse and the restless sea; to the left by a row of sedate hotels and old, old homes. Stout had been the English champion. He is one of the longest hitters in the game—the only man aside from old Ted Blackwell who ever drove the eighteenth green on this historic St. Andrews course. The dentist very decidedly wanted to win the British amateur championship that was just getting under way. His opponent in this first-round match was not particularly dangerous, and everything seemed auspicious.

Mrs. Stout followed her husband and his rival down the first fairway. The doctor was obviously irritated by her presence. His scowl was eloquent of the fact that he believed her a jinx and a hoodoo, but the lady followed quite placidly. It did not matter to her that her lord and master was upset. If he was, it was merely a silly superstition that should not be coddled.

A good many wives are like that. Mamma knows best. Though Stout tried to bury himself in the match, he could not suppress the irritation that seized upon him. It was one of his pet superstitions that he was certain to lose if his wife followed him. His putting became erratic, while his opponent dropped 'em from all corners of the green, and the upshot of it was that the dentist was eliminated from the tournament then and there. Afterward he walked quite frostily back to his hotel, and these two whom God had joined together spoke no more to each other that day.

ARE wives really of any help at all in the sports world?

Jack Kearns, that shrewd, cold manager of fighting men, will answer with an emphatic "No!"

He and Jack Dempsey traveled from the free-lunch counters of cheap barrooms to the heavyweight championship of the world and several million dollars.

Then Dempsey became enamored of the exotic Estelle Taylor. Even before they were married Estelle gave Jack advice that was contrary to the considered judgments of Mr. Kearns. The latter did everything in his power to break off the match, and, when he failed, the Kearns-Dempsey friendship foundered on the rock that has ruined many similar ones.

Estelle has no liking for the business that made her then husband wealthy and famous. She had never seen him go raging into action with those terrible fists of his, and never wanted to.

After Gene Tunney's hooks and jabs had taken the championship from the leg-weary Man Mauler in the rain-drenched Philadelphia stadium, Estelle had tears in her eyes and a smile on her lips when she put her arms around Jack's neck.

"It doesn't matter, Ginsberg," she said, calling him by the nickname his intimates use. "Nothing matters very much so long as you aren't hurt—and still love me."

Dempsey's sore lips parted in a grin, and he hugged her. That was enough for him. If it hadn't been you could put him down as a very hard man to please.

THERE are wives of other fighters who cannot bear to watch their menfolk struggle, yet cheerfully help to bear the burden in other ways. Mrs. Jack Sharkey is one. Mrs. Pete Latzo, when a bride of only a few weeks, locked herself in her room and prayed feverishly all the time her Peter was winning the welterweight championship from Mickey Walker.

Some women are wrapped with enthusiastic wonder in their menfolk's work.

Years ago at Carson City, when Bob Fitzsimmons won the heavyweight championship of the world from Jim Corbett, his wife was at the ringside cheering him on. She had all the violent partisanship of a Viking's mate—this beautiful, shapely woman, who had been Rose Julian, slack-wire artist.

Her face flushed with excitement, she was on her feet continually, dodging and striking with her man, and her voice rose above that of the roaring crowd; "Kill him, Bob, oh, kill him, kill him! Another to the stomach. * * * Now to the jaw, the jaw, Bob, the jaw!"

And when the fight was over and Fitzsimmons, the Cornish blacksmith, had been crowned champion of the world she pressed her lips to his in sheer adoration. No fighting man ever had a wife whose ardent spirit urged him on to increasing heights more hotly than Ruby Robert's.

Some wives, though not very many, it must be admitted, go down into the arena with their men, but this is of debatable value. Mrs. Bobby Walthour was one who did. A quarter of a century ago her husband was one of the great professional cyclists.

She stayed at the track, cooked his meals and looked after his physical and mental welfare with greater solicitude than his trainers would have done. The Saturday night he rode to victory in one of the most sensational six-day races Madison Square Garden ever saw, she sat by his bunk with their 1-year-old baby in her arms and cheered him on.

In Paris during one jam Bobby was knocked through the railing at the top of the track and fell to the cement floor twenty feet below. The doctors insisted that life had left the battered, broken body, but Mrs. Bobby fiercely refused to believe it. She helped the men of medicine work over him until the remaining spark was fanned into flame.

Walthour lived, and who can say his survival was not at least partly due to his wife's inflexible will? Certainly, his outlook was quite different at all times from that of the English dentist, Stout.

But all wives are not a help to their husbands even when they mean to be.

I have in mind Rollie Naylor, a fine but unfortunate pitcher with the Philadelphia Athletics in a day when the Athletics were the doormats of the American League. Naylor married a pretty concert singer, named Gertrude Donavan. Her husband's success was the uppermost thought in her mind. She hoped for it more than anything else in the world. But Mrs. Naylor was a nervous woman. She found it hard to control herself when her man was in a tight spot and his support had cracked wide open. More than once she became hysterical.

That preyed on Naylor's mind. He wanted to win for himself and the team, but most of all he wanted to gain victories for his wife. He tried too hard, and when you "press" you lose control and confidence. He had to win if his wife was to be happy—but somehow or other he could not do it consistently. I have never known two persons who loved each other more or were more contented in each other's company, but there can be no doubt that Rollie would have been a more successful pitcher had he been a single man.

BABE RUTH had been married for less than a month when the Yankees started on their first Western trip of the season. His wife accompanied him. In the days prior to this marital adventure the big fellow had played cards for high stakes. Pinochle with Doc Woods and Pat Collins, bridge with Mike Gazella and Lou Gehrig, poker with Bob Meusel, hearts with Cy Moore—it didn't matter so long as there were sizable sums in the balance.

But this night, as the boys shed their coats, put on their slippers and settled down to the serious business of the pasteboards, as the train thundered over the rails, Babe sauntered down the aisle.

"What's the limit?" he asked.

"Well, you big stiff," said Gehrig politely, "there's an opening here for a bridge game at a quarter of a cent a point. You probably won't be interested in that."

"Wait a minute," said the champion home-run hitter. He ambled to the drawing room, where the queen of the Ruthian domain was secluded with a book and a box of chocolates. In a moment he was back again.

"O. K., I can play," he said, "but I have to quit at 11:30. The missus says so"

Two minutes before the deadline Babe laid down his cards.

"Gotta obey orders," he said.

Imagine that from a playboy who lost $20,000 in one month on the Havana racetrack, who loved to stay up all night and scatter money to the four winds.

There's a fellow like Jack Sharkey, for instance. The boastful Boston sailor, it seems to me, is just the sort of chap who would make a splurge regardless of cost were he loose of the matrimonial bands. Nothing pleases him so much as the limelight. He must have people talking about him. It is not impossible that he would have turned into a Harry Greb, who did his road work in the Broadway night clubs and thought nothing of staying up until 5 o'clock in the morning of the day he was to fight.

Greb was married, too, but was never home long enough to be at least partly subdued by conjugal duties. Sharkey has been domesticated. His principal interests lie in his wife and youngsters.

Gather all these examples together. What do you find? This—that wives are like highballs; some men can hold them and others can't.

MARY PICKFORD Would make MARRIAGE More DIFFICULT

Famous Screen Star Suggests That Young Couples Should Be Compelled to Report Frequently to a Selected Tribunal During the First Year of Their Married Life

Pickford Philosophy of Marriage

I DON'T believe that any one person should be "boss." Sometimes the husband is wiser; sometimes the wife.

Women are more easily annoyed by trifles than are men. In vital things it is usually the woman who stands firm and will not let herself be moved.

I think a woman's love is a greater compliment to a man today than it ever was, for years ago her love was a meal ticket sometimes. Today she has rights. She is free. Now, if she loves a man, that man should feel highly honored.

—Mary Pickford.

By Alice L. Tildesley

THE value of now and here is the real secret of happiness, according to Mary Pickford.

"America's Sweetheart," looking deliciously old-fashioned in hoop - skirted black velvet, the primness of a round white collar gayly contradicted by a perky scarlet bow, smiled a little wistful smile.

"I'm just learning this," she told me, as we sat together in her portable dressing room. "We could all be happier if we would only take advantage of today and not wait until we can go to Paris, or down to the beach, or until we're married, or Jack comes home, or the children are a little older.

"Most of us are such slaves to location or to circumstance! If we were somewhere else, things would be different! If this and that would happen, or hadn't happened, we could be happy.

"We don't try to see what is amusing or entertaining or interesting in the place we find ourselves or the circumstances that enfold us, and get the best there is to be had from them."

Her hair, which seems the only truly golden hair in Hollywood, was curled in tiny ringlets that peeped from beneath a saucy black velvet hat and nestled in her neck. Becoming. Intriguing. Romantic.

"DO YOU think it's romantic because it's not of today?" she wondered.

"It seems to me that we always think of romance as something that isn't here—like happiness. The past looks romantic; the future has a rosy glow, but today is just something we are rushing through to get to tomorrow, or something we are dreaming through with our eyes turned back to yesterday.

"Some one has said that the scandals of today are the romances of tomorrow, and I shouldn't be surprised if there was something in that.

"I can imagine that while the great love stories of long ago were being enacted, the neighbors were raising their eyebrows or looking askance or refraining from making calls on the two involved. There was usually a barrier between them—a marriage, a difference in rank, another person's happiness—and their contemporaries failed to recognize them as two great lovers whose passion would go down in history.

"Perhaps the great love stories of today won't be discovered until another generation comes along. We don't know that they are wonderful now.

"As for the hat," she twitched it farther forward over a big brown eye, "I shouldn't be surprised if it started a new style. It's really a very provocative hat!

"I believe that clothes seem romantic only if they approach the normal, so that their beauty is lasting. I don't think short skirts will ever be considered romantic, nor the ugly long waists we used to wear. Short hair might be so considered by future generations, because it conforms to the shape of the head. Even some of the funny little things of today might seem picturesque, because they have a certain beauty.

"But to us only periods that show normal waistlines, flowing lines either in the wide hoop skirt, the sloping shoulder, the graceful Grecian robe—the Empire style, because that revealed lovely figures—are beautiful. We don't like periods when hairdresses were frightfully exaggerated, as in the Merry Widow coiffure. That's grotesque.

"Sleeves may be large, but they should have small, neat cuffs at the wrist." She exhibited the neat wristlets that finished the white organdie of her own sleeves. Her hands looked prettier than ever beneath them.

Some one knocked at the dressing-room door, and a young man followed the knock, leading a girl in gray after him. The Chaliffes, Mary's cousins.

"Just felt that I couldn't go home without saying good-by," beamed the young man. "We've had a good time and want to thank you for all your trouble and give you this as a token of our appreciation."

He produced a dilapidated feather duster, like a magician producing a white rabbit.

"How sweet!" cried Mary, receiving it as if it were orchids. She turned to her maid: "Put it in water, please. I can't tell you how delighted I am, Sonny!"

Dimples came dancing and lingered after she stepped out to continue tests she had been making for costumes and make-up for a new picture.

Leslie Howard, looking romantically handsome in plum-colored coat and stock, rode onto the big stage on a high-wheeled bicycle, dismounting gracefully at Mary's side.

"My husband—for the picture——" said Mary.

They began to walk back and forth before the cameras, turning this way and that, looking up, then down, that all angles of costumes might be recorded on film and so inspected critically.

"This is my best side," Mary confided gayly, pointing to her left profile; "the other's my managerial side, I always think."

"And this is my best side—if I have one," returned Leslie, indicating his right profile. "Isn't it fortunate? Now we can look at each other with real enthusiasm."

They laughed together.

SPEAKING of matrimony, Miss Pickford said: "Every marriage is a secret between two people. Only the two concerned really know the inside story. Each marriage is an individual problem and sometimes—oh, very often!—the real story is very different from what the observer sees.

"Women are more spiritual than men, so it is up to them to preserve marriage. Women are given greater fortitude to bear pain, but men have greater temptation and sometimes they haven't the strength to overcome it.

"I think marriage should be made more difficult, so that people would appreciate it when it was achieved," Mary resumed.

"Young married people should have to report for the first year or so to some wise older person, to some tribunal selected; they should have to hear lectures on the problems of marriage and listen to advice on them. They should have a place—or a person—where they could take their individual tangles in confidence and get help in unsnarling them.

"Not a preachy sort of thing, but alive and up to date, where real help and not mere platitudes would be given those who came for assistance.

"Do you know, I think it would be a good thing if people who become engaged, or who wish to marry, could be forced to travel together, properly chaperoned, of course, before the ceremony. Travel is bound to bring them face to face with situations where swift decisions must be made, where they must see one another under unfavorable circumstances, when they are tired, cross, not looking or feeling their best, where the unexpected happens and something must be done about it, or when discomfort must be endured.

"These things will all have to be faced after marriage. Why not face them beforehand when the two can watch each other's reactions and decide whether or not this person is the one person with whom such difficulties can be faced for life?

"Travel would be a good test for people with means.

"For those less fortunate, perhaps a camping trip might serve as well."

"Mr. Fairbanks would like to speak to you," read a message. Douglas Fairbanks was at the moment in Bombay, so Mary Pickford Fairbanks looked slightly startled.

BEYOND us we saw a slim, dark man waiting. He had come to ask Miss Pickford to head the famous Rose Parade in Pasadena. After he had explained his business and Mary had graciously accepted the honor, she asked him his name.

"Not really? They told me 'Mr. Fairbanks,' but I thought they were joshing. And he looks something like Douglas, too. No relation, isn't that amazing?" asked Mary as she returned to our discussion of marriage.

"I don't believe that any one person should be 'boss' in a family. I think each member of the family—husband, wife and children — when they come of age sufficient to merit consideration of their views, should have a voice in important decisions.

"Sometimes one is wiser; sometimes the other. Sometimes the man is in a position to judge a question; sometimes the woman has had better opportunity to discover the answer. At moments one is in better physical health than the other and so better able to assume responsibility.

"Women are more easily annoyed by trifles than are men. In vital things it is usually the woman who stands firm and will not let herself be moved.

"It is too bad that we women fly off the handle so quickly at small annoyances. We miss so much, and often spoil what could be beautiful.

"I think a woman's love is a greater compliment to a man today than it ever was, for years ago her love was a meal ticket sometimes. She could not get a divorce when she wasn't pleased, because divorce meant ostracism.

"A husband might beat her, starve her, bring other women right into the house with her, be cruel to her children, embarrass her before her friends, and she must accept his treatment; even if she won a divorce, with the best cause in the world, she was an outcast from society.

"TODAY she has rights. She can go out and earn her own livelihood. She is free. Now, if she loves a man, she is paying him a real compliment.

"Men don't like to hear women gossip. I think at least 90 per cent of men hate to hear the women they love talk scandal. It lowers a woman in her lover's eyes. He likes to think of her as something spiritual, something too far above him to give tongue to evil. That's an ideal and a very sweet one. I think we should heed it.

"Fatherhood should be as wonderful as motherhood, but it isn't always. The child reflects both his parents and he should have good and beautiful reflections from each of them.

"You know, we all have varied facets. Each contact brings out a different one. We reflect one another. At this moment, I reflect you and you reflect me. I am the person that I seem to be to you.

"Another good thing about women going out into the world," Mary went on, after another busy interval, "is that they have learned to value other women.

"Women used to be suspicious of one another. They didn't know how to be friends.

"We had a big house at home, and until my father passed on, my mother was well taken care of; but after that she found herself with no money and three small children, so she had to take in boarders. She couldn't go out to work. That wasn't done by nice women. She must stay home, no matter how much harder that might be.

"Women who stay at home have no chance to know women in other walks of life; they don't meet and exchange viewpoints. Today we go out and meet our sisters, in the fashion that used to give men the opportunities for friendship. We know what other women are, what they stand for and what they struggle for, and we like them.

"We get our values mixed today because we try to get too much. We bring the 'get' attitude into marriage, rather than the 'give' attitude; and not to marriage alone, but to all other relations of life.

"Romance is always valued at par. So is happiness. I've told you the secret of happiness. Don't you agree?"

Forced Landing

The "I. Q." Test May Serve Its Purpose in the Army, but It's No Good in the Game of Love by

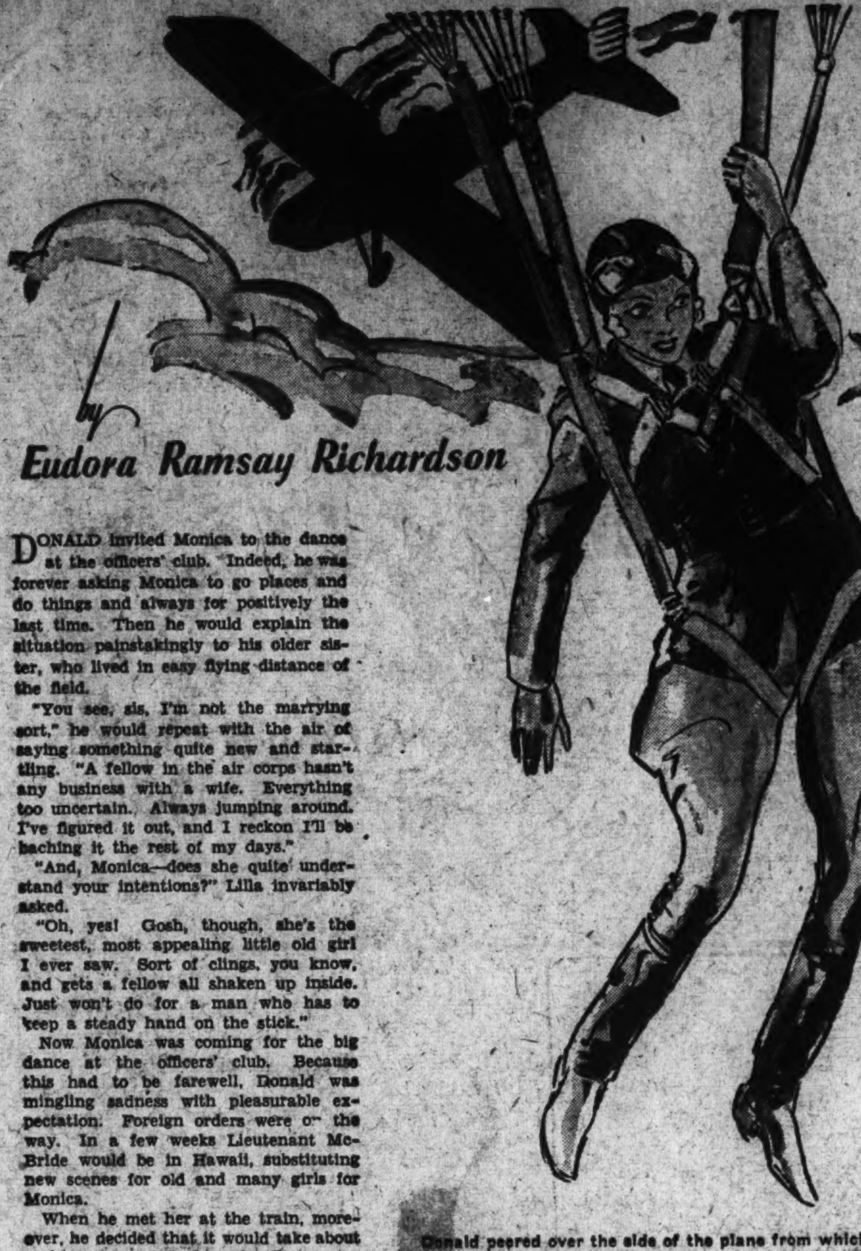
Eudora Ramsay Richardson



Donald peered over the side of the plane from which Monica had jumped. The parachute had opened. Monica was floating through space

DONALD invited Monica to the dance at the officers' club. Indeed, he was forever asking Monica to go places and do things and always for positively the last time. Then he would explain the situation painstakingly to his older sister, who lived in easy flying distance of the field.

"You see, sis, I'm not the marrying sort," he would repeat with the air of saying something quite new and startling. "A fellow in the air corps hasn't any business with a wife. Everything too uncertain. Always jumping around. I've figured it out, and I reckon I'll be baching it the rest of my days."

"And, Monica—does she quite understand your intentions?" Lilla invariably asked.

"Oh, yes! Gosh, though, she's the sweetest, most appealing little old girl I ever saw. Sort of clings, you know, and gets a fellow all shaken up inside. Just won't do for a man who has to keep a steady hand on the stick."

Now Monica was coming for the big dance at the officers' club. Because this had to be farewell, Donald was mingling sadness with pleasurable expectation. Foreign orders were on the way. In a few weeks Lieutenant McBride would be in Hawaii, substituting new scenes for old and many girls for Monica.

When he met her at the train, moreover, he decided that it would take about a thousand to take her place.

"Gosh, honey," he greeted, "you look like a coupla billion dollars to me. It certainly does inflate a man to introduce you to his friends."

"Glad to know what makes you that way," Monica smiled.

Her teeth were even and white and just the right size. Her blonde hair had a way of catching the sunlight even on dark days, and her eyes were golden brown to match that chic little suit she was wearing. A perfectly beautiful brown-eyed blonde, Don had written, describing Monica to his mother, who entertained toward her only son a maternal fixation that Don was not above annoying.

"Mother's terribly upset," Lilla had warned. "She thinks you can't withstand golden hair and brown eyes."

"I can't, when I'm exposed to them," Don had groaned. "That's why the officers' dance is to be good-by."

SO LIEUTENANT McBRIDE clutched Monica's suitcase with one hand and Monica's arm with the other and tried to strengthen the defenses he was building against her. His blue roadster was waiting at the curb. Though he had spent the morning polishing the enamel and strapping down the top to make it look as sporty as possible, he was sorry it wasn't new and more expensive so that its appearance might be in keeping with Monica's.

"Every time I look at you," said Donald as he slipped beneath the wheel and peeped across his flimsy defenses, "I'm sorry for the lucky dog who will some day be buying your clothes. The very thought makes my first looey's pay look like 50 cents."

Monica's smile was hard to bear. She ought to be saddened by the situation. Instead, she was merely flippant.

"I was tempted to dress like a frump just to please you," she said.

"If you had!" moaned Donald. "It's really your looks I'm in love with. That's why I'm not asking you to marry me. I'd hate to take on something I can't afford to keep up."

"Be cheerful, darling! You'll probably find a little native on the outskirts of Honolulu who'll look pretty in a bunch of grass that doesn't cost a thing. In the meantime, I hope you'll like the frock I'll be wearing tonight. Mother insisted—so I got it. You see, mother doesn't know how you and I feel about marrying on a shoestring. She's awfully fond of you. She wants my last stand to be good. Funny, isn't it, how mothers always want to be rid of their daughters and how they hold onto their sons?"

"If you're not in a hurry to go to your hostess, let's ride. Mother wrote me the other day, inquiring about your brain. Have you one? I hadn't noticed."

Monica nodded brightly.

"Hm-hm!" she said. "But tell her I haven't had to use it around her son."

"And let her interpret that I'm providing all that's needed?"

"Yes, your mother would."

"Now, see here. My mother's all right."

"I know, but too motherly for your good. She's taught you that a woman's something to lean on, and she's robbed you of confidence in yourself as a prop for somebody else."

"No fair cheating, Monica. You've been getting letters from Lilla."

"No, honest! I thought that up all by myself. It occurred to me the last time I used my brain."

"Well, don't use it again. The thing doesn't work."

Donald turned the car into a lane and pulled on the brake. He drew out of his pocket a formidable-looking sheet of paper.

"Mind taking a little mental test?" he asked. "Please don't pass. The lower the grade, the happier I'll be."

For just a second Donald thought that Monica was angry. Then she laughed and demanded a pencil.

"It would be fun if you could trap the world's worst moron and exhibit her, wouldn't it?"

With the pencil poised above the first blank, she studied the questionnaire.

"Cross out the name that doesn't belong in the following classifications," she read. "Oh, really, Don, I like this. It's such a new experience. Let's see—Edison, Marconi, Dante and Darwin. I'll have to pass that one up."

"They are all exactly alike," she wrote in the margin.

"I can't do the next either—Shakespeare, Caruso, Tennyson and Shelley."

"All did just the same thing," was the notation.

"Carrie Chapman Catt, Carrie Nation, Susan B. Anthony and Maude Adams. That one's got me, too."

"I don't know the difference between a reformer and a performer," she scribbled.

"Lindbergh, Byrd, Al Capone and Columbus. Well, if they're not all explorers, I'm beaten. I'll skip that group if you don't mind."

If he didn't mind! Donald was already immensely relieved. Thousands of miles away in Hawaii, he would find comfort in believing that Monica was nothing more than a beautiful dumbbell. As unperturbed as though she were doing quite well, Monica had passed on to her next ordeal.

"Artists," she had written in her round young hand, "Briggs, King, Sidney Smith. Creations—Mr. and Mrs., Skeezix, Andy Gump." Then at the bottom of the page she added, "I have neither asked nor received help from the mental giant beside me—Monica Pemberton herself."

Donald thought that she was looking exactly like a naughty child as she folded the paper and held it toward her.

"Will you promise me a reward for all the trouble I've taken?" she asked.

"Anything," Donald agreed. "I'd even go so far as to kiss you here in broad daylight, if that's it."

"Don't worry. I won't be so exacting. I just want you to send this questionnaire to your mother so she'll see what you're being spared."

So Donald promised as he pocketed the paper. Since he had determined to remain a celibate, it didn't matter a great deal what his mother might think of Monica.

THAT night, however, Donald's fine resolution was in danger of weakening. He tried to be angry with Monica. She was taking an unfair advantage of him by being so lovely. That yellow chiffon dress, with the brilliant shoulder straps that were a trifle bluish, certainly came from Paris. No one but a French designer could have created anything so exquisite. No one but Monica could have realized in advance what that shade would do to the color of her hair. She had no business to be so beautiful that her escort scarcely got a look-in on the dances. So a great deal of the time Donald stood in the stag line and fumed. He wanted to scream to those other officers that Monica Pemberton belonged to him. Yet, if she were his wife, nothing like that would be accomplished. Not in the army! Donald was exceedingly unhappy.

"Invite me to your wedding," he said as he put Monica on the train the next day. "I won't be able to come, but I'll send you a souvenir from the fairy isles."

Monica's gayety was still impervious.

"You're a darling to be so thoughtful," she said. "And I want to contribute a string of beads to the trousseau of the little savage who won't need any clothes. I've had a gorgeous time, Don. It's been awfully nice—knowing you."

Then the conductor called "All aboard"—and Monica ran up the Pullman steps, where she stood smiling and waving as though a tragedy were not being enacted. Donald waved, but he did not smile. He verily believed that as long as he lived he would never smile again. Morosely he drove to the officers' club, where he planted himself in a comfortable chair to do a great deal of thinking.

That afternoon Lieutenant McBride's orders came through. He would sail from San Francisco in three weeks. Because he intended to drive to the Coast, there would be a short leave and then the long, grilling journey across the continent.

"You may take a ship for your good-by tour," said the commanding officer. "I guess you'll want to see the family and that pretty girl who was here last night."

She was taking an unfair advantage of him by looking so lovely. He knew he could not hold her long in that crowd

Later he knew that it was good to be at home again. Father was proud of his successes, of the speed record he had broken, of the commendation that had come from superior officers. Lilla was gay and less big-sisterly than usual. Whatever impulse mother had to be tearful was held in check remarkably well.

"So you're really not going to marry Monica before going?" Lilla asked.

Whereupon Donald withdrew behind his defenses.

"Can't do it, sis," he said, launching upon the arguments he had used to himself and frequently to Lilla. "I love her aplenty, but I've seen too many army marriages go on the rocks. Monica's a swell sweetheart—to bring to the dances and all that—but marriage lasts a long time."

"And so does life," sighed Lilla.

Gosh! What made her say things like that? About fifty years without Monica! Fifty years in bachelor quarters! Then he remembered the questionnaire.

"She's pretty, but I'm afraid she isn't very deep," he said, tossing the paper into his mother's lap and leaving the two women to ponder its contents.

And nothing was said during the rest of that day and the next. Donald had slipped back into the ways of his boyhood. It was fun to have mother serving the dishes she knew he liked, and doing things for him.

THEN on his last night at home Lilla slipped into his room after mother had left. She planted herself on the foot of the bed and rested her chin on her knees.

"So you think Monica isn't very bright," she accused. "Which just goes to show how stupid men can be."

"What do you mean—how stupid men can be?" Donald demanded.

"I don't believe she would marry you on a bet. A girl like that tied to a fellow without a sense of humor! Didn't you see what she was doing when she answered that questionnaire you were idiot enough to ply her with?"

"I—I didn't half read it," Donald fumbled.

"Well, here it is. Look it over. Surely you didn't expect her to answer the thing seriously. You were too dull to see that she's clever. When she classified Dante with the inventors, she knew that he had invented a man who could love one woman all his life. The poets are singers—like Caruso—idle singers of an empty day. A girl is pretty astute when she knows that there isn't any real difference between reformers and performers. If Al Capone isn't an explorer, I don't know who is. Monica was being funny, and her audience didn't know how to laugh."

Donald glanced at the paper and smiled.

"You win, sis," he admitted.

Lilla softened at once. Donald knew his older sister well enough to be sure that she could not continue being hard where he was concerned.

"You know what I think of you, Don," she said. "You look like Richard Barthelmess—only more so. You have a lot of that thing that made Valentino the young girl's dream. There's even a cleft in your chin that's just right for heroes."

Donald rubbed the offending spot. Lilla could have spared him mention of it.

"You're good looking, and you have ability—and you don't give people the impression that you know it. Perhaps that's just what's the matter with you—the well-known inferiority complex. If you love Monica, for goodness sake marry her if she'll have you. In the first place, I'm interested in your happiness, and in the second, I'm a believer in eugenics."

When Lilla left, Donald went to sleep as quickly as he could. He wanted to be spared the problem his sister's words again set in motion.

THE next day he was feeling exceedingly sheepish when Monica met him at the landing field nearest her home. He knew that Lilla had been right. Monica was clever—clever enough not to change the role of utter innocence and ignorance which she had been playing.

"Don't you want to drive?" she asked as she walked with him toward the car. "Most men do, and I rather like it."

Donald was angered by her play acting. His mother would have taken the wheel without a question. This was Monica's car. Why shouldn't she drive it? Nevertheless, he slid under the wheel. As he stepped on the starter and threw the motor in gear he felt masculine and possessive. Then he stopped the car and turned to face Monica.

"Look here," he said. "Why don't you tell me that I've been a fool and done with it? You know I'm in love with you, that I'm going through hell trying to keep from asking you to marry me because I'm afraid of the responsibility. But I—I can't go to Hawaii without you."

But Monica merely laughed.

"The hero breaks down in the last act," she said. "That's not in character. All these histrionics wouldn't have been at all necessary if you'd broken down sooner, for I haven't the least idea of going to Hawaii. I really don't like warm climates—winter furs are entirely too becoming to me. I'm sorry, Don, that all your struggles against my charms have been useless. I could have prevented them if you had given me the chance. But a girl can't refuse to marry a man till he's asked her. Now let's forget that you've proposed and that I've turned you down and have a good time while you're my guest. How about taking me for a ride in your plane? I've never been up."

Though Donald's teeth left their marks upon his lips, he started the car in silence. It was perhaps three minutes before he agreed to take Monica into the air.

"It's against the rules," he said, "but I'll chance it. We're miles from anybody who might report me. But you'll have to wear one of my uniforms and strap on a parachute. You don't mind looking grotesque just once, do you?"

"Always ready for a new experience," Monica replied.

But Monica was not at all grotesque in the borrowed uniform. Donald thought that she resembled one of Shakespeare's heroines disguised as a page. Only a jack-leg mechanic was guarding the landing field.

"Mum's the word," Donald said as he handed the fellow a bill. "I'll be a candidate for demotion if my commanding officer finds I've taken up a civilian."

The man grinned reassuringly.

"I've known Miss Monica too long," he said, "to get her boy friend in trouble."

Then Donald addressed his attentions to the parachute.

"There isn't any use for me to wear that thing," Monica protested. "I'd rather crash than attempt to jump."

"But this new model has never failed to work," said Donald. "I've tried one myself."

"All right," Monica agreed. "I'll let you adjust it. What a comfort to know it's guaranteed. I suppose if it doesn't open I can take it back and get a new one in its place?"

"Sure thing," said Donald.

THEN he helped Monica into the rear seat and climbed in front. The plane made a smooth ascent. He would be careful not to give Monica any unnecessary thrills. After all, whatever she thought of him, he loved her.

He reached back and covered her hands with one of his. She was not sitting with her eyes closed as his mother had done the first time Donald took her up. Pretty good sport—this girl he would have to leave in the States when he set out for Honolulu. Donald cut off the engine.

"Have you had enough?" he asked.

"No, I like it."

Then he sped on, driving in circles, for it would be just as well not to explore unknown territory. As he banked the plane for a turn, he watched Monica. She was entirely unconcerned. She trusted his flying. The realization that there was no reason why she shouldn't gave Donald new courage.

"You've got to marry me," he called above the roar of the engine. "If you want to cling, I'm the oak that can't be hurt by the mistletoe. If you want pretty clothes, I'll buy them for you. When are you going to marry me?"

"Never," screamed Monica. "I'm not looking for an oak, and I'm sort of tired of clothes."

"Then Hawaii will suit you. I'm not interested in mistletoe, all you'll need to wear will be a bathing suit or beach pajamas. If you don't say when, I'll do a barrel roll."

"Go ahead," Monica yelled. "I'd just as soon die one way as another."

Donald came out of the roll and looked back. What a girl! Monica was laughing.

"Say you'll marry me, or I'll do a leaf flutter and come out of it in a nosedive just above the cemetery."

"You couldn't choose a better place for an accident. I won't marry you."

Donald fluttered and dove. He could hear Monica's voice above the clatter.

"Isn't it a pity," she was calling, "that I don't want to be an aviator's wife, for I have all the qualifications?"

Manifestly, she was not to be intimidated. So Donald contented himself with a little banking and a few minutes of smooth flying. When he fell into an air pocket, Monica was unmoved. He was about to give up in despair when the engine emitted a strange sound, followed by the odor of something burning. A point of flame circled around the engine. There had been an explosion. The motor was on fire. Donald reached for the fire extinguisher, pumped it furiously and looked for a landing place. Beneath him lay the river, the cemetery and wooded places. He turned the plane in the direction of the landing field. It was no use. The flames were leaping higher. He feared that he could not reach the field in time. All the while there had been no sound from Monica.

"You'll have to jump!" he screamed. "Count five before you pull the ring."

"You jump first," she called back.

"Jump, I tell you. I'll follow!" he yelled.

THEN Donald's heart seemed to stop beating. Monica was obeying him. He closed his eyes and prayed. Then he peered over the side of the plane. The parachute had opened. Monica was floating through space.

He was nearing the field. Perhaps he could make the landing and save the plane. He drove on at full speed, fighting the fire leaving a trail of flame and smoke behind him. Down he came near the hangar at the edge of the field. The mechanic had seen the fire. He was ready with the hose. Donald leaped out and grabbed the nozzle.

"Buckets of water," he commanded.

The mechanic obeyed. In a few moments the fire was conquered. Only the motor had been injured.

"Monica!" Donald sobbed. "We've got to find Monica."

"There she is," said the mechanic, pointing toward the car that stood waiting. Monica threw down the trailing parachute and waved as she climbed in. Then she left the field at a furious rate of speed.

"Miss Monica's got sense," said the mechanic. "She ain't the kind to get her boy friend in no trouble."

In a few minutes it seemed that the whole countryside had arrived. People gathered around the plane, examining the damage that had been done, while Donald dazedly answered the questions. His mind had not begun to function when Monica returned. As she pushed her way through the crowd, Donald saw that she was wearing a sports costume.

"We saw the flames from the house," she said. "My, but I'm glad you're not hurt! Now you'll have to stay over till the plane's repaired. Climb in and I'll take you home."

Donald had no thought of disobeying. It was as though he had heard the voice of his mother. He was glad that Monica kept the wheel of the car, for he was tired, blindly, unreasonably tired.

"You're pretty spunky, pretty resourceful!" he said, smiling wearily. "I'll say you have a brain."

"Pretty creaky with rust, though. That just happened to be one of the times I used it, one of the times when the thing worked."

Donald slunk into the corner of the seat. It had been easy enough to be arrogant and commanding when his hand had confidently held the stick. Now Monica at the wheel, he felt subdued and inconsequential. Obviously, under the circumstances he couldn't force Monica to marry him and he couldn't find persuasive words to use in argument. It was just a case of a fool's paying the price of his folly.

"It's going to be lonesome in Hawaii," he said hopelessly.

"That isn't at all the way I feel about it," Monica contradicted. "We'll meet a lot of officers and their wives right away."

"We?" gasped Donald.

"Why, we, of course! Who else? You don't suppose for a minute I'd trust you out there by yourself, do you? One of those silly little natives might not know how to use a parachute or to get out of the way before somebody reported you for taking up a civilian. When a man's depended upon a competent woman as long as you have, he should have one around."

"I'll say he should!" Donald echoed.

Suddenly he was not too weary to pull on the emergency brake and take Monica in his arms.

The Junior Post.
SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST
WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 15, 1933.

IMPORTANT TOPICS AWAITING OUR CONTRIBUTORS

January, February and March Are Rich in Events and Anniversaries

Dear Post Boys and Girls: It is so encouraging to note how the writers and artists and poets of The Junior Post keep up with events and observe the various dates which have to do with the history of this country, and the world, and the lives of the men and women who have made history.

This month, January 19, we have, of course, the birthdays of two notable sons of the Southland—Robert E. Lee and Edgar Allan Poe. We hope that we will get some good stories of these notable men this week, so that we can publish them on January 22. We also want to keep February dates in mind, so that we can properly celebrate all the important dates in that month in The Junior Post.

Of course, we have St. Valentine's Day on February 14. We always have so many nice contributions of drawings, poems and stories for this issue. This year we want to make it better than ever.

Other important dates in February are the birthdays of George Washington, February 22; the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, February 12, and, of course, of Susan B. Anthony, who was the pioneer woman worker for woman's suffrage.

In the meantime, we must not forget that great 4th of March, or inauguration, number of The Junior Post, which will have to be printed on the Sunday before, February 26. We will be able to use news stories and little incidents of the inauguration a week after the 4th of March, too. And we will give a prize of $1 for a true story of the great events on that day, and a prize of $1 for the best picture actually drawn on inauguration day.

But the real inauguration number will be issued on February 26; so be sure to send in your contributions a full week before that time. The sooner the better, because the big presses that print The Junior Post and The Washington Post will be humming all week getting ready to give the people of Washington and the Nation the best story of the inauguration, the new administration and past administration and inauguration days possible to print.

Remember, Post Boys and Girls, that the boys and girls of the city are hosts to the new people who are coming to run the Government and all the visitors who will be here on inauguration day. We must all do what we can to be as friendly as friendly can be, so that we may uphold the fame and glory of our beautiful Capital City. EDITOR THE JUNIOR POST.

Auction.

Hammer pounding, voices ringing,
clamor in the air—
"Come, folks, who'll pay a little more?"
The auctioneer cries until they offer
here and there,
And slowly, the bids begin to soar.

"To the highest bidder goes this house,
it's a fine one, too,"
So the sale goes on, and I pause awhile
Thinking of the ones that house
once sheltered, the life it knew,
The tears, the joys within its rooms,
the trials.

And my heart is filled with pity for those who have to go
From their dear home to some strange, new trail.
Ah, life, indeed it must be very hard for those who know
Their home must be put up for public sale.

The Leaving of the Birds.

Now that winter's on its way
The buds will leave their joyous play
And make their homes, to stay
Till spring comes back again.

They gather here in happy flocks,
Away to their winter homes they fly
Over rivers and fields and docks
Till spring comes back again.

The Blue Jay.

As I look outside my window
On a bright sunny day
I see a little Blue Jay pass by
And this is what he seemed to say.

Jay, Jay, Jay, he chirped.
As he flew into a tree
And I whistled back to him
He seemed to listen with much glee.

When the winter comes, Blue Jay,
Do you not get very cold?
I think my pretty Blue Jay
You must be very bold.

As I am told pretty Blue Jay
You are related to the Crow
Do you and your relation
Fly down into winter's snow?

O Welcome Showers

O welcome! Showers that drive
Toward this thirsty earth,
Whose feverish, parched lips
Upturned, did beseech thy aid;
Whose strength was being sapped,
Whose very life did fade.
We thank thee heartily!

O welcome! Showers that splash
And trickle upon this earth,
Whose thirst-quenched throat
Is succulent once more,
Whose very eyes glisten.
We are thankful for
Your invigorating power.

O welcome! Showers that cease
To sprinkle on this earth,
Whose breath is now quickened,
Whose heart is now beating,
Light with gleeful mirth.
Won't you, when she is needy,
Return, O welcome showers?

Theodore Roosevelt.

It was around election time, when, on October 27, 1858, in New York City, a tiny baby was born who was destined to become one of the world's greatest men. This baby was Theodore Roosevelt.

As a child Roosevelt was not hardy or robust. He could never associate with boys in their rougher forms of play, being of the delicate type. Theodore made his own world, and though of a very amiable nature he always came back to this world of imaginative characters. He greatly admired the heroes of old, and had a strong desire to become like them.

For his beautiful Southern mother, and understanding father, Roosevelt had the greatest amount of respect, bestowing upon them all the love of his being.

After graduating from Harvard College in the June of 1880, Roosevelt entered politics in a quiet manner; but attained honors, as the people learned that he could put much fire in his speeches, when roused. Gradually Roosevelt worked his way to the position of Governor of New York State. The people took notice of this man, who was so kind and smooth, yet so determined.

The people remembered his notable work during the Spanish-American War, and for that cause he was nominated as Vice President, with McKinley on the Republican ticket; and elected. McKinley being assassinated, Roosevelt could hardly believe that he was the President of the United States. It seemed a stupendous task to undertake, but he did, and made an excellent job of it.

His people looked up to him—their leader. They trusted him as he did them. To everyone he was just, "Teddy" Roosevelt, and he knew his people well.

His children loved him, respected him, and together they played just as boys. Roosevelt was so human, one that could grin at defeat in a sporting way.

He has gone on, but his name stirs the heart of every American citizen. He is the idol of every boy.

A man who believed in honesty, sincerity and a square deal. A man that feared God, and took his own part. A man that believed in hard work, and honest sport; and lastly, a man that had room only for loyalty to the American people. That noble personage was Theodore Roosevelt.

A Winter Night.

Everything was still save the sound of the wind. It whistled around the house and swayed the treetops, creating a low, moaning sound. Winter's icy wand had been waved over Mother Earth changing her back into a large white blanket of snow, which she generously spread everywhere. A full moon, shining down, transformed the earth into many gems.

Robert Louis Stevenson.

Robert Louis Stevenson was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1850. He spent much of his childhood in bed, because he had poor health. He could not run about and play like other children. His mother read to him stories from books, which he loved to hear. His devoted nurse, Allison Cunningham, kept him alive by her tender care.

As Stevenson grew older he was about to take a course in the Edinburgh University to study engineering. He lived much of the time in a beautiful country home.

Stevenson's brain was filled with images of mountain, moor and sea isles.

Stevenson wrote the tale of "Treasure Island." He also wrote many other stories and poems.

Stevenson and his wife and stepson, Lloyd Osbourne, moved to the Samoan Island, in the south Pacific Ocean, where he regained his health. But soon, in 1894, while talking on the veranda of his house, he had a stroke of apoplexy, and he never recovered consciousness. The natives, who loved him so well, carried his body to Mount Vaea, and buried it there.

The Pets' Corner

EDITED BY DING-HOW OF HYDE-GREE.

(Mascot of The Junior Post.)

Bow, wow, wow! Guess what I found on my desk. A letter from Mr. Tweet, written in his best Canary Island style. Mr. Tweet says we spelled his name with an "s" last week. Well, I never, bow, wow, wow! What is an "s" between friends anyhow? Just think of the publicity we have given that bird, anyway. Mr. Tweet says he wants it understood that, although he has lived on the Canary Island in the course of his travels in search of new notes from her song portfolio all over the world, his people are not named after those islands at all. Not at all. Bow, wow, wow!

Mr. Tweet has a pretty good time in his golden bungalow looking at the view from Emily's window, so we will not ignore his complaints. Bow, wow, wow, wow! He says he is making up a song for the inauguration and that Mr. Donkey approves it. It is funny how friendly Mr. Tweet has suddenly grown with the donkey when he bragged so much about the way Mr. Elephant can swing around his trunk. Anyway, both of them belong to the Pets' Corner. So we will still be popular before and after March 4.

Sandy Gordon is putting on airs again just because he has had his suit cleaned and pressed and the Judge admired him. I understand he forgot some of the Judge's papers the other day and that the evidence before the honorable court shows that he was guilty of willful neglect of responsibilities which he voluntarily took upon himself. Bow, wow, wow. You see how an editor can use language when he wants to put a "bow, wow, wow" in it. Everybody must know I am an editor. The Honorable Mrs. Plum Tree Pekingese, who lives with the nice lady down at the corner, says she tells everybody that she knows me. Of course I liked her Christmas card very well, but Sandy's was selected by the Honorable Court and all the assistants, and has much more of a legal look.

The Honorable Daisy and Spider and the Honorable Great Mongul Mike Great Dane are now as busy as they can be getting ready for spring and to see that everything goes just right about them. Mike says he forgets so much he has bought a note book to record everything that should be done, said or is said or done. He will let an editor read it. I would write it off on my typewriter for him and never say a word if he has any words misspelled. Of course Daisy and Spider never spell words incorrectly, for they can always ask Emily.

Dear Ding-How: I want to introduce myself. My name is Buster. I am a German police dog. Bingo is my playmate. We are either eating, sleeping, fighting or playing, so I am not lonesome. My mother is always asleep, so there is no hope for her. Hoping to be seeing much of you I am Your new-made friend,

BUSTER.

(Henry Bernard, Bethesda, Md.)

Dear Ding-How: Have you had a nice Christmas? Was Santa Claus good to you? He brought me a whole stocking full of goodies. He brought me a big blue bow ribbon and mittens to match my blue eyes. He came to see Tomy and Happy, too. I must close now.

BET.

(Charlotte Wilson Rea.)

Dear Ding-How: I'll write you a few lines while I have time. I have been very busy singing Christmas carols this week. And I have a nice fresh lettuce leaf to eat. Chee, chee.

I watch for your picture in the Pets' Corner every Sunday. I'll have to hury and eat this lettuce before my mistress comes in. Just.

HAPPY.

(Charlotte W. Rea.)

Crozet, Va.

Dear Ding-How. How are you? Fine I hope, the same as I. I haven't written to you for a long time, but Lindy tells you all the news around here and then there isn't anything left for me to write, is it?

I always read all the letters from the pets and they are very entertaining. I enjoy them, too.

Bow-wow-wow! I had a real Christmas dinner on Christmas day, but I didn't get sick. No not me!

Lindy sends his love to you. He said he would write, instead of me, next time. Well, I'll sign off with a loud bow-wow-wow.

NELLIE.

Memories.

Sweet, refreshed thoughts of bygone hours,
When youthful hearts beat light and gay,
Are just some visions of the dark,
Leading not to golden day,
But where the fount of times of yore
Spouts rapturously forevermore,
Scatters waters o'er the mind,
Brings back days long left behind.

The Iliad and the Odyssey.

The Iliad and the Odyssey, which deal with civilization before the dawn of history, are two of the oldest poems in the world.

It is doubtful that these two epics were written by Homer, as men began records of their thoughts and imagination after the poems themselves disappeared. Both poems, consisting of 24 parts each and related to the Trojan War, tell how Helen was carried off from Menelaus by Paris; and the ten-years' war. Most of these are legends but they have convinced modern writers and have become part of our literature.

Men have given a great deal of their lives to its problems, and libraries have been written about the poems ascribed to Homer's name and Homer himself.

George Washington.

George Washington, his glory we hold.
His spirit so strong, his nature so bold,
His kindness and love are a few of his deeds,
Ready to help his people in need.

The war came on, he was ready to conquer,
Hamilton there as a faithful sponsor.
Many a battle was fought in ice and snow,
Tragedies of Valley Forge we'll never know.

Dawn came and as they awoke
There still was that lasting spark of hope.
After all the suffering and sleepless nights,
Washington's men were there and eager to fight.

What did he do when he was losing men?
Did he give up or go at it again?
He finished through until they won,
That was our President Washington.

Washington our leader stands
Through the country and the lands.
Though he's gone we ne'er forget,
His memory refined is kept.

Upon his people he did depend;
They in return relied on him;
And so our leader stands today,
O'er the country wide.
Long his soul will stay,
Though Washington has died.

Dear Editor: I am inclosing a strip drawing, which I hope you will like and publish. Thanks for publishing my drawings in the past.

THELMA PETTITT (age 16).
12 Military road, Cherrydale, Va.

Dear Editor: I am going to send in a picture of Easter. I hope to see it published, and also many thanks for publishing my last picture. As I am very deeply interested in your little paper.

With many wishes and the best of luck to our little paper, yours, sincerely,

KATHERINE TAYLOR (age 12.)

Dear Editor: I always enjoy The Junior Post and appreciate your kindness in using my drawings. Many of the names of the different contributors are familiar to me and I eagerly look for them each Sunday.

I go to St. Joseph's H. S. in Emmitsburg, which is a boarding school. Some of my drawings have been sent from there. Emmitsburg is about ten miles this side of Gettysburg. Our campus is beautiful.

I am inclosing a drawing for the Epiphany (the coming of the Wise Men), entitled "The Three Gifts." I hope you will be able to use it. I never fail to get a thrill out of seeing my drawings in the paper.

Very sincerely yours,

PATRICIA HARTMAN.

Dear Editor: Thanks for publishing my last picture and letter to Ding-How from "Bet." I am sending some of my drawings which I made during the Christmas holidays. I hope they will find space in our Junior Post.

I'll close, hoping you will have more luck in 1933 than ever. I am,

CHARLOTTE W. REA.

Kitty, Eunice and the Dog.

It was a bright afternoon, when Kitty and Eunice were skating in front of their yard.

They had been skating for 20 minutes when mother called, "Kitty, come here a minute." The two girls skated quickly up the walk to the steps, where they took off their skates and then went into the house.

"Children," said mother, "I want you to go down to Aunt Mary's for me." The girls skipped happily down the street to Aunt Mary's.

As they reached the yard, Eunice fell down on the hard cement walk. "Oh!" she began to cry, "I have hurt my hand." Kitty helped her up and wiped her tears away.

Just then, Aunt Mary came to the door to see what had happened. She saw Eunice crying, and Kitty holding her hand.

"What has happened?" she asked.

"I-I f-e-l-l d-o-w-n," cried Eunice.

"Dont cry," said Aunt Mary, "I'll bandage your hand. Come right in." Aunt Mary bandaged her hand, and in a few minutes she was all right.

Aunt Mary was making cookies. She gave the girls some before they started home. They didn't stay long, because they were anxious to go and skate.

On their way home they saw a little dog out in the street. It looked as if it were lost. Kitty called it to her and spoke very kindly to it. The little dog began to wag its tail, and in its eyes shined a gleam of happiness.

The girls knew that it was lost by the way it acted. But they didn't know whether they should take it home or not.

They left it because they thought it might belong to some one in town. They walked slowly up the street, still looking back at the dear doggie.

They had gone a long ways when they saw the little dog running behind them. They were glad because they thought it was so cute, and besides, they didn't have a dog.

When they got home they showed it to their mother and asked if they might keep it. She thought it was so cute and she let the girls keep it and then bought a harness and a house for it, too. Kitty, Eunice and the dog were happy ever after.

How to Make Your Own Lace For Valentines

For your hand-made valentines, which you wish to be made entirely by your own hands, it is nice to make the lace also. This you can do and thus carry out your own ideas and designs, adding a note of originality. Take a piece of plain paper, cut to follow the lines of the valentine, but of smaller area, scallop the edges and cut out the center in the desired shape, which makes a window for the central picture of the valentine. Fold the paper exactly in two, matching the edges. Now lightly sketch on one half the objects you wish in your designs, such as flowers, stars, hearts, leaves, shields, Knighthood emblems, circles, diamonds; in fact, any decorative object which strikes your fancy.

Now connect each object by means of penciled bars so that when you cut around the objects you will leave these connecting bars to make your lace pattern, and hold the objects in your design together. It is well, also, to pencil a border or edge to your lace. The objects can easily connect with the border. Next, with your paper folded evenly in half (so that one cutting will do both sides), take sharply pointed small scissors and cut around the outlines, in between the objects, remembering not to cut through the little connecting bars.

You can cut both sides of the paper at once by holding the two layers closely together. With patience and care a very effective decoration can be made in this way. You may also embellish the objects on the lace by further designing. A very gorgeous effect can be achieved by painting over your lace with gilt, silver paint or any of the beautiful metallic paints now on the market.

The New Teacher.

"Say, Lucy," said John Brown to his sister as they hurried toward the schoolhouse. "Did you know we are going to have a new teacher?

"Why, no, John!" answered Lucy, in surprise. "I didn't know it."

"Miss West was called to Florida on the illness of her mother, and will not return until March," said John.

"What do you suppose she will look like?" asked Lucy.

"I don't know," replied John. "I hope she will be the nice, gentle kind, not the grouchy kind."

Just then the school bell rang and the children had to hurry to their classes. When John and Lucy reached their classroom all the children began talking about the new teacher.

"I suppose she will be the proud kind, with glasses," said one of the boys.

"Or the cross kind that always accuses the children of something they haven't done," mumbled another boy. But the girls were not so fussed up about it as the boys.

"My mother knows her," said one of the girls.

"So does mine," said another girl, "but she never said anything about how she looks."

Just then the door of the classroom opened. The principal came in, followed by a lady. The boys were nearly knocked out of their seats and stared with wide-open mouths and eyes. The girls were so surprised, for the teacher was not like the children expected her to be.

"Pupils," said the principal, "Miss West was called away by the illness of her mother, and will not teach any more until March, so we have engaged a new teacher for you. Her name is Miss Adams, and she will teach until Miss West returns."

The new teacher was a young lady, about 23 or 24. She smiled kindly at her new pupils, and then spoke to the principal.

"I am sure I will love my work," she said, "and I know the children will study hard and try to do their best."

"And you know," said Lucy to her mother that afternoon, "she is the sweetest thing. She makes our lessons seem easy. Why, the boys said she'd probably be a haughty and proud teacher, with not a bit of interest in her work."

"I have met Miss Adams," said her mother, "and I find her a very charming young lady."

"Well," said John the next day, "how do you like the new teacher?"

"I think she is the best teacher we ever had!" replied his sister.

Games for Your Valentine Party

VALENTINE GAME.

Supply each guest with a piece of paper and pencil and then give out a word connected with St. Valentine's day, such as valentine, matrimony, happiness, Cupid, heart, &c. Allow ten minutes, during which the guests must make as many words from the given word as possible. When the time is up, collect the papers. The one having the most words wins a little prize.

* * * *

ROMANCE TITLES.

Give each guest a piece of paper and a pencil, and tell him to draw a picture representing the title of some well known romance. After the drawings are completed, they are passed around. Each person writes down his guess as to what book is represented. When all have had a chance to guess all titles, the correct titles are read. The one having the most right should receive a book of love stories as a prize.

* * * *

CUPID IS COMING.

The guests seat themselves about the room. The host stands in the center and says: "Cupid is coming! How much is he coming?" The first child must answer with an adverb beginning with A, such as ambling, or amiably, or something else. The next one gives another adverb beginning with A, and so on around the circle. Then they give adverbs beginning with B, then C and so on. Anyone failing to give an adverb pays a forfeit.

Spring Drive Started for New Members in Knighthood

THE JUNIOR POST AIRSHIP

"I feel sad this morning," said the pilot, as he tuned up the airship to take the editor on the weekly tour of the world in order to bring back news of world happenings to the members of The Junior Post Writers Club and the Knighthood of Youth. "The death of former President Calvin Coolidge is a great loss to the Nation, the world, and to those of us in Washington who knew him when he was President and respected him. He used to come to the flying field for occasions and ask all kinds of questions about aviation, which showed he was 'air conscious,' although he was never a flier, of course. A fine American simple man."

"That is a great tribute for a young man," said the pilot. "I am sure the family of Calvin Coolidge would like to hear what you and other young men of your age say."

"There goes Admiral Cary T. Grayson on his way to arrange for the inauguration," said the pilot as they soared over the Washington Building and saw the chairman of the inaugural committee hastening in to start the work which will make this inauguration a notable one, despite that it is to be one of the simplest in our history. It is always a great sight, anyway, to see the solemn procession up our great Appian Way, Pennsylvania avenue. All the Presidents I have ever seen after their inauguration looked thoughtful indeed, although, of course, smiling and happy at the great honor conferred on them. It is a great task to direct the destinies of the people of the United States, and I have felt that any man called to the Presidency of the United States always gives his heart and thought and his best effort to his work."

"Getting to be quite an orator," said the editor. "I know you are right. I am glad they are going to have an inaugural ball, too. It brings many people to our beautiful city and all of us like to see the great pageant of men in uniforms and women in handsome gowns and glittering jewels. I have purchased seats on the grandstands for my boys and girls this early for the parade because I want them to have a good place to view that historic event. The seats are all to be covered this year so there will be no danger of any one getting wet as they did at the Hoover inauguration. That was a bad day all right. I remember one that was even more inclement, the inauguration of William Howard Taft, when we had a real blizzard and the horse and carriage carrying President Taft had to make its way through snow-swept streets hastily cleaned for the occasion, and many people on the way to Washington were held up in the train on account of the blizzard. And cold! It was a cold day and how the wind did 'howl' down Pennsylvania avenue.

"I am looking forward to meeting him when he comes to Washington," said the editor, as they saw the poet laureate of Great Britain and Mrs. John Masefield disembarking from the Mauretania at the port of New York. "I have always been fond of his poetry, and was glad when King George and Queen Mary appointed him poet laureate. It is a great honor, for just think of the wonderful poets who have held this post, including Tennyson."

As they flew over the Metropolitan Opera House in New York they looked into one skylight to see a woman conductor, Antonia Brice, and the 200-piece symphony orchestra, which she led at a concert, in the opera house.

Then on and on over the Atlantic Ocean, over France, where they saw many groups of citizens discussing the war debts France owes to the United States and saw some French people themselves delivering money to the American Embassy because they believed that France should pay her debts just as people should pay their debts.

Then they went to Italy to get a glimpse of Premier Mussolini, whom the pilot and the editor always find interesting. They had to circle about a bit to find Il Duce, as the Italian people call him, but at last saw him at the head of a group of men walking around in the town of Littoria, Italy's new city reclaimed from the marshes. It is to house 500 factories and 10,000 people.

Successes in Life Are Best Attained By Orderly Ways

How many of us dreamily plan great deeds and acts and tasks magnificently performed, but stop at the dreams. Do not put off things. If you have a task to perform, do it as soon as it is possible. Tomorrow has never been as good as today, if the task can be performed today. Tomorrow will develop tasks of its own. The first thing you know you will have the tasks of so many yesterdays piled up that you will not be able to do the tasks of today or prepare for those of tomorrow.

The true member of the Knighthood of Youth performs the tasks at hand when the time comes. Do not neglect one duty on the ground that you have another to perform, choosing the most pleasant and least necessary one.

Learn to love an orderly life. The boys and girls of the Knighthood of Youth are not too young to cultivate this habit. The lives of orderly people, of course, run smoother than those of other people because the machinery of living is in good working condition.

Even so-called temperamental people, like poets and artists, usually lead orderly lives if they expect to get anything done. They may appear to idle, but you ask any one who has made a success of life. He will tell you that he has made a habit of spending so many hours a day at work or in perfecting himself for higher accomplishments.

Boys and Girls Up To 12 Years Old Are Asked to Join

So pleased are the members of the Knighthood of Youth staff of The Washington Post at the success of their New Year's drive for new members of the Knighthood of Youth that they are starting right in again and starting a spring drive for new members. Thus more and more boys and girls will join this Nation-wide organization of boys and girls up to the age of 12 years before the summer comes.

If you are interested, write or come into the office of Knighthood of Youth in The Washington Post Building and learn all about it. Better still, if you have friends who are members of the knighthood get them to tell you about it.

The Knighthood of Youth is a Nation-wide organization of boys and girls up to the age of 12 years who want to cultivate good habits of living and form ideals or to correct bad habits in themselves. One of the quickest way to correct a fault is to realize that you possess it. A member of the Knighthood of Youth in the habit of being late for school will carefully remind himself of this fault and do the best he can to correct it. Like the knights of old the members of the knighthood are constantly crusading to develop good purposes in living and to slay the dragons of forgetfulness and kindred faults which lie across the pathway of their lives and habits.

Home of a Sailor.

Arched high above us
That azure dome,
Rippling around us
The sea—our home;
Bright waves, white-capped
With bubbling foam—
Soft murmuring ocean,
O'er thee we roam.

Dark gulls are painted
Against the sky,
Skimming the water
As we pass by;
White clouds above us
Floating on high—
Beautiful universe
Of sea and sky!

MARY SMALL (age 16).

Winter Skies.

Beyond the hills I see,
Some deep outlines
Of a ship at sea,
Or a garden with bowing pines,
Or sometimes a castle it may be.
And in the evening late,
They slowly change their hue.
I watched by the backyard gate,
As they changed to purple from blue.
Then up in the sky I see
The moon and the evening star
Shining through the cypress tree,
Here, there and afar.
Then in the heavens later on,
A million stars there seem to be.
They will shine and shine till dawn
Over you and me.

THE STORY BOOK LADY

"Mother wants us to find out all we can about good books on historic spots in and around Washington, so we can be able to talk intelligently to our cousins when they come from California for the inauguration and really know how to show them about," said Alice, as she hurried along with Anne and Pearl to meet the Story Book Lady and the members of The Junior Post Writers Club and the Knighthood of Youth for the weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land.

"That is a very good idea," said William, who had caught up with the girls, as he started along with Paul and Ernest. "Anyway, inauguration time or not, it is interesting to know about the historic spots in Washington. Father takes us about every week and tells us all about them. I have been using these trips to help me out with my essays at school."

"Well," said the Story Book Lady, when they met her in the park as she stood waiting for the rest of the members of The Junior Post Writers Club and the Knighthood of Youth to come up, "I am glad you have been discussing that. It will be a good idea to read up on those subjects and we will keep a sharp lookout for such books today."

"We are going to have guests for the inauguration too," said Mr. Gnome, who keeps the gate of the Fairy Tale Bridge that leads to Story Book Land. "Cousins of ours who dwell in the Catskill Mountains are direct descendants of the little mountain men you read about in 'Rip Van Winkle.' Blick, Flick and Little Mick, my grandsons, will have new suits so they can be dressed up all the time to take their guests about to see the sights of Washington."

"But," said Little Lillian, "I did not know that you ever walked about Washington, Mr. Gnome."

"Well," said Mr. Gnome, with a merry laugh, as he flung open wide the gate of the Fairy Tale Bridge, "keep your eyes open and you will see lots of things in Washington you never knew were there." So Mr. Gnome and his three grandsons, Blick, Flick and Little Mick, all laughed merrily as they stood in a row with their green hats with the scarlet feathers on them in their hands and made deep bows.

"I wonder if the Story Book Fairy and Merry and Jolly, the Story Book Fairy Children, are coming to the inauguration, too," said Little Lillian as she hurried along with her hand in that of the Story Book Lady.

"Why, of course, we are, dear," said the Story Book Fairy, appearing suddenly in her golden airplane out of the Fairy Tale Forest, followed by Merry and Jolly, the Story Book Fairy Children, in their golden airplanes. "The Queen has a new robe of hope and happiness and we are all going to carry golden baskets of good luck and happiness confetti to scatter about. They are to be in the parade you know, riding in the famous humming bird parade."

"Oh, are you?" said little Lillian breathlessly. "I will look for you. But I never heard of fairies in an inaugural parade, and I am sure that even grandpa never saw them, for he never mentioned them in all the stories he told me."

"Well, keep your eyes open, perhaps you will see us," said the Story Book Fairy. "We will be there, but, of course, only bright-eyed little girls like you will be apt to spy us."

"Well, speaking of parades," said a boy at the end of a book street, "come right in and see what a real road is like and how full of adventure. I am Pete and I am in this book."

"We are glad to meet you, Pete," said the Story Book Lady as she led the way down the book street and put on her magic glasses. "Let me see!—'Romany Road, the Story of Pete Broekhaus, Thought to Have Been Kidnaped by the Gypsies,' by Irving Brown, with illustrations by M. J. Gallgher (Harrison Smith and Robert Haas, New York). Gypsies—we all love to read about them."

"Well, I have been told that American boys and girls like to read about me, too," said a very handsome youth at the end of another book street dressed in the manner of French gentlemen. "I am Young Lafayette."

"Of course, they do, we all do," said the Story Book Lady, hurrying to the book street followed by the boys and girls. "Let me see. Yes, this is a book called 'Young Lafayette' by Jeannette Eaton, with illustrations by Davis Hendrickson (Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston). It is a real story book, instructive and entertaining."

LATE AGAIN, PERRY WINKLE !! WELL, COME IN AND TAKE YOUR SEAT, YOUNG MAN !! WE'RE JUST ABOUT TO BEGIN OUR FIRST LESSON IN ANATOMY !!
OKAY, MISS PRIMP!
NOW THEN, CHILDREN, ANATOMY IS THE STUDY OF THE HUMAN BODY! WE'LL START WITH THE HEAD! CAN ANYONE TELL ME WHAT THE HEAD IS CALLED IN ANATOMY?
H'M! I THOUGHT YOU WOULDN'T KNOW IT !! WELL, BOYS AND GIRLS, THE HEAD IS CALLED THE CRANIUM !! NOW I WANT YOU ALL TO REMEMBER THAT !!
THAT WILL BE ALL FOR TODAY!! I WANT EVERY ONE OF YOU TO REMEMBER THE WORD "CRANIUM!" TOMORROW I SHALL EXPECT YOU ALL TO KNOW WHAT THE HEAD IS CALLED IN ANATOMY !!
THE NEXT DAY.
GEE, WHAT WAS THAT WORD TH' TEACHER AST US TO REMEMBER YESTERDAY?
DON'T ASK ME !! I COULDN'T REMEMBER IT !!
HI, FELLERS !!
AN' I SAT UP HALF TH' NIGHT THINKIN' TOO !!
GOSH, I NOT ONLY FORGOT TH' WORD, BUT I EVEN FORGOT TO REMEMBER THAT TH' TEACHER AST US NOT TO FORGET TO REMEMBER WHAT TH' DARNED WORD WAS !!
NOW WHAT ARE WE GONNA DO?
WE'RE GOIN' TO SCHOOL RIGHT AWAY, OR WE'LL ALL BE LATE — WORD OR NO WORD!
NOW CHILDREN, I WONDER HOW MANY OF YOU REMEMBER OUR ANATOMY LESSON YESTERDAY? I HOPE YOU HAVEN'T FORGOTTEN THAT WORD !!
WHAT! DO YOU MEAN TO SAY NOBODY IN THIS CLASSROOM KNOWS WHAT WE CALL THE HEAD IN ANATOMY, AFTER ALL I TOLD YOU YESTERDAY ??
WELL, I'LL GIVE YOU ALL A HINT !! THE WORD STARTS WITH THE LETTER "C" !!
TEACHER, I KNOW TH' WORD !!
COCONUT !!

THE GUMPS
WELL- LET'S SEE WHAT THE PAPER HAS TO SAY- IT SAYS ALL THE LEADING PHYSICIANS OF THE COUNTRY ARE OPPOSED TO WHIPPING IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS -
AND I KNOW ABOUT 40,000,000 SCHOOL KIDS THAT ARE OPPOSED TO IT ALSO - SIDNEY SMITH
IT SAYS HERE- PRUNE JUICE IS GOOD FOR WRINKLES- THAT'S ALL I WANT TO KNOW-
MIN - LOOK AT THIS HERE - BETTER SHOW THIS TO TILDA- THIS OUGHT TO INTEREST HER - IT SAYS PRUNE JUICE IS THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD TO REMOVE WRINKLES -
IF PRUNE JUICE IS SO BLAMED GOOD FOR WRINKLES- WHY- DON'T SOME OF THE OLD DRIED UP PRUNES USE SOME OF IT ON THEMSELVES - I'D LIKE TO KNOW?
HERE'S A HOT ONE - LISTEN TO THIS AD - HOW TO MAKE YOUR GLOVES AND SHOES LAST TWICE AS LONG - I'VE GOT AN ANSWER TO THAT - WEAR ONE AT A TIME -
BOY! - NO WONDER WE HAVE OUR TROUBLES IN THIS COUNTRY - HALF OF THE PEOPLE ARE DYING ON THEIR FEET - HERE IS A BIRD THAT HAS BEEN MISSING FOR SEVERAL DAYS AND THEY FIND HIM IN HIS LIBRARY WITH HIS NOSE BURIED IN A BOOK -
DID YOU READ ABOUT THE HORRIBLE ACCIDENT- CHESTER? IT SAYS HERE- A MAN WAS SEATED IN A WINDOW ON THE TWENTY-FIRST FLOOR OF ONE OF OUR TALLEST SKY SCRAPERS AND FELL WITHOUT INJURING HIMSELF - HE DIDN'T EVEN HAVE A SCRATCH ON HIM - HOW WAS THAT?
HE FELL INSIDE THE ROOM - JUST LIKE THE ACCIDENT I SAW THE OTHER DAY - A MAN WALKED RIGHT IN FRONT OF A BIG FREIGHT TRAIN THAT MUST HAVE BEEN GOING AT LEAST THIRTY MILES AN HOUR AND DIDN'T GET HURT - GEE - HOW DID THAT HAPPEN?
WHY - CHESTER - I THOUGHT YOU WERE SMARTER THAN TO ASK SUCH A QUESTION - CAN'T YOU GUESS? THE TRAIN WAS GOING BACKWARD -
HERE'S A SAD CASE - IT TELLS ABOUT A YOUNG MAN WHO HAS JUST BEEN SENT TO THE PENITENTIARY FOR THIRTY YEARS FOR A CRIME THAT HE COMMITTED - THINK OF IT - THE BEST PART OF A LIFE TIME -
JUST THINK OF IT - SERVING A SENTENCE OF THIRTY YEARS AT HARD LABOR - TO BE CONFINED BEHIND THOSE COLD-GRAY PRISON WALLS ALL OF THAT TIME - NEVER TO BE ALLOWED TO MIX WITH ANY OF HIS FRIENDS - WHAT KIND OF A MAN DO YOU THINK HE WILL BE WHEN HE GETS OUT OF JAIL?
WHAT KIND WILL HE?
AN OLD ONE!

WAIT TILL I GET MY SKATES.
LOOK WHIMPY — A POCKETBOOK!
GEE, I WONDER IF THERE'S A NAME IN IT?
FINDERS KEEPERS YOU KNOW SKEEZIX.
YES. HOW MUCH IN IT?
PUNK! SKEEZIX FOUND A POCKETBOOK. I DONT KNOW HOW MUCH IS IN IT BUT—NEVER MIND. I'LL FIND OUT.
LET'S SEE IF THERE'S ANYTHING IN THE LOST AND FOUND ADS.
I'M LOOKIN' FOR A POCKETBOOK I LOST. ANY OF YOU KIDS FIND IT?
WHAT WAS IT LIKE?
OH YOU DID HEY? SHOW IT TO ME AN' I'LL TELL YA IF IT'S THE ONE.
WAS IT BROWN AN' HAD $2.60 IN IT?
THAT'S IT.
NOPE. THE ONE WE FOUND WAS BLACK AN' THAT ISN'T WHAT WAS IN IT.
YOU WILL TRY TO KID PUNK HOOKER WILL YOU?
HE TOOK MY POCKETBOOK.
NO HE DIDN'T. LOOK, SKEEZIX. I HAD IT ALL THE TIME.
NOT THAT ONE. HE TOOK MINE AN' THERE'S ELEVEN CENTS IN IT!

DICK TRACY
by Chester Gould
DICK TRACY JR. IN HIS NEW CAP.
IN AN EFFORT TO "PUT THE INDIAN SIGN" ON TRACY, GANGLAND HAS IMPORTED ONE "STOOGE" VILLER, ACE PICKPOCKET AND SLIGHT OF HAND WIZARD, WHOSE ORDERS ARE TO RUIN THE DETECTIVE PROFESSIONALLY, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT IS DONE.
HAVE YOU GOT THE PHONEY MONEY?
YEAH— I'M ALL SET. S'LONG.
ONE HOUR LATER, DICK TRACY AND JUNIOR ENTER A DOWNTOWN ELEVATOR ON THEIR WAY TO A FIFTH FLOOR SHOP TO PURCHASE AN OVERCOAT FOR THE BOY. THEY PAY LITTLE ATTENTION TO THE OUT OF TOWN STRANGER IN THE REAR.
WITH UNBELIEVABLE SWIFTNESS, AS THE ELEVATOR LOADS UP, DEFT FINGERS HOLDING A RAZOR BLADE SLIT THE DETECTIVE'S OVERCOAT AND INSERT A PACKAGE OF BILLS BETWEEN THE CLOTH AND THE LINING..
THEN DURING THE JOSTLING ABOUT AS THE CAR STOPS AT ANOTHER FLOOR THE SAME HANDS SLIP OTHER BILLS INTO THE SIDE TROUSER POCKET.
TWENTY MINUTES LATER
YES - I THINK WE'LL TAKE THAT COAT — DOES IT SUIT YOU, JUNIOR?
I'LL SAY— CHEE! DIS IS DE KIND OF A COAT I ALWAYS WANTED.
GREAT SCOTT! HERE ARE SOME BILLS I DIDN'T EVEN KNOW I HAD! NOW JUST HOW??? OH WELL— I MUST HAVE MISCOUNTED MY DOUGH THIS MORNING — HERE YOU ARE.
SHALL I SEND THE OLD COAT OUT, SIR?
HEY YOU, I'M FROM HEADQUARTERS— I'M LOOKING FOR A COUNTERFEITER THAT'S SUPPOSED TO BE IN THIS BUILDING WITH A BOY PASSING OUT BAD MONEY. —— DID HE COME IN HERE?
IN HERE? A COUNTERFEITER? WITH A BOY? WHAT? WHY, I JUST SOLD HIM A COAT.
DOWNSTAIRS
YEAH — WE'LL TAKE THAT CAP— WELL, JUNIOR, YOU'RE PRETTY WELL FIXED NOW, EH?
CHEE— DIS IS SWELL, TRACY.
BETTER REPORT TO HEADQUARTERS ON THAT BILL — I'M GOING AFTER THAT GUY. WE PLAINCLOTHES MEN HAVE BEEN ON HIS TRAIL FOR A WEEK.
BROTHER— I'M TRACKING DOWN A COUNTERFEITER THAT'S WORKING WITH A BOY AND SUPPOSED TO BE PASSING PHONEY DOUGH IN THIS BUILDING —— HAVEN'T SEEN 'IM, HAVE YOU?
WORKING WITH A BOY? WELL FOR— I JUST WAITED ON HIM!
HELLO—CHIEF OF POLICE? MY NAME DOESN'T MATTER — BUT I JUST WANT TO TIP YOU OFF THAT YOUR ACE DETECTIVE, TRACY, IS CONDUCTING A LITTLE COUNTERFEIT RACKET ON THE SIDE. IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE ME, SEARCH HIM WHEN HE REPORTS IN CAN "STOOGE" VILLER'S TREACHERY POSSIBLY WORK? WE SHALL SEE...

A SAILBOAT CAN SAIL FASTER THAN THE WIND THAT DRIVES IT. . .

For a land where ice and snow are virtually unknown, people of Madeira, off the coast of Africa in the Atlantic, have chosen a strange mode of conveyance—the sled. The sleds slide over Madeira's cobblestone roadways on heavy runners. They are made in various styles to suit the needs of transportation.

On uphill roads the sleds are drawn by oxen, or in some mountain travel, by a cog road. The descent is by gravity over downhill trails and roads, with attendants running along to steer the vehicles and to keep them from running away. The descent from Terreiro da Lucta, a distance of four miles, is made in 20 minutes in this manner.

The lighter sleds are little more than a shallow box fixed on runners, but more pretentious styles have canopies and are equipped with curtains for the sides. One traveler described them as a cross between a bob-sled and a four-poster bed.

It is possible for a sail boat, particularly an ice boat, to travel faster than the wind that drives it, when the course of the boat is across the wind. Light sail boats may do this when moving at approximately right angles to the wind, if the sail is properly set for the greatest efficiency.

Camels from Egypt and Asia Minor were imported into the United States for use on the "great American desert" under an experiment sponsored by the United States War Department in 1856 and 1857. The advent of the Civil war halted the experiment, however, and the animals were turned loose in California, Arizona and Nevada, where they reverted to the wild state. They were frequently seen for several years until they were killed off or died from natural causes.

The price of paint governed the adoption of the "little red schoolhouse" as America's symbol of rural education. Red paint was cheaper than any other color, so the wooden schoolhouses were painted that color. Today there are more "little white schoolhouses" than little red schoolhouses.
